Beauty .... By Helen Jameson

(Copyright 1934 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Nature furnished the human hide with its own oiling machine. In every pore is a small gusher. When it and its neighbors behave properly, the cutaneous surface is smooth and velvety, texture fine and delicate. But it happens sometimes that the oil wells become ambitious, exude excessively and give to the feminine countenance a buttered look that is no beauty bargain for any woman.

Drying rinses respond favorably to the application of soothing creamy lotion. But oily ones pursue their course with a persistency that is nothing less than maddening. They never take a vacation. No matter what the season may be, they are just as baneful. The only way to correct this distasteful condition is to cover down to brass tacks, find out what it's all about, start a spirited campaign.

Through there are rubyful agents to be used externally, they can't be depended upon unless the supplicant for the dull flabbed complexion vespects certain hygienic rules. She should, first of all, keep to a balanced diet, not stoke up too freely on rich foods and pastries, get her daily allotment of green salads, vegetables and fruits. The less fat she eats, the better. Fats seem to excite the eliminating processes of the skin.

The daily bath is imperative to stimulate the work of the skin all over the body, releasing the delicate glands of the face from too arduous efforts.

Now for local treatment, in which the average woman has more faith and interest than the program of health.

It has been proved by beauty specialists that a saturate solution of boric acid causes the exudations to abate to a certain extent. Moreover a teaspoonful of powdered boric in a cupful of boiling water, apply when it has cooled.

Don't put it on when the skin is warm and glowing, or directly after the soapy cleansing. The best time for its application is in the morning after the face has been bathed with cold water. When the solution has dried on, give the skin surface a brisk ironing with an ice cube. Soap is necessary once a day, is best used at night.

Nix de-cologne is an effective oil fighter. Pour a few drops on a soft cloth, give the skin a dry cleansing.

When the face shines out like a good deed in a naughty world, a girl is positive that she must not use an oily cosmetic. She's wrong there. If the cream is thin or in liquid form, it will remove excessive grease. Heavy emollients will not do good. No cream should remain on overnight.

Pin your faith to a powder that is light of texture. Those heavy oily ones that impart the lovely porcelain effect enrage the sebaceous glands. A dry rouge is to be preferred to one with an oil base.

After the soapy cleansing, fill the washbowl with clear tepid water and rinse thoroughly.

Advice to the Lovelorn

SHE'S VERY SQUARE TO BE SO CANDID

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been going with a girl for about two months, though I have known her for nearly five years. Two years ago her family moved away, but this year they returned to the city. She told me that she is in love with a man whom she met while the family was away and that she cannot forget him.

It was mighty square of her to tell me all about this so that I could judge for myself. And she left it up to me to decide what to do. That is to say, to give her up or go on, with our affair, knowing all the time she is in love with someone else.

I shall be very glad of your advice,

A Reader.

Sometimes I am troubled about advising people against their own inclinations, more especially when in doing so I might appear to be unsympathetic. Whits you do not say that you love this girl, I take it that you do.

Now, as to my advice. If you do love this girl, and she loves someone else, it would be a very serious injustice to you both, if you persuaded her to marry you. In addition to this, you could get no happiness out of such a union. The answer is plain. Break off this association, either abruptly or by degrees. Seek happiness with someone who can give you the response that you have every right to expect in a wife.

Mother Driving Force Behind Armless Son

Story of Heroism of William Watson, Lawyer of Edmonton And of His Mother's Efforts to Give Him Useful Place in World Despite Big Handicap

MONTREAL, May 21.—(CP)—This is the tale of a man with courage. Not the kind of courage it takes to tackle three armed bank robbers single-handed. Or the kind it takes to plunge into the ocean after a drowning man. It is the story of a conquest over almost unbelievable odds—of a man, who has been without arms, since birth, yet who shaves, writes perfectly, runs a hundred things. All with his feet.

He is William R. Watson of Edmonton, in Montreal, to attend the convention of the International Society for Crippled Children. He wanted to see established in Canada vocational training schools for handicapped children. That is his aim in life.

You couldn't help admiring and liking Mr. Watson — from the time you enter his room and see him extend a toe for you to grasp with the words, "Shake hands with me". You see him open a zipper-bird case with his feet, reach in and sort among papers to bring out what he wanted. You see him pick up a razor brush and brush back his neat hair.

Life Successful

And you wonder how he ever learned to do it. You think it must be easy.

Well, it wasn't easy. But at 30 years of age, William Watson has conquered his handicaps, not the least of which was self-consciousness—a appearing in public and using his feet as hands.

His life is a story of courage. He graduated in Arts and Law from the University of Alberta, taking his degrees down by writing with his mouth, an accomplishment he has mastered equally as well as writing with his feet. He learned to swim, to ride to eat with his feet. He calls foot-writing "pedexript". He sits and he plays bridge, using a ledge for his cards at his end of the table and playing to tricks with his toes.

And to whom does he give the credit for his precocious success? To his mother. His mother, he said, has stood by him all his life. She has been the driving force behind his accomplishments. William Watson is proud of his mother.

And his mother has every reason to be proud of him.

ARE HONORED AT BRIDAL SHOWER

On Thursday evening, May 10th a shower was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Smallhorn in honor of Mr. and Mrs. J. Smallhorn Jr., (nee Grace Sligh) by their many friends in Corbyville and Camilton. A short program consisting of musical selections by Mr. Ted Watts, solos by Mrs. Chambers and Marion, and a reading by Miss Grace Mills.

The Rev. Mr. Merrick acted as chairman and after a brief address Mr. Willis Brenton then read the following address:

Dear Jack and Grace:

It is a very pleasant occasion on which we your friends, have met here to-night with you.

Jack, you have grown up with us and we feel you are one of us. You have taken an active interest in all sports and have done much to push our baseball team to the front, that has always been willing to give your services.

Although Grace, we have not been privileged to know you so long as Jack, we have been charmed with your sweet and winning ways.

You, the village of Corbyville, "twas a smiling morn in May. When this bright and winsome lassie, Stole our Jack's heart away.

Then what days and months of courting did these happy hours spend.

Till at last a wedding ring brought this courtship to an end.

Now may love surmount all barriers and overcome every foe. So that you may have continued bliss in the years that come and go."

GILEAD W.M.S.

On Wednesday, May 9, the ladies of the W.M.S. held a silver tea and quilting at the home of Mrs. Fred Balcanquel. Thirty-one ladies and little Jean and pastor, Rev. Merrick sat down to a sumptious repast provided by the Ladies' Aid Woman's group.

Two quilts were then quilted, the one being a missionary quilt.

The regular meeting was then held, the meeting opening with a hymn.

The Scripture lesson was then read by Mrs. William Clare, chapter 17 of John. Roll call was answered by verse of Scripture beginning with letter "J". Mrs. James Huffman then gave a reading after which Mrs. Gerald Swan gave a solo which was followed by an instrumental by Mrs. Weese. The Lord's prayer was repeated in unison. Sweet Hour of Prayer was sung in closing. The meeting was closed with the watch word. The proceeds were $3.00.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, May 21. (CP) — All senior golds took the day off today and only a small amount of business was transacted in the secondary gold group on the mining section of the Toronto Stock Exchange. Prices held up well throughout the day over the Board and narrow gains and losses divided about even at the close.

Awaiting something definite regarding Presidential plans for silver at Washington the silver group showed very little of the activity which usually marks leaders to higher levels last week. Bidorado traded in last 5,000 units, registered a gain of 15 to 3,,8,10 while Beat Exploration, Lake Eagle and Premiser were unchanged and Nipissing eased 10 cents.

An early sag of more than a dollar in Noranda was erased in the early afternoon and that issue closed with a small net gain.

All the high-priced gold shares finished the day unchanged from Saturday's close. Exceptions to the reception of Lake Shore which produced 3 sales at 2,,8,10 and McIntyre, up 90 cents.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, May 21. — Financial markets plodded along sleepily today with bankers and investors apparently lacking energy to make any decisive gesture toward either buying or selling. Bonds showed no more animation than stocks.

Exchanges among Canadian stocks were mostly narrow. Canadian Pacific was the only active issue, International Nickel and Dome improved as much. Dome Mines Limited broker dipped a point. Dominion Government bonds were steady. The Canadian dollar was unchanged at 100.18,8 cents.

The mining shares were about the only ones that showed any life. Homestake got up around 10 points. U. S. Steel preferred nearly 3, and American Smelting, Howe Sound, Park Utah and Cerro De Pasco firmed fractionally to a point or more. Allied Chemical showed a point gain, so, while moderately higher prices were recorded in American Telephone, Johns-Manville, Western Union, Loew's, Continental Can, Chrysler, National Distillers and Union Pacific.

TORONTO STOCKS

Close

Toronto, May 21 (CP)—While buyers were few in numbers on the industrial section of the Toronto Stock Exchange today, there was very little stock overhanging the market and the general price structure held mainly intact. Losses outnumbered gains but they were mostly in fractions and moving in sympathy with New York's uncertain trend. There were few in the interlisted group while the gains were mostly in specialties. Industrial Volume was very little better than in the closing sessions of last week.

Distillery shares accounted for about a third of the day's turnover and the close was lower for the leaders. Walker's common took the main lost, dropping ¼ to 22¼. Distillers Seagrams touched 51¼ but recovered to 15⅝ off only ⅛, and International Nickel lost ⅛ to 11⅜. Brewers and Distillers finished unchanged at 1.50.

The issues with an average proportions and the price closed unchanged at 27.47. Smallins was down a fraction and C.P.R. up ⅛. Canadian Bank Commerce fully recovered an early loss of 2 points.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, May 21 (AP)—Stocks today showed narrowly irregular price changes in one of the dullest trading sessions in years. Transfers approximated only 350,000 shares. Metals were firm. U. S. Steel, American Tobacco, Howe Sound and U. S. Smelting were improved. Goodyear and Santa Fe showed small recessions.

Toronto, May 21 (CP)—Cattle trading at the opening of the Toronto Livestock Market today was fairly active, with prices on early sales steady at last Thursday's closing levels. Hogs were also fairly heavy at 2,250 with no holdovers from the previous day. Trade opened slow and weak while hogs were steady to strong and lambs firm.

Board Room Gossip

A great deal of attention is being directed in investment channels to high grade bonds available in Canada position only in relation to similar bonds payable in the United countries. The two and three pay bonds continue to sell at quite substantial premiums over their values. There is growing belief in more expert quarters that the huge sinking funds that have been set up by Great Britain and the United States and inclination of Dominion Government to hold dollar in their harmony with American dollar that large disparities are not imminent.

The Isle Geo. Walbridge founded Walbridge and Clarke's at the age of eighteen, 29 long years ago, and in the year 1871. He was later joined by Mr. Clarke, who assisted in the management of many years, until the Klondike gold rush, in the late nineties, when he withdrew his partnership. Since then until his death a few days ago has carried on under the old name. Walbridge and Clarke's have always been "eighty differents" from other stores, and the number their accomplishments among the "firsts". They were the first to take the initiative in searching the markets of the world for foods, were first to install a telephone for the taking of orders and one of the first also to have electric lights in their store.

"We have built our business on the line of pleasing our customers. In our store he is always right," stated Mr. C. F. Walbridge today. "We intend to continue that policy in all our business dealings".

FIRST PHOTOS OF PARENTS OF GERMAN CHANCELLOR

Here are what are believed to be hitherto unpublished photos of the parents of Adolf Hitler, dictator of Germany, head of the Nazi regime and the most widely publicized personage in the world today. Below at left is Hitler as a child. These photos are from the film "Hitler's Reign of Terror", produced by Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr. which was banned in New York for a short time. Much controversy resulted from the banning but subsequent showing of the film in New York. Vanderbilt made a tour of Germany with a camera and unearthed much concerning the man Hitler and the doings of his storm troopers. The photos shown above are reputed to be the parents of the Chancellor. Much of the material obtained in Germany was confiscated when Vanderbilt attempted to take it out of the country.

HERE'S WHAT ST. GEORGE PROBABLY FOUGHT

Captured by Lawrence Griswold and Edward Harkness on the islands of Komodo in the Dutch East Indies, species of "dragon" that would have made even the famous St. George quiver in his boots, are at last lodged in the Bronx Zoo, New York. All the way across Canada they came, and photographers tried in vain to get a picture of the "dragons" said to be a survival of the prehistoric dinosaur. In reality, the animals, if such they can be called, are named Varani-komodoenses—lo you, just a species of great lizard, better known now as "dragon". Here are shown two of them in new surroundings, taking stock of the gaping throngs that came to see what St. George had to conquer. While they have been captured before, they have never lived long in captivity.

NAZI CRUISER IN BOSTON AROUSES STORM OF PROTEST

Just to show how much the Nazis are disliked in the United States, particularly in Boston, the people of that staunch city have vigorously protested the official reception tendered to the officers and crew of the German cruiser Karlsruhe, shown above. Although the German warship, the first to enter Boston since 1914, flew the Nazi flag, it is significant to note the sailor at RIGHT does not salute in the traditional Nazi manner, nor does the ship bear the swastika emblem.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

NEVER SUGGESTS A MOVIE

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have known this boy for the three years I have attended high school. He's a senior and I am a junior. For the past few months, we have been going "steady" until father put a stop to it, saying we were too young. Now he calls only once a week. Lately, he tells me, more and more, how much he loves me. I try to laugh him out of it. But he no longer seems to care whether there are others around, or how embarrassing it is to me to hear him say all the time, "I love you."

Another thing—he never suggests a movie or even a soda. All this time he has been eating at my house, home-made cakes, candies and pies. He never offers to take me out, even for a walk. I have to do all the suggesting. Still, I confess I am getting interested in him. How can I tell if I love him? Should I let him kiss me?

Student.

My dear girl, the "complex" which has always been a handicap to the average woman is taking its toll of you. You really don't care for this boy, but his constant repetitions on the subject of love has had an effect upon you. Your father is, of course, quite right, in saying you're both too young.

I confess that the picture of this boy, bravely eating his way through pies and cakes, candies and other homemade delicacies and never offering a return treat, is not convincing of any depth of feeling. Also, he seems to lose his appetite when he comes near a soda fountain, much less a restaurant. Do look around for someone else.

THEY DON'T SPEAK AS THEY PASS BY

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We are two girls of high school age, who have been going with two boys of the same age or a number of months, and then we both had a misunderstanding. Now, they hardly speak to us. How can we get them back again? Please don't say "get interested in other boys," because we've tried and can't.

Broken-Hearted.

Well, my dear girls. It is too bad for young, modern school girls to admit being broken-hearted over two boys whom they've known only for a few months. I can scarcely believe that you're serious. I am disposed rather to believe, even though it may sound unsympathetic of me, that you are dramatizing this school-girl and boy affair.

Take a brace. If they treat your offers toward reconciliation by hardly speaking, when you meet, try cutting them dead the next time you pass. Look through them. Another way is to regard them as inexperienced, lacking in courtesy, and negligible. Instead of being broken-hearted make up your minds to be absolutely indifferent. You might also teach them something by wounding their pride.

A MIXED RELATIONSHIP

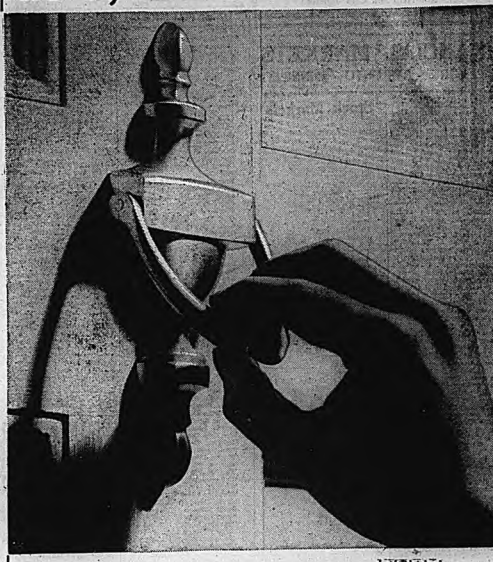
Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've known this man for four years, but my girl friend has known him for seven years. After she started going "steady" with another fellow, the first one asked me to go "steady" with him. When I told her that he and I were going together, she turned right around, got jealous, and won't give him any rest. She won't even see him at all to speak and does—whenever she gets a chance. And then she comes down to my house and tells me he won't call because he has to work late.

I haven't seen him for two weeks now. Anybody can tell she's trying to get him away from me. I know it, but I hate to start a row because she has been my best girl friends. The strange part of it is that she still keeps on going with her "steady" boy friend, all the while she is trying to get my fellow away from me.

Can you make any suggestions? It's a most mixed-up affair.

Ann.



You have the right name for it, my dear. If you ask me for an opinion about this first young man, I would say without fear of doing him an injustice, that he is not worth bothering about. He goes with your best friend for seven years; the last four years of which he divided with you and nobody knows how many other girls. Then, when she drops him, he takes you up.

I'll have to ask you a question. If you want him, why do you want him? And there is not much to be said in favor of the girl whom you call your best friend. Why don't you cultivate an entirely new line of acquaintances? You're not doing yourself justice

Every Day this Salesman Knocks at 6,500 Doors

. . . and ALWAYS Finds Somebody Home

It's putting it mild to say that the Ontario Intelligencer is a welcome salesman. If it ever fails to show up at a front door our circulation department gets a nasty phone call. Yet the Ontario Intelligencer doesn't try, ahead of everything else, to be a salesman. Its main purpose in life is to inform and entertain, as any well-written, well-edited newspaper should do. Meeting its readers on their own terms, it lets them sell themselves—the secret of good salesmanship the world over.

That's why the Ontario Intelligencer is one "business visitor" that's accepted socially by most any family when it is in a social mood. It interviews each buying member of the household when the sales-resistance bars are down. It is accepted by them all as an old family friend. Which isn't hard to understand. For the Ontario Intelligencer bears the stamp of reliability. Readers depend on it—from Mother with her recipe-problems down to Junior who mixes sports with his comics.

IT IS BELIEVED.

And it will sell more merchandise for you for that reason alone.

DEAN BOYS PUT CARDS UP IN RACE

St. Louis Nationals Win 16 Out of Last 20 Games

NOW SECOND

Grove Wins First Start For Red Sox And Hits Homer

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer)

St. Louis Cardinals, perched proudly in second place in the National League standing, can look back on a fine stroke of business, that was accomplished, when the Dean Boys from Brandenton, Fla., were signed up to play in the Mound City.

In the course of the Card's winning streak, which has brought 16 victories out of 20 games and in the past three weeks has carried them from a seventh place tie to a spot only a single game behind the pace-setting Chicago Cubs, Dizzy and Paul Dean have accounted for seven victories between them without a single loss.

It was big brother Jerome Herman, known as the dizzy one, who helped the Cards hoist themselves clear of the Giants' threat and past Pittsburgh Pirates with a 9-5 victory over New York yesterday. Up to the ninth inning he allowed only four hits and three runs, accounted for by an error and Mel Ott's eighth homer of the season. Meanwhile Jim Collins, Joe Medwick and George Davis contributed circuit swats to the Cardinal cause and Manager Frank hit a triple with the bases loaded to bring Carl Hubbell to grief.

The Pirates took the worst kind of punishment as they dropped to third under the Phillies 23-hit assault that piled up a 16-4 score. Chicago's Cubs, still on top saw their lead dwindle considerably, when Van Lincle Mungo of Pageland, S.C., and Brooklyn came back after two days of rest and limited them to six hits while his batterymate, Al Lopez, led the Dodgers to a 5-1 triumph.

The cellar dwelling Cincinnati Reds put up a great scrap to escape their 21st defeat of the season but finally yielded to Boston, 1-0 in the tenth inning of a hurling duel between Ben Cantwell and Si Johnson. Buck Jordan's triple did the damage.

American League

Only the first, fourth and last places in the American League standing remained in the same hands after a day of keen battling among the closely bunched teams. Cleveland Indians moved into second place by blasting out a 8-5 victory over the league leading Yankees with an early attack on Danny MacFayden which offset Lou Gehrig's ninth circuit swat.

Detroit took the corresponding drop, when Bob Burke came through with a six hit hurling performance against the Tigers and Washington used 5 doubles off Schoolboy Rowe to gain a 4-1 triumph. The Senators failed by two percentage points to move up from fourth place.

St. Louis and Boston moved up a notch apiece by trimming Philadelphia and Chicago respectively and the defeated A's went down two places to seventh. Three runs in the eighth off Johnny Marcum, third Philadelphia pitcher, gave the Browns a 10-7 decision. The Red Sox had to overcome a long Chicago lead after Zeke Bonura clouted his ninth and 10th homers of the season but won out 6-5 when "Eddie" Morgan followed Zeke's example and hit for the circuit with two aboard in the seventh.

Heading the Saturday program in the American was the return to form of "Lefty" Grove. His Boston teammates won 4-1 as the old fireballer held St. Louis Browns to six hits, then banged out a homer with two aboard.

In the National, the Giants showed up well in the pinches to snake out a 6-5 win over the Reds. Even Chick Hafey's two home runs couldn't beat the New Yorkers.

Amateur Baseball Results

Senior amateur baseball wars during the week-end developed a few upsets as the athletes advanced closer to real form in the senior Ontario baseball amateur programme. St. Thomas Tomcats, who captured the 1933 Senior O. B. A. A. crown met their second straight loss and Brantford Red Sox slipped a 12-3 lacing over Twin City Panthers.

Arm Armstrong launched the rally, that gave London Winery a 6-5 victory over St. Thomas. He flipped out a scratch hit; Hallowell singled and McWaine scored on another drive to left. London only earned one of their six runs and St. Thomas four of their five.

Brantford, Intermediate O.B.A.A. champions last year, battad Twin City pitchers about the lot. They knocked 16 off McCartney, Esbaugh and Lauvray while Al Hunt was tossing effectively for the victors. Kitchener's outfield play was poor and when Brantford jumped into the lead they were never headed.

First place in the Hamilton Senior City League was grabbed by Moodie Tigers, who stole a 7-3 win from Victorias. Johnny Anderson twirled for the winners and allowed only seven hits. Jimmy Simpson and Ted Jocelyn gave a pretty base-stealing display for Tigers in the opening frame.

Merle Noyes and Mario Comy, juniors last year, jumped into senior company to pitch Port Colborne to a 13-2 triumph over Niagara Falls Merchants. Merchants sneaked across for two runs in the first innings but when the Ports took charge they were backed into the shadow with the youngsters tossing slants they couldn't reach.

Ambrose Shanson also played a hero pitching role when Niagara Falls St. Pats whipped St. Catharines Garden City 5-1. Bill Grange's error in the eighth kept Shanson from complete whitewashing the St. Kits crew.

Maple Leafs tied the count in their half of the ninth, when Stratford's catcher failed to hold a third strike the batter missed and Johnny Jones barged in from third with the winning run.

Pick Leeson, manager-catcher of Merriton's squad, rapped out a homer in the game with Niagara Falls Cataracts and returned his team a 9-8 win. Rosy Westcott held Merriton hitless and runless for six innings but he was driven from the mound in the seventh when Merriton scored five runs.

In the other fixtures Tillsonburg Pandrieds walloped Bayham Combines 7-3 and Dundas Graftons of the Hamilton Senior City League scraped out a 10-8 victory over Galt Terriers.

THREE TEAMS IN RUNNING FOR TOP RUNG

Rochester, Newark And Toronto Having Merry Battle

LEAFS WIN

Take Odd Game in Three From The Lowly Bisons

By The Associated Press

The International League race had developed into a dog-fight today with Rochester Redwings, Newark Bears and Toronto Maple Leafs locked in a great battle for the lead. The slim span of a game and a half covered the three leaders with the rest of the field well back.

Newark's double triumph over Syracuse Chiefs yesterday, coupled with Rochester's even split with Montreal Royals, enable the Bears to climb to within a half game of the top. Toronto, meanwhile, kept pace, beating back Buffalo to trail Newark by only one game.

Newark was given the benefit of superfine pitching in trouncing Syracuse twice 6-0 and 9-1. Hank McDonald allowed only four hits in the opener and Charley Devens and Vito Tamulis combined to limit the Chiefs to five safeties in the seven-inning nightcap. With that sort of hurling, Newark had no trouble as all. The Bears battered out 11 hits in the first game and swelled their batting averages with 12 more in the second to win as they pleased. McDonald, Dale Alexander and Vince Barton connected for homers in the first game and Bob Gibson contributed one in the nightcap.

Duplicating the crowd at Syracuse, 7,000 fans turned out at Rochester to see the Redwings take the first game from Montreal 11-2, and then drop the second, 5-4. Johnny Michaels held the Canadians to eight scattered hits in the first game while his teammates were collecting 10, including a home run by Tom Winsett. Winsett also clouted a homer in the nightcap but could not save the Redwings from defeat as Montreal bunched hits off John Berly in the early innings. Although a leg injury forced him out of the game after five innings, Chad Kimsey was credited with his sixth victory against two defeats.

Stopped Hitting Streak

..Five runs in the seventh and eighth innings enabled Toronto to beat Buffalo 10-8. Lisenbee and Kowalik pitched reasonably well, but five Bison errors came at critical moments and helped Toronto pile up its score. Walter Hilcher went the route for the Leafs although walloped for 11 hits. He stopped Heinie Muller's hitting streak after it had stretched through 17 successive games.

Six Baltimore pitchers vainly tried to halt Albany's sluggers and the Senators won two games, 9-7 and 15-2. Glenn Chapman, young Albany outfielder, collected six hits during the day including two home runs and a pair of singles. Fred Sington clouted a homer in each game.

On Saturday Rochester's sluggers fell on three Montreal pitchers for an 8-3 win. The pace-setters showed a return to their earlier unbeatbale form. The Leafs split a double bill with Buffalo, winning the first 10-4 and dropping the nightcap 4-1.

CURRENT SPORT

(Day By Day)

Thanks to other members of the editorial staff our presence was not missed insofar as the old sport column is concerned last week while indisposed. Back at the old Remington today we find some sporting activities have transpired since last Wednesday. For instance Horometer, like the real thoroughbred he is, romped home to win the King's Plate for R. S. McLaughlin and a nice new Buick roadster for Jockey Frank Mann, just a token of Mr. McLaughlin's appreciation.

Although we were not able to attend Saturday's interscholastic track and field meet it is understood that a large field of athletes competed, with the Belleville boys winning more than their share of the laurels. According to reports the strenuous competition of the Collegiate annual field day took its toll and no records were broken. The local boys were a sorry sight at the conclusion of the meet. It is too much to ask young athletes of such tender age to compete in two such track and field meets within such a short space of time. Saturday's meet was successful, the officials say and will now become an annual affair.

A point that heretofore has not been made public is the fact that the Belleville Fruit girls' softball team were given a bye in the Eastern Ontario Ladies' Senior Softball semi-finals at the annual meeting of that organization held here recently. For the past month the executive has been trying to reorganize with little or no success, thus the decision of the parent body after Manager Leo Barrett informed the President, Miss Simon, that his team was ready for competition. The Fruit girls are holding regular practices while the South End A.C. team is slated to hold its first practice on Victoria Park tomorrow evening. This club may seek a franchise in the Prince Edward County Loop.

After this afternoon's exhibition game between the Belleville Nationals and the Picton intermediates, the fans will have some concrete information as to the actual playing strength of the local team before they begin the grind in the Central League. Apparently the Ponies are not the slugging team they have been during the past two or three years as the best they could do against the Napanee Gibbards last week was to gafner four hits from the offerings of George Blazetich. The Ponies did manage to eke out a 6 to 2 win over the Gibbards, but errors on the part of the intermediate club, not the consistent hitting of the Ponies, paved the way for a Kingston victory. Apparently the loss of Compeau and McQuade has been felt in Kingston.

While on the subject it is learned that Gibbards are taking on a very heavy list of pre-season games. On Saturday they journeyed to Port Hope and trimmed Finnegan Hill's charges 9 to 1. In this afternoon's game at Picton all players will be given a tryout. It is doubtful if Vaughan Jack will be down from Madoc, but in case of his absence the starting infield will likely be: Smith at first; Sonny Green at second: Johnnie Kerr at third, and Dean Ford covering the short field. Chuck Barriage, Harold Long and one other infielder will also make the trip. All pitchers will be given a work-out.

May 24 seems to be a red letter day locally, as far as sporting events are concerned. A double header of senior baseball with Oshawa, punt racing and at night an all star wrestling show at the Armouries under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club. Matchmaker McClure has promised the fans a big time card for that day and he has kept his word when he signed such men as Walter Stratton vs. Dorie Deton; the Black Panther and Jack Nicholas and a curtain raiser of the highest calibre. If show does not command a packed house then the wrestling game should be discontinued locally.

SMART CARD FOR HOLIDAY

Wrestling Fans Will Be Given Thrills Aplenty by Contestants

A super-extravaganza, as the movie producers have it, is what Belleville wrestling fans are in for at the next show of light heavy wrestling, under the auspices of the Belleville Kiwanis Club, at the Armouries next Thursday night. To round out the evening's card, the two main events of which are set-to's between the Black Panther of Harlem and Jackie Nicholls, the South Bend, Ind., Thunderbolt; and Walter Stratton of Chicago and Dorie Deton, of Salt Lake City, Matchmaker Tommy A. McClure has succeeded in securing the services of two outstanding performers to fill the curtain-raising frame. Here Joe Tripsanski, of Hungary, who showed to such advantage at the last light heavy show here, will meet formidable opposition in the person of a newcomer to the local mat, Jack Hagen of Shreveport. Judging from Tripsanski's past record (as one of his class' worst bad men) and his opponent's reputation for "clean" wrestling, this affair, over the one-fall route with a 30-minute time limit, should be productive of all the speed, science, thrills, skill and action for which this light heavy wrestling has come to have a name in the centres on the continent, where it has been introduced. Both of the combatants come to the fray exceptionally fit and with recent unbroken strings of victories, and there is little likelihood that this event will have to take second place to the other attractions on the evening's card.

Golf Facts NOT THEORIES! By Alex Morrison

Properly focusing your attention is half the battle in organising your mental and physical processes. In this the eyes play a big part.

Very often the player who can't keep his mind on the ball stares at it without even seeing it. Other things hold his interest.

In order to take your mind off other things and keep it on the ball you must be interested in the ball. Surely you have a preference for a certain make of ball or one with a particular marking.

Then, take advantage of this by placing the ball on the tee so that you can read the trade mark or some other mark that you put on the cover.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma bawt a new hat today, being a little round one like the very top part of a pail not hardly hiding any to her hair, and tonite after supper she was showing Pop and Harvey were coming around to go to the movies with pop and ma, and ma says, Harvey has got on his adrums, saying to pop, Do you like it, William?

Pop just looking at it a while without much expression, and then says, Not much, and ma looking real sharpe as to say I didn't like it and that's the last story a man and when it comes to wimmins hats the best I can do is to blindly write checks and that will be trying to understand, but still while we're on the subject of this parteckular hat are you quite sure they haven't made a mistake and given you a child's size?

Willyum Potts, this is the very latest Paris model, in fact Madame Kelly wasn't even quite sure if it's exactly come over to Paris yet, so that's how authentic the style is, ma says, and pop said, At that rate if it never came out anywhere it would take all the blue ribbons at Madison Square Garden show. All rite, I'll leave it to Gladdis she's a woman and she ought to know, and she your darter and get to the bottom of all the thinks.

With just then Gladdis and Harvey came, and ma and pop Gladdis have on but a little round hat even smaller than pop's and so high up on her head it was almost on the back of her neck, ma saying, O Gladdis, what a stunning hat, and Gladdis saying, That's just what I was thinking about yours.

Pop and Harvey just rolling their eyes at each other, meaning what was a use, pop and Harvey pulling their hats sideways on the very top of their heads but probely not leaving them that way long after they got out, partly on account of public opinion and partly on account of ma and Gladdis.

Horometer Romps Home Winner of King's Plate

Clips Full Second Off Record And Never Extended

(By Dan Parrish)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, May 21.—(CP)—Horometer, most little crusader of the turf, whose debut in Senior Company brought a victory sought for five years by the stable of R. S. McLaughlin, was lined today as the speediest of 75 Ontario foals enrolled on the last of King's Plate winners since 1860.

The bay son of Hourless out of Star Pal scored an easy win in the 75th renewal of the Royalty-sponsored fixture, worth 29 guineas from the King and $7,500 added by the Ontario Jockey Club over a small field at the opening of Woodbine Park Saturday afternoon.

The McLaughlin color-bearer, under the capable guidance of Frankie Mann, who made it his third victory in the stakes, finished four lengths in front of W. J. Wright's Speygold who in turn was followed by J. H. Cochrane's four-year-old Papalco, carrying top weight; R. W. E. Cowie's Pickthicket, E. P. Seagram's filly, Cacky Feust, and Sam Worthy, the other half of the Wright entry.

Urged only once by his rider as he pulled away from the rest of the field, Horometer galloped home to the cheers of some 23,000 racing enthusiasts, to run a full second off the nine furlong plate standard of 1.50 1-5, and place the name of McLaughlin among the winners for the first time. McLaughlin received the prize from the Governor General who arrived with the Countess of Bessborough in state to make the presentation in behalf of the King.

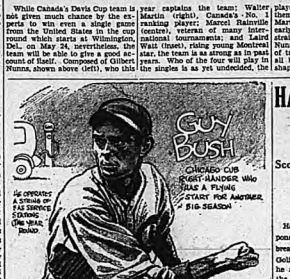
From actual record Horometer's speed could be compared with previous winners only since 1924 when the plate distance was reduced from a mile and a quarter to the nine furlongs, but his trainer, Harry Giddings who has added six other victors in the Classic, agreed with reporters that the McLaughlin gelding possessed all the quality of a real race horse.

Six strong victories behind him, Horometer will be given another opportunity to display his ability, when he enters the $3,000 breeders' on Wednesday.

Despite the fact Giddings repeatedly has expressed confidence the McLaughlin three-year-old is the best Canadian foal ever produced, Horometer will not be sent to compete with more select company in the United States. "At least, not this year," Giddings said, after that it would depend on Horometer's performances.

The plate winner admittedly is capable of greater speed than he displayed Saturday and showed during his trials but could never one mile and a furlong in 1.54 3-5 with a burden of 130 pounds. But he has been pressed in any company and has had no opportunity to extend himself.

HULK MAY BE LAST OF LA SALLE'S BOAT



Hensel, Mich., May 21.—(CP)—The rotted hulk of a sailing vessel, thought by some to be the remains of La Salle's Le Griffon, will be raised from the 10 feet of water of Michigan shore within the next few weeks.

The hulk was discovered last winter and divers went below the surface to examine it and bring back scraps of metal.

CANADIAN DAVIS CUP TEAM TO MEET U. S. MAY 24

While Canada's Davis Cup team is not given much chance by the experts to win even a single game from the United States in the cup round which starts at Wilmington, Del., on May 24, nevertheless, the team will be able to give a good account of itself. Composed of Gilbert Nunns, shown above (left), who this year captains the team; Walter Martin (right), Canada's No. 1 ranking player; Marcel Rainville (centre), veteran of many international tournaments; and Laird Watt (inset), rising young Montreal star, the team is as strong as in past years. Who of the four will play in the singles is as yet undecided, the players having to play-off among themselves for that honor. Walter Martin has been handicapped in early season play with a badly strained ligament in his right arm; Nunns is also handicapped by lack of training; the other three having all been in the south to get into shape.

HARRY RIDLEY BREAKS PAR

Scored 31 at Belleville Club Against Par 32

Harry Ridley, youthful golf exponent, had the distinction of breaking the par on the Belleville Golf Club course yesterday when he shot a 31 for 9 holes, par for the course being 32. He was playing in friendly competition with Joe Legault and Jack Marsh, who also turned in creditable scores of 37 and 39 respectively. All of the holes are the usual par except number eight, which is at present submerged during which time a temporary green is being used. When asked the success of his accomplishments, Harry stated: "I merely sank some lucky approaches."

The score against par was:

The Romantic Runaway

By KATHARINE HAVILAND-TAYLOR

"I'll never be able to have what I want," Estelle lamented. Perhaps, after all, I dreamed most of it."

Its remembering Pabillo could fill her eyes with tears, so she thought of him as little as possible. Times about her spoke admiringly of the fast pace Pabillo always gay and "ready for any sort of fun." She crowded every waking hour with activity so that she was left for thought and those who spoke of her neglect of Pabillo were to reflect that really happy lovers are not in need of "any sort of good time," nor searching for it.

CHAPTER XXXVIII

Two years later the engagement of Estelle Field and Alec Davids was announced. "I suppose we might as well try it, Alec," Estelle had finally conceded.

Alec said frankly and with a glint in his eyes that would have told the most hard she been wise enough to read it, "I am very eager to try it."

This last flare of father's has ended the possibility of my starting with that Estelle could not be understood. Alec drawled, "I don't believe I've ever told you such a sad story. It's really unforgivable of him to have done it, you know."

She was hurt by that but she was accustomed to being hurt. Probably, Estelle had decided, no one would ever be able to reach her well enough to say the right thing at the right time. And no doubt, as her father said, she was very demanding. "Demand a little more of yourself," Jim Field had advised her again and again, "and less of other people. You'll get the results more satisfactory."

Without doubt she decided, she was a square peg in a round hole and destined to remain one.

Alec had found no pleasure in her new friends or in sharing their activities. She had only found a little of the forgetfulness that she had hoped seeking in a rather feverish and youthful way.

"Everyone in the regiment is out of step but you, Estelle," her father often said and the chant had told, she was "odd", she decided. A misfit. In such a case the only thing to do was to pretend to be like the others.

So Estelle played a little too hard spoke the new language that she had learned and accepted her self scrupulously for the moments of loneliness that came. Only when she was alone or for an instant with Alec.

"I'm going to try to make you happy, Alec," she promised the day she agreed to marry him. He kissed her then with a fervor too strong for comfort. Alec was determined now to "show her who was master."

"You'd better!" he assured her. She did not like that either.

"What's the matter now?" he asked a little roughly, attempting to find the reason for the sudden change in her eyes.

"Something's always the matter with me," she answered bravely. "I should know that by now, Alec. I think I was born on a cloudy night when my star could be seen only dimly and through a haze. I've always gone, never sure and never quite satisfied."

"Oh, rot!" he broke out, wearied. "Some people are born with Russian moods. Sometimes—to be perfectly frank, Estelle, I'm not in good deal of sympathy for your father. You haven't made his life easy."

Tears brimmed in her eyes at that. Alec was right. Estelle knew beyond the stage where tears come easily and can wash away a hurt. She had tried to forget all her father's cruelties, had resolved that as long as she stayed with him it was better to maintain some sort of peace. Her efforts, however, had not accomplished much except to provide an open gate through which her father could drive his personal. Trying never seemed to get one much except more hurt, Estelle decided. Life was far from the simple thing she had supposed to be in the old days when she wandered about the garden of the convent school in Paris. Then she had dreamed vividly of growing up and falling in love with some fine man, of marrying him and living happily ever after in the fairy tales.

Now she was sure about very little. Especially was she uncertain about marrying Alec, yet she knew that she must get away from her father who of late months seemed to be clutching with desperate, blunt fingers at such joys as he could comprehend.

"Don't take everything so seriously," Marcia advised Estelle when they met one morning at a musicale. Estelle was looking white, strained and pained. "It's really not worth it, you know. Men are men and we can't change them. We can only pretend to be sweetly unaware. But then you've always been an incorrigible idealist just as your mother was. You know what it did to her!"

Estelle agreed to that.

"Play hard, expect nothing and take everything! I've told you that before but you wouldn't listen to me," Marcia went on. "You'll have to do it some day. We all have to—unless we die young!"

"I'm beginning to believe you," Estelle responded. "If that is my satisfaction to you."

"Father bitter again? you're in today, isn't-it?" Marcia drawled. "But never mind! Some day you'll know and when you do you'll realize nothing is really important but your own comfort and your bank balance. Then you won't be bitter any longer. You'll find it all rather amusing."

She left Estelle soon afterward, smiling faintly and nodding good-by. Marcia thought, "Poor Jim! In spite of the fact that he's a rotter he has his troubles. Imagine having somebody around who expects you to be a Sir Galahad—even at breakfast!"

Marcia returned to her home for the privilege of eating her breakfast in solitude. It was a little more than three years since Fields' yacht cruise. Music always stirred her more than she cared to admit and today she wanted a chance to think before she must be composure before meeting any of her associates.

Music made her dream of so much that could never be for her. Sometimes for weeks she kept away from any spot where she would hear good music. Then the hunger for it would assert itself and she would succumb—but be rewarded with enchanting, misty pictures that failed to bring with them an ache of melancholy and unrest.

That morning throughout the program she had thought constantly of Pabillo, the boy who had disappeared. She had always pervaded herself recently that she would never see him again. Finding Pabillo was an impossibility and that she knew as well give up the search. This morning, through the music, the memory of Pabillo had gripped her once more, renewing the feeling of responsibility for him.

"Oh, Jamie!" Marcia said sharply, as she rode homeward.

In the small sitting room that adjoined her bedroom she settled and spoke impatiently to her maid. She ordered luncheon in a petulantly sharp voice and then glanced through the letters on her desk. None of them were of consequence. Marcia picked up a newspaper and the headline on the first page made her eyes narrow.

"Rather dramatic!" she murmured. Then she smiled, reflecting that here was another dreamy idealist who would be a match for Estelle. Pabillo Fields, for years had shouldered his wife's guilt.

The headline read: "Death Bed Confession of Marcia Payne" and Resurrects Old Case."

Marcia read the words in small-er type and then the long column that followed. Afterward she read it all over again more carefully. When she had finished the newspaper she laughed, an odd, hurried, in her usually composed way, to capture him. Always before he had been slightly embarrassed. Today he was hard. Vital, like women, though fortunately the sex is full of fish. Nevertheless she remembered the young man's face, forgetting for a time his weak mouth and small, obstinate of he male companion of the beaches.

Presently Pabillo arose and walked toward the hotel to which he was accustomed. He was wearied of carefully planned flower beds and the "incongruities" of the floral foliage of red and green striped awnings. He had had endless days to do. He made by gardeners who say to beauty in the casual arrangement of flowers wanted, too, of the equally artificial men and women who came to this world, seeking that which they never found—"pleasure".

He would go back to Cuba, Pabillo decided, to the black spar-kling ocean and the white beaches, at least the sounds and the smells would be familiar.

Design in the Vegetable Garden

a matter in which there is little choice, is to decide upon how much space is to be given it. Very often too much is undertaken and the vegetable garden is too large. This is true when the gardener does not endeavor to work on a scientific basis, using rotation and succession crops, so that every inch of the garden is working all the time and is always green and growing.

Why flashy gardens pay no attention to these factors and when a crop matures it is gathered and the space it left vacant or to grow up to weeds. A large garden or one operated carelessly runs from one of the home grounds is best planted and in straight lines running north and south. This is purely utilitarian but has the advantage that the soil is worked, but the small garden will be much more attractive if laid out in beds with paths between them sufficiently wide for easy and pleasant walking. There are a great variety of arrangements that can be made these beds to be certain of an ornamental factor provide room for the proper growing of annuals.

The first point in selecting the site for the vegetable garden, often This will guarantee a share of beauty.

A circle may be used as the central factor, as is often done in flower gardens. The circle may be laid out in squares or rectangles, the vegetables may be grown in a border around a central rectangle with a walk about the central plot. There may be cross paths or a central walk with two cross paths. It is entirely a matter of choice with the owner and the plan and the site and location of the vegetable garden as well as the soil must be laid out, but it is so easy to lay it out systematically as to avoid the series of rows and helter-skelter.

Another factor to consider the height of the vegetables must be taken into consideration that the tall growing will not be placed in such a position that they will shade the smaller ones from too much. The usual practice and one that works well is to use the tall varieties as backgrounds with the lower sorts in the foreground and central portion of the garden. It is also a practical idea to place the tallest growing vegetables nearest to the north boundary.

TARZAN THE TERRIBLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

At the high priest's exclamation of surprise, the woman she was about to seize turned and saw the mighty figure of a Ho-don warrior standing in the entrance way. "Ja-don!" cried Lo-don. "What do you here?" "I come from the king," replied the other, "to remove the beautiful stranger to the Forbidden Garden." "How dare the king defy Jad-ben-Otho's high priest!" cried Lo-don. "It is his command—I have spoken," snapped Ja-don, without a trace of fear or respect for the villainous high priest.

Lo-don well knew why the king had chosen this messenger, who scoffed at the temple god but was too powerful to be the victim of the high priest's vengeance. So far Ja-don had been immune. Lo-don cast a furtive glance at the thugs hanging from the ceiling. If he could entice Ja-don, the Lion Man, to the opposite side of the room—this might prove his long awaited chance. "Come, let us discuss the matter," he said suavely, moving toward the spot where he wanted Ja-don to follow. "There is nothing to discuss," replied the warrior, yet he followed Lo-don, fearing treachery.

The beautiful prisoner watched them move across the chamber. She had not failed to note the high priest's quick glance, and she guessed what he intended. In the warrior's face she read courage and honor. Between the two princes, she believed she would be better off going with him than remaining with Lo-don. Warrior and priest were alone upon the hidden trap as lady Gryziola made her decision. "Warrior!" she called after them. "If you would live, enter not that portion of this chamber!"

Lo-don, casting an angry look at her, shouted: "Silence, slave!" and moved farther on. "Where lies the danger?" Ja-don asked, ignoring the high priest, and coming back toward the woman. Before Lo-don discovered her purpose, or could prevent her, she had seized the thong controlling the partition, which shot down, separating the high priest from Ja-don and herself. The warrior understood. "She would have invited me!" he cried, "while he accused you in the mazes of his temple." "He would have done more," said the woman, and she showed him the other side of the door which the high priest had sent Tarzan down

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

In the past few years the movies have discovered the newspapers and newspapermen are dramatic and colorful.

The result has been a series of racy, touching and entertaining films dealing with the melodramatic episodes of the men who make the papers. There was "The Front Page" with Adolphe Menjou and Pat O'Brien; "Five Star Final" with Edward G. Robinson; "Gentlemen of the Press" with Walter Huston; "Ladies' Front" and "Clear All Wires" with Lee Tracy featured in both, in one as a Winchellesque columnist and the other as a foreign correspondent; "The Finger Points" with Richard Barthelmess portraying a Chicago reporter reminiscent of the slain Jack Lingle; and "The Famous Ferguson Case," with Joan Blondell as a woman reporter.

Now Warner Bros. has produced another, with Paul Muni playing the central character, a two-fisted New York City crime editor who is demoted to the Heart Throb Hilfer's seat, but who solves a sensational disappearance mystery, scoops the other papers, and is reinstated as the boss.

"Hi, Nellie!" which comes to the Capitol theatre today, is the title of this film, getting its name from the derisive salutation given by one and all to the man dishing out advice to the lovelorn. It was written by real New York newspapermen, Roy Chandler, formerly of the New York Evening Post, having done the original story, while Sidney Sutherland, who can "remember" twenty-nine papers he has worked on, collaborated on the screen play with Abem Finkel.

While all the newspaper films have provided spirited entertainment and have given a fairly accurate picture of newspaper life, for the sake of drama, some have veered sharply from the well accepted traditions of the journalistic profession. That is experienced newspapermen have been able to say truthfully, "Now, this could not have happened" or "A real reporter would have done that."

Those persons who have been reading the New York papers intently during the past three or four years are going to recall the mysterious disappearance of Supreme Court Justice Crater (still unsolved) as they view "Hi, Nellie!" In the picture, the disappearance is unveiled by a jurist who is divorced by gangsters because he is about to uncover their graft.

"Little Girl with Big Ideas," a big Vitaphone special opening at the Capitol on Thursday, will make up a splendid program. Dionne-ware gifts for the ladies Monday and Tuesday.

AT THE BELLE

"ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN"

"JOURNAL OF A CRIME"

No picture in many months previous more laughs or more tender irony than "Advice to the Lovelorn," starting at the Belle Tuesday, matinee daily, with Lee Tracy in the role of a hard-boiled reporter forced to conduct an agony column.

"Advice to the Lovelorn," reveals a shrewd grasp of the trend of public interest today. For, just as "The Bowery" summoned back a bygone period for modern, times to laugh and weep at, "Advice to the Lovelorn" recalls the sentimental though quaint era disappearing from the newspaper. These columns are handled at for the manner, even while those who laugh realize they must serve as public confessionals to which many sorrow-ridden people bring their troubles and seek for light.

The picture opens with Lee Tracy as Toby Prentiss, star reporter and feature writer under a five-year contract, sleeping off a drunk during an earthquake, the biggest story of the year.

On the very same day the portly, heavy-faced woman who had conducted the "Advice to the Lovelorn" column for many years, resigns in a huff. The managing editor, incensed at the star reporter's disregard for the direction of liquor, assigns him to fill the vacancy, making him an object of ridicule for his fellow reporters.

The story moves from one hilarious situation to another, with an hilarious denouement that comes very close to being tragic.

Pretty Sally Blane plays the sweetheart for whose sweet sake Tracy tries to turn his way out of the humiliating job. Featured with Sally are Isabel Jewell, Paul Harvey, Claude Wood, Jr., Henry Gordon, Sterling Holloway, Jean Adair, Mimi Briggs and Adalyn Doyle.

"Journal of a Crime" with Ruth Chatterton is appearing on the same program in "Journal of a Crime", which is said to afford her the greatest opportunity of her career to display her unusual dramatic talent.

The picture is based on a powerful drama by the noted French playwright, Jacques Deval, and depicts the effect of a murder on a woman of fine instincts and delicate sensibilities who finds an unscrupulous rival because she is wrecking her home. Not that the picture is purely a psychological study by any means, for there is plenty of action, beginning with the playing of a boxing match staged in a theatre during rehearsal, the fake and capture of a criminal in the film, and winding up with a happy climax that is said to be one of the most novel twists ever conceived for the screen.

Featured in prominent roles are Claire Dodd, Adolphe Menjou, Phillip Reed, Henry O'Neil and Else Jansen. A funny Tom Howard comedy and the Belle latest News Parade will be presented on the same program.

Two Features To-Night

Hilarious comedy and youth romance predominate in "Search for Beauty", to be presented at the Belle To-night for the last times with Zane Grey's romance of the Golden West, "The Last Round-Up". Popeye the Sailor, and the Belle News Parade. Next round out a program of smart springtime entertainment.

DIPLOMATS INVOLVED IN DANGEROUS TRADE WAR

That ascending line of Japan's foreign trade is one of the chief reasons why Japan is seemingly in disfavor among the nations. When nations find someone taking their trade away from them with lower prices and dumping, they usually get angry. Three men who have come to get angry are shown in the above. At TOP, Koki Hirota, Japan's first soft-spoken foreign minister in years; LEFT, Cordell Hull, secretary of state for the United States, also lauded for his clever diplomacy in handling Japanese matters, CENTRE, Sir John Simon, Britain's foreign minister, from whom none can get more than he feels called upon to give and who has been in no chute for alarm in the Far East.

FREIGHT DERAILED HERE, CREW UNHURT

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Chicago, May 22—(CP)—A bad weather Bank Clerk and his two "relatives" were arrested for disorderly conduct because, a sleuth says, they "made love without a passport."

Alfred Rolls, 19, told police he and Robert Roberts, 18, were acting as referees for Walter Ungemacht, 20, when the latter was knocked in a doorway.

They freed him by knocking the referees to him, they said. He disclosed the owner, who had them arrested.

Los Angeles, May 22—(CP) Among Dally morning's advertisements: "People just won't repent, so some sell my puppet tax. "25 or more."

Platteville, Wis., May 22—(CP) —Butcher Bill Brodie says the customers who bought meat from him "on the cuff"—and never paid—got more than the burglars who handed a heavy pelt from his market. There was nothing in the safe but account books.

Seward, Alaska, May 22—(CP) —This is the Lord spring comes to Alaska. Word of it Knik of Houston Texas, a mining engineer, has been received in the Canadian, Texas and Alaska.

Jeffersonville, Ky., May 22—(CP)—Francois Lanoy avers that he is a man of action.

When the county relief administrator installed him as one of the many demand for clothing at county expense, Lanoy allegedly struck him in the face with his clenched fist and then bit him in the nose.

In July for 30 days, Lanoy says he'll be back later for the clothing.

Lincoln, Neb., May 22—(CP)—Vern, a foolerce elephant, must feed the goats because she won't accept a husband.

The six-ton feature attraction of a circus, Vern refused to ride in the trailer truck built for her.

So Vern's keepers let her lie down the roads at night to the next circus stand.

Philadelphia, May 22—(CP)—Indefinitely detained behind the barred doors of cookless Ice Box Sacryglewski is the "coolest" in the summery sense of degree and Sacryglewski insisted on jailing all the cold he had wanted to escape the heat. His landlord alleged he was of so much use to her, a battle ensued and police arrived.

Sacryglewski barricaded himself in his apartment, but police broke down the door and took him to jail.

M. F. HEPBURN OPENS FIGHT IN HAMILTON

Charges Third Candidate in Riding Financed by Conservatives

COMING EAST

Says Governments Making Strenuous Efforts o Stay in Office

By Jack Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Hamilton, Ont., May 22 (CP) — Swinging into full stride in the Provincial election campaign, Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader arrived here today for a series of meetings in the city and adjoining ridings. His stay will be a brief one, for tomorrow he turns to Stratford and Windsor to carry the fight to the north for the week end.

Opening his campaign at Thorold and Niagara Falls yesterday, the Liberal leader attacked the present administration, promising a 50 per cent. reduction in taxes with the abolishment of essential social services such as Old Age Pensions and Mothers Allowances. In the latter case, he promised, there would be extension of the act to provide for widows with one child.

The government, he continued, was making strenuous but futile efforts to retain in office. Rose workers had been given increases, pay and relief grants had been increased by 25 per cent. However, he declared if the government had been sincere in its desires to help the unemployed these grants would have been made two years ago when the need was greater than it is now.

There were many three-cornered fights in prospect, he said, but in some cases "we all know" they are financed by Conservatives in an effort to break the Liberal vote.

He had been subjected to many attacks by government speakers, he continued, but in any case Premier George S. Henry is the best Liberal leader the Tory party ever had and I hope he stays there long enough for us to get at him."

Birch Canoe in Church Chancel as Mohawks Mark Anniversary

Today marks the 150th. anniversary of the landing of the Mohawk Indians at or near the present site of Deseronto. In order that such an event might be fittingly commemorated a special church service was held in Christ Church (Mohawk Indian) Reserve in Deseronto on Sunday at which time Rev. H. Cowling, Rector of the church, assisted by Rev. A. Greenfield, read and presided over. To remind the Mohawks of their heritage a birch bark canoe was placed in the chancel of the church and turned upside down, in the same position as the canoes of the Mohawks were placed when they landed and gave thanks for a safe journey from the land to the south in a century and a half ago. Covering the up-turned canoe was a sacred linen cloth, suitably inscribed, upon which was placed the sacred vessels of the church presented to the Mohawks by Queen Anne in 1784.

In the sanctuary of the church was erected a huge crest, made of evergreen boughs, a replica of the cross erected upon the landing of their forefathers 150 years ago. The British flag also adorned the altar. During the service Rev. H. Cowling and Rev. Mr. Pringle both spoke appropriate words on the subject of their heritage and the importance of the history of their forefathers' lives. Rev. A. Greenfield spoke of what have been so carefully preserved by the Mohawks during the anniversary of the arrival of the Mohawk. The service was largely attended by the Mohawks who now reside in this district.

During the free part of the service Mohawk names were solemnized, Rev. Mr. Geen assuming his Mohawk chieftain's title name of Shoiyeweh; Mr. Pringle, that of Ochyosheh, and Mr. Brant, that of Sakaheweh. The hymns in the song service were all sung in the original Mohawk tongue, also. The service proved most impressive.

Mrs. Maria Corby Passes Away

"When on my day of life the night is falling,
And in the winds from unnumned spaces blow
I hear far voices out of darkness calling
My feet to paths unknown."

Thus in answer to the summons, so beautifully expressed in the words of Longfellow's Whittier, the soul of Mrs. Maria Corby passed from this life at her home on Pinnacle street this morning. In her passing the city of Belleville has lost a prominent citizen one of its oldest and most highly esteemed residents and many persons and institutions will mourn the loss of a true friend.

Mrs. Corby lived her home city and although she had reached the ripened age of 91 years recently she took an active interest in the social, religious and general life of her city. She was fond of walking and almost daily enjoyed this exercise. Last Thursday she visited the business section and it was shortly after returning to her home that she suffered the stroke from which she did not recover.

The late Mrs. Corby was the widow of the Hon. Henry Corby, member of the Canadian Senate, who died in Honolulu in the year 1917 while on the journey to spending a vacation in that country.

The late Senator Corby and Mrs. Corby travelled extensively in foreign countries and during one visit to England, Mrs. Corby was presented at court to their Majesties the late King Edward and Queen Alexandra of England.

The late Mrs. Corby took a deep and active interest in the hospital work in connection with St. Thomas' Church which she loved well. All the guilds and auxiliaries working in the parish received her help and encouragement and she also the parish as a whole. Her familiar figure at the services and at the meetings of the gracious greetings will be missed by the members of the congregation.

The Women's Christian Association in this city will also greatly Mrs. Corby's interest, and support in their every line since the organization of the association about the year 1880. Mrs. Corby had taken a deep interest in the work of the association. All the departments of the work, hospital, home for the aged and the indigent, received her hearty support. The poor always found in her a true and understanding friend. Truly in the passing of Mrs. Corby a good woman has gone from the life of Belleville, and fond memory of her will long remain with many persons who were privileged to enjoy her friendship.

Mrs. Corby is survived by three daughters, Mrs. C. S. Laidlaw, Toronto, Mrs. F. B. O. O'Hara, Ottawa and Miss Alice corby at home. To them the sincere sympathy of many friends and citizens of Belleville as a whole will be extended.

AFRICA GOLD COAST TO BE DESCRIBED

Adjutant Fred Bowers of the Salvation Army, will visit Belleville tomorrow (Wednesday) and will be accompanied by Major F. Riches, the Toronto Area Divisional commandant.

Adjutant Bowers has just completed five years' missionary service in the Gold Coast Colony, West Africa, where he and his wife superintended the Army Rest Home, sponsored by the Gold Coast government.

On the eve of returning to Canada for their first homeland furlough, Mrs. Bowers was stricken with the dread blackwater fever and died after only a short illness. The adjutant then had necessarily to assume the role of undertaker and "officiating minister" for his own wife's burial.

While in Belleville this distinguished missionary officer will present an illustrated lecture in the Citadel tomorrow evening: Health-ridden and its Cruelties."

Many local Salvationists and friends will be pleased to meet the special visitor.

ENUMERATORS START TASK

Elements Do Not nterfere With Work of Compiling Lists

When the voter's lists of Ontario are to be compiled, wind, rain or storm in no way interfere with the government commissioners. Early this morning 46 enumerators for the city of Belleville started their long tedious task of re-compiling the voters list of this city. Two enumerators will be appointed for each polling sub-division, whose duty it will be to call at every home in the city of Belleville and acquaint themselves with the names and ages of all eligible to vote in the community. D. W. Rollins, returning officer for West Hastings, gave the enumerators their final instructions yesterday and sent them off to start their work this morning. They are expected in four days in which to complete their lists. Today's heavy rain proved no handicap to that man as they tramped in the rain from door to door compiling their lists.

Police News

Not a single arrest was made by the local or Provincial Police departments during the past 24 hours. While patrolling the beats of the city last night one officer found quite a number of motorists whom he was returned to its owner today.

Early this morning the police received information, that a truck had been stolen in the Consolidated district and was headed southward. Despite the fact that Provincial Police laid in waiting, outside the city limits all morning, in the rain, no sign of a truck was seen. The truck was reported to be loaded with scrap iron, and is believed to have been taken another road, supposedly in a westerly direction.

No motor accidents of a serious nature were reported by the highway traffic department during the past 24 hours.

"CRAP" GAME IS EXPENSIVE

Nine Pay $5.00 Each For Gambling on Lord's Day

It was only a crap game, but it had its pollds. A fine of five dollars, without costs was imposed and paid in each case by Magistrate Mikel in this morning's Police Court proceedings.

The case arose out of a recent police raid, early one Sunday morning recently, when the law walked in on nine manipulators of the "galloping dominoes" just then the pastime was at its peak. The officers completing the raid took the names of the offenders and allowed them to return to their respective homes, but also the would-be gamblers subsequently received their well known ship of paper, a summons to appear in police court under a charge of gambling on the Sabbath.

Several cautions were laid by the accused man previous to their final appearance, but nothing came of the fact, that no dice had been found by the long arm of the law at the time of the raid. Finally deciding, discretion, the better part of valor, nine little gamblers fattened the city coffers to the extent of $45.00.

Perhaps they did not know, that church was in progress," received the Worship as the fines were being collected.

Farm and Fishing Industry Will Bring New Epoch

"Cast Your Eyes Inland" New Commissioner Tells Newfoundland

St. John's Nfld., May 22 (COP)—The vision of a new race of Newfoundlanders, a breed of farmer-fishermen wresting a living from the soil and from the sea, has been placed before Newfoundland's seafaring people by Hon. Thomas Lodge, member of the governing commission now in control of the island's affairs.

The conception that the country's future is indissolubly bound up with the lobstick'ry is wrong, the Commissioner holds. He says the sea has been a poor provider, will bid time to be a poor provider. And in his view it is about time the Newfoundlander was turning his eyes inland.

The ideal occupation, he told the Methodist College Literary Institute, would be a combination of fishing and farming in equal proportions. Fishing would occupy half the year, and in the other six months the fisherman could supplement his livelihood ashore.

The problem of turning the Newfoundlander towards the land would be a difficulty, one the Commissioner admitted. There would be financial difficulties. Even greater, perhaps, would be psychological problems. The sea-fishing attitude has been imbued through the centuries with the idea that the sea is means of life.

Time For Change

But the time has come now for the change, Hon. Mr. Lodge declared. "In the last few years," he said, "the sea-fishery catch has been curtailed on because the men engaged in it and their families have accepted far too low a standard of living." It was a standard, he said, "not worthy that which any community forming part of the British Empire can reasonably be expected to accept; with patience but hope." He saw no hope of permanent improvement in the conditions "but rather a relative lowering of the demand from year to year "as the standard of living in the world as a whole rises." For, he said, the "conflict is rather a poor article of food than the sale of absolute values."

"It is," he said, "an article mainly consumed by Latin countries which a relatively poor standard of living, and I should have thought that it is obvious that as the standard of living in the world rises, the relative, if not the absolute, demand for codfish must fall."

The Commissioner said he had agreed with other members of the government that every step possible should be taken to assist the maximum number of shermen to prosecute the fishery this year. But this step had been decided upon because of necessity of dealing with an "immediate situation". It would foster a "spirit of self-help and independence" and help remove the "devastating moral effects of involuntary idleness."

He did not disclose the government's immediate plans in this respect. He assured his hearers however that no stone would be unpiled, though he added he was not sure he or anyone else could find a solute would not be negative insofar as profitable cash returns were concerned.

But the real solution, he asserted lay in the exploitation of the country's agricultural possibilities. He quoted figures to substantiate his contention. The estimated 30,000 persons dependent upon the fisheries, directly or indirectly, had produced about $8,000,000 worth of fish.

By comparison, not more than 30,000 persons had produced $5,000,000 worth of agricultural products.

"Is it not indicated," he asked, "that the most hopeful field in which to apply special stimuli is here, rather than in an industry in which 160,000 souls produce at the most $8,000,000 from which we know perfectly well a great deal has to be deducted to arrive at anything like an accurate estimate of the net advantage to the fishermen."

"I suggest to you, very tentatively," he asserted, "that it is in the direction of the increased cultivation of the land that we must turn in order to find the solution of our immediate difficulties in the island."

CITY BUYS IN BRIDGE ISSUE

Contracts Let For Season And Bylaws Are Laid Over

One of the shortest sessions of the year was held by the City Council last night. It is expected there will be a lengthy one at the next regular meeting for at that time the estimates for the year will be brought down and a rate for the year struck. There were only ten members of the council present when initialled Aldermen Woodley, Safe, Donahue, Foley, Brideman, Wills, Cushing, Harvey, Marshall, Harker, and the bylaws up for consideration were laid over till the next meeting. These bylaws were money bylaws which require a quorum of at least three-quarters of the total membership to pass them and the council with only ten members present cannot legally do them over. Due to the absence of Mayor Tice, who attended a community banquet at Tweed, Alderman W. A. Woodley was installed as Acting Mayor.

The Bridge Bylaw of Belleville debenture issued in connection with the purchase of the Bay Bridge for $50,000 on a forty year basis and purchased out of the sinking fund as an investment was ordered cancelled as there was sufficient money in the surplus of the sinking fund to warrant the cancellation. These debentures are issued in 1892. By the cancelling of the debentures the city will make a considerable saving in interest.

Contracts for the year were given The Hall Hardware was given the contract, Belleville Pottery, stirrifled tile and sewer pipe; sand and gravel to Thomas Dall, and castings to the Fruit Machinery. The petition presented from the barbers asking for the hours being eased to make all barbers observe the Wednesday half holiday in June, July, August and September was referred to the City Solicitor for his consideration and opinion. Alderman W. A. Woodley and Mrs. Lillian Mikel were re-appointed to the Children's Aid Advance Board. John Noakes was given permission to connect a drain to a sewer provided he paid the cost and the work was satisfactory to the engineer.

PACKING PLANTS NOT ENDANGERED

Charred Body of One Man Dug From Debris at Chicago

Chicago May 22. (AP) — The charred body of a man was found in the ruins of Chicago's stockyards today as workers cleared and groped through the debris of Saturday's $8,000,000 fire preparing the way for rebuilders.

Through acres of hot ashes into heaps of bricks, skeletons of old landmarks and twisted steel girders the explorers dug, hunting valued documents and property, that might have survived the holocaust, and hoping the log of human life would not grow.

The one known victim was a man about 70, initials on his belt buckle reading M. His relatives identification as Isaac Mezza, a stockyards worker. One other death was attributed indirectly to the disaster. Walter Burnfield, 53, who dropped dead of excitement as he watched the flames.

The great packing plants of Swift, Armour, Morris, Wilson were never endangered as the hot breeze fanned the fire eastward and away from the big processing houses, flanking the acres of open pens on the west.

These packers, little affected by the blaze, were operating today and even the banks that were reduced to ruins announced business as usual in temporary quarters.

Trading on the country's leading livestock exchange started a little late, but the morning arrivals of livestock were only slightly fewer than was anticipated in Saturday's official estimates.

Old Nick 80 Year Scribe Spins His Final Yarn

Nova Scotia Writer Wants Ashes Strewn Over Fundy Tide

Berwick, N.S., May 22.—"Old Nick", 80-year-old correspondent of The Berwick Register has pounded out his last piece of copy.

An astle in Boston, the writer who for many years contributed the Harborville by-the-Sea notes, now in a sad message of farewell says "time flies" and "Old Nick's days are numbered". Thus "while still a little alive and able to operate this old machine" he types out his final "30" following an interesting letter of reminiscences.

He is R. W. Kappele and the Harborville editor doesn't believe in his last story. Ye editor footnotes: "Our diagnosis, after reading between the lines, is that he is suffering from a bad attack of Spring fever aggravated by a ruetious liver, a condition which is sometimes considerably improved by a fairly strong cathartic."

The saddest note is touched when the old journalist who lived by the sea tells that he wishes his ashes strewn on the waters of the Bay of Fundy.

"I have a long life love for Harborville, Berwick and the lovely bay which in spite of the fact that it gave me many a hard night during peat winters, when I was all alone, I love it just the same and want what is left of me to rest there," Old Nick writes.

Here is the wistful appeal of the enraptured journalist: "I hoped that I could once more have eyes over to the Bay Shore to sit on my old bungalow verandah and look out over the good old bay that I have loved for years, and will never set again; but if my wishes are obeyed by my side-partner when I am gone, I hope my ashes, enclosed in a glass jar, will get free transportation over the Eastern Steamship Line and our own Dominion Atlantic Railway to be delivered to my old friend Lyle Brown, who will see that either Bloom Morris, Bernard Morris or someone else will carry them out into the bay I love so well and scatter them on the waves."

HEAR EVIDENCE AGAIN IN CASE

Caused by Death of His Lordship Mr. Justice Armour

Six cases were entered for trial at the Non-Jury Sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario that opened in Belleville yesterday afternoon before the Honorable Mr. Justice Kelly. Two of the cases were settled and a third postponed at the opening of the proceedings.

The Loney vs. The Manufacturers Life Insurance Co. case was settled with judgment by consent, the action and counterclaim being dismissed without costs. The matter originally arose out of the alleged settlement of a life insurance policy. H. C. Donnan, K.C., appeared for the defendants while J. A. Maloney represented the plaintiff. The Armstrong vs. Hunter action was settled out of court.

The case of Rankin vs. Associated Quality Canners was postponed until the next sitting at the request of counsels. The evidence in this case was heard at a previous court. The only case to be heard before His Lordship yesterday was the Cook and Hall vs. Bowerman and Lawless suit, arising out of the sale of a boiler from a Bloomfield cannery. The entire evidence in this case was submitted at the last non-jury sittings when His Lordship, the late Mr. Justice Armour, reserved judgment, but subsequently died before delivering the same, throwing the case out of the courts. The identical same evidence as submitted last winter before the late Mr. Justice Armour, is being repeated.

Court adjourned early last evening to resume at 10 a.m. today. The firm of Potter, Parliament and Arnup are representing the plaintiffs in the present proceedings with the firm of Donnan and Nourse of Belleville as solicitors for the defendants.

WHAT IS IT WORTH?

In the swamps of El Chaco for two years two nations have sent their best men to have them killed or die of disease, as Bolivia and Paraguay have been nursing their hate of one another.

Wars must end at some time and it would be the part of reason to end them before they begin. Does any nation entering a conflict ever dream that it may be the defeated one and that its rival may glory in its defeat.

Fortunate for the world's history these two embattled powers have not embroiled others and their affray has only served to point out the lamentable and disgusting character of modern war which gains nothing. Not long after the year 1600, a man named Shakespeare made one of his great characters criticize warfare for a strip of land that would not be large enough to hold the bodies of the slain.

The League of Nations will succeed, now or it will some other time, and it is therefore no wonder that leaders among the nations are pressing for the solution of every international dispute by arbitration instead of guns, bullets and poison gases.

War is more senseless than the scrap of two schoolboys. The latter has one merit, they do not do one another serious harm and possibly the victor learns that a pugilistic victory is after all not worth much.

Possibly the day may dawn when angry nations will gather about the table of peace—with peace the prime requisite and the first and last object even if nations have to bear a little burden more or less.

Now the great nations are talking of putting a ban on arms for these South Americans. Probably both nations of them are hoping for such excuse to end the war and save their faces before their people.

TWO CHICAGO FIRES

Present day readers were saved today from reading the like of what was read and what thrilled the readers of sixty-three years ago when a two hundred million dollar fire raged throughout the big city of Chicago. The blaze of over two generations ago was started when a cow kicked over Mrs. O'Leary's lantern and started what left many thousand persons homeless.

Saturday's fire was disastrous enough but it was kept within fairly narrow limits as compared with the conflagration of 1871. Saturday's loss was ten million dollars and it carried away over a score of blocks.

But times have changed. The Chicago of today is a different Chicago with buildings largely modern and with more efficient fighting apparatus. Should fires do the damage as they did in the old days in modern cities, the fires would result in loss of property and life which would stagger humanity. Such a fire was that which swept London in the year 1666 after the plague had removed a large portion of the citizenry.

In some ways the old type of cities may have been more picturesque, with old buildings or at least inflammable buildings, buildings of old shapes but even if they seemed more cosy it is difficult to believe that anyone would prefer them to the modern buildings. Yet in modern cities, the problem is what to do with the worn-out property which has to be protected as long as it is habitable and even after that because it is a menace. Even small cities have that same fire problem to face—the property which has lost its value largely and yet endangers other property.

When there are not modern means of fighting, fires can still do damage to the large cities of a collosal amount because of these very old buildings. But the modern fire fighting equipment and alarm systems make it possible for firemen to have a better chance to succeed. The populace realizes that it has also the advantage of machinery and so does not become alarmed that fires will get beyond control.

It still remains the first duty of a citizen to prevent fire by using precautions. Some persons are careless, or this would not be the world it is, but most men and women do not take any chances with a blaze. It is the little carelessness which start so many fires such as in the summertime when matches thrown away burn into the grass which is ready to ignite and threaten a countryside.

Today the countryside has means of protecting itself against fire in a way which was not possible in other days. In some centres there is fire fighting equipment of a mobile type which can be taken to a scene. In other rural parts there are means of fighting fires which were not at hand in the long ago. But still many villages remain unprotected.

It is a little stream which flows softly, but it freshens everything along its course. —Mad. Swetchine.

As a goose is not alarmed by hissing, nor a sheep by bleating; so neither be you terrified by the voice of a senseless multitude.—Maximus.

Or sit as mistress at your table.

We are so like, I do not doubt
That not one soul would find me out
If I should some day take your place
And greet friends with your air, your face
For I can take your gracious poses
As simply as a rose uncloses.

Yet, though I might deceive the rest
And keep my secret long unguessed,
I could not, howsoe'er I tried,
One hour bridge the chasm wide
Yawning between your soul and mine,
Which you and I alone divine.
Your own self's pattern fits no other,
Though near as sister, near as mother!

BANK ROBBERIES CONTINUE in the region where John Dillinger, super-bandit, is supposed to be operating. A raid on a Flint, Michigan, bank last Friday netted the robbers about $30,000, and one of the bank customers who happened to be in the bank at the time and was lined up with the staff while the looting was in progress was sure that the man who held a gun on him was the much-wanted Dillinger. If Dillinger is still lingering about his old haunts he is courting disaster for he will be taken, dead or alive—and if he tries new pasture he is almost certain of capture for all agents of the law in all countries are watching for him, and will give him just as much chance as he gave the victims of his gun when they draw a bead on him.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT says he is determined to stamp out major crime in the United States. A large order even for the optimistic Franklyn D. Stamping out major crime means the elimination of major criminals, and that means capture, confinement and electrocution of a vast army. Crime must be made unpopular and unprofitable before it can be curbed, and separated from its boon companion, graft, which keeps crime alive in the United States. Crime has been made unpopular and unprofitable in Canada and major crimes are seldom attempted here. President Roosevelt will have to dig up the crime roots which are intertwined with the political system in vogue there of electing judges and important law officers. Without the protection of the "higher-ups" crime would soon become unprofitable and unpopular and from a more or less exact science become a hazardous occupation.

Have a Smile

Here are a few smiles from here, there and everywhere, authors unknown:

Most of the love triangles turn into wrecktangles.

Over the door of a little church in a small South Georgia town is carved the inscription: "This is the gate to heaven." A tourist through the town last month found the following sign tacked on the door itself: "This entrance is closed during the winter months!"

"John, I hope I didn't see you smiling at that creature that just passed."
"I hope you didn't, m'dear.'

Exam reports had just been given out and little Bobby stood silently in the door for a long moment. Then he said: "Pa, you remember you promised to give me five dollars if I passed in school this term?"
"Yes, Bobby, I remember."
"Well, I just want to tell you that you ain't gonna have that expense this time."

Colonel—"Don't you want to be the kind of a girl that people look up to?"
Daughter—"No, I want to be the kind of a girl that people look around at."

Politician—"Congratulate me, dear, I got the nomination."
His Wife—"Honestly!"
Politician—"Why bring that up?"

x x x x

"What have you against me?" "Nothing," said Mr. Cumrox. "I think I should like you for a son-in-law." "Then why did you forbid your daughter to see me?" "I wanted to introduce an element of romance that would induce her to defy my wishes and concentrate on a young fellow for whom I really have a high regard."

PLAN WISELY FOR HOLIDAYS THIS SUMMER

Do Not Return From Vacation More Tired Than When You Went

(By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.)
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

This is the time of the year when we think about vacations. With the gloom and confinement of winter well behind us, we find ourselves scanning railroad and steamship folders, testing the fishing tackle, thinking of having the tennis racket restrung and of polishing up the golf clubs. The call of the woods, the fields, the sea—all possess a special appeal, depending upon individual inclinations.

In the last analysis, the really important thing to decide is not so much where we should go, but how we can plan our holidays so that they will do us a maximum amount of good.

Is it not true that each year many, if not most, people return from their vacations more fatigued and even more discouraged than ever? Is it not true, also that your vacations of the past have meant little more than a transfer from one type of work and excitement to another?

A holiday whether it be for a day or a month, should rest one's body and mind. Such rest need not necessarily spell idleness nor laziness. It need not mean sleeping ten hours each night instead of seven or eight. Nor need it mean boredom because you are trying to keep yourself quiet against your will.

Such a vacation becomes a torture that defeats its own purpose. It saps your vitality more than does your regular, routine work. Most assuredly, it leaves you more tired than when you started.

The way to relax, is to do something entirely different from what you have been accustomed. Under such circumstances you are made to think differently as well as feel differently.

Bear in mind, that what you succeed by in life is not only what you accomplish, but the amount of energy which you have available for specific purposes. This does not mean that the more nerve energy you possess, the more success you will have, whether in business, in love, in health or in general contentment. What counts is what you do with your nerve energy; whether you waste it, whether you direct it into useful and planned channels or whether you dissipate it in debilitating forms of activity.

When vacation time arrives, everybody is bound to be a bit short on his energy reserves And that is why complete rest for a few days at the very start helps to revitalize the system.

After this initial rest, nerve energy should be used in ways that are different, and which will exercise nerves that have been lying comparatively dormant. This gives the regular, hard-working nerves a chance to rebuild, to carry off their accumulated waste products and to get themselves in the pink of condition when the routine grind of life must again be pursued. It likewise refreshes the mind because new experiences are enjoyed.

Therefore, think wisely and well about your coming vacation. Don't repeat the mistakes you have made before. Get more out of it this time than you ever did before.

DR. BISCH'S DAILY DIET HINT

The following foods tend to constipate most persons: Liver; potted, preserved, smoke or salt fish and meats; eggs in all forms; fresh white bread; biscuits and the like; pies, pastries sago and rice pudding; nuts; candy and other sweets; excessive tea drinking; alcoholic beverages. Regulation of the diet, plenty of water taken between meals and sufficient exercise that works the large muscle groups, is the best prescription for overcoming sluggish elimination.

NEW CABINET POSSIBLE

Sofia, Bulgaria, May 22 —The possibility of a new Government succeeding Bulgaria's Fascist-minded military dictatorship as soon as it has completed its immediate task of reorganizing the country on an authority basis was the subject of discussion and conjecture today.

MARKET BILL UNDER FIRE

Opposition Claims Bill Aims to Centralize Control of Production

Ottawa, May 22—(CP)— Free from party control members of the House of Commons will today express their views on the desirability of legalized sweepstakes in Canada. The House will turn from its long argument over the marketing bill to debate the bill sent down from the Senate, which would authorise sweepstakes for the aid of hospitals conducted under regulations to be laid down by the Attorney-General of the province concerned.

A similar bill passed the Senate last year but the House of Commons rejected it with scant ceremony. This year Prime Minister R. B. Bennett has announced the government will take a neutral attitude and leave its supporters free to vote for or against the proposal as they see fit. There is no assurance a vote will be reached today as the number of members, who want to speak may be large but when a vote does come it is certain to cut across party lines.

So far most of the demand for sweepstakes appears to have come from Quebec and British Columbia and members from those provinces will likely be prominent among those supporting the bill. Another measure of the same sort is before the House for second reading on the motion of Pierre Casgrain, (Lib. Chalevoix-Saguenay). It, however, would permit sweeps to be held for any public charitable or educational purpose.

The Marketing Bill moved slowly in committee of the whole yesterday. The long discussion over individual clauses was enlivened when Hon. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader, charged the bill was part of a plan to centralize the control of production and marketing for the whole empire in the hands of a few men in London.

The fact other parts of the empire had enacted or were enacting similar measures coupled with an evident tendency in the United Kingdom to discuss marketing on an empire-wide basis was regarded by Mr. King as significant.

He raised strong objection to those clauses of the bill which would permit the minister to recommend the institution of a marketing scheme where the producers did not ask for one and which would authorize the government to prohibit the import or export of commodities regulated under the bill.

LIBERAL OFFERS TO LEAVE RACE

Windsor, Ont., May 22 (CP) — A. A. (Tony) Marentette, recognized Liberal nominee in North Essex riding today made a public offer to withdraw from the race if P. N. Gardner, also Liberal but not recognized by Provincial Leader Mitchell F. Hepburn, would do the same and permit naming of a new candidate who would be supported by both Liberal factions.

Mr. Gardner has not expressed his readiness to do this.

A New Form of Linaria

An All-American Gold Medal Went to This Lovely Linaria, Fairy Bouquet.

Linarias are not among the most widely grown annuals, but they deserve much greater use and the introduction of the new dwarf variety, Fairy Bouquet, which won a gold medal in the All-American trials for 1934 promises to make the whole family more popular.

They are sometimes called "baby snapdragons" because the flowers resemble that o fthe snapdragon and in addition have a long spur like a columbine. They are among the fastest growing annuals we have, as they bloom in eight weeks from seed. While the barocoana thybrids which are most familiar to us grow from 12 to 18 inches tall, the new type Fairy Bouquet rises only 8 inches and is of compact growth, giving its large blossoms a prominence which is lacking in the older forms, and thus, making it a bedding subject of exceptional value.

The new linaria is also excellent for cutting or for pots and window boxes. Coming in a variety of colors, such as rose, yellow, pink, lavender, carmine, red, violet, white and salmon, many garden uses will suggest themselves to the gardener who wishes this type of flower to complete some part of his back-lot layout.

Cultural instructions are quite simple for the Fairy Bouquet. Being a hardy plant it may be sown broadcast or drilled thinly in light soil—somewhat more thickly in a heavy soil—almost anytime after the frost gets out of the ground. It responds to sun and moisture very quickly.

Coming from Australia by way of England, where one of the outstanding seedsmen improved it to its present form. It has a history that compares favorably with its attractiveness in the garden.

The Fairy Bouquet should be sown in its permanent location, and where growth has become too thick, it should be thinned.

One half of the gigantic old elm tree, which from the days of the first settlers in this vicinity overhung the Trent road on the farm of Mr. James Ponton, fell today in perfect calm weather crushing fences, trees and sidewalks on the opposite side of the road in its descent. Traffic was not stopped, however, as the branches which sustained the trunk were so large as to allow carriages to pass under and between them. The roots of the tree have been traced 100 feet in one direction on Mr. Ponton's farm.

As May 24th falls on Saturday this year the holiday will not be observed until Monday.

The Minnie A. will be disposed of by lot on June 25th. The yacht is strongly built, is well rigged, is a good and speedy craft and whoever gets her will be the possessor of a valuable boat.

Cooperation Essential to Restore Cheese Trade in Market of Britain

S. L. Joss Analyses Situation in Cheese Industry

PATRONS' INTEREST

Is the cheese industry worth saving? At the present time approximately 30,000 farmers are depending for their principal cash income on milk that is being manufactured into cheese, yet our principal market, Great Britain, is rapidly being lost to our chief competitor, New Zealand. For instance, as shown by a recent report of the Dairy Commissioner, our respective positions on that market for the year 1923 to 1933 are:—

Canada, 1923, 112,180,544; 1932, 82,-594,444 lbs. Decrease 29.4 percent.

New Zealand, 1923, 155,300,248 lbs.; 1932, 207,907,316. Increase 33.3 percent.

The chief reason for this condition may be attributed to the price at which New Zealand is willing to sell their cheese as compared to what we are asking, or is it because the New Zealand producers are spending more money to advertise and bring their goods before the British public. In 1932 New Zealand spent $30,000 in advertising various New Zealand products and this year $150,000 is to be spent. The principal type of advertising followed is the giving of prizes for the best dressed grocery window displaying New Zealand products. This not only keeps before the British consumer the New Zealand cheese, but it is stimulating the good-will of the grocery manager, who is the direct contact between the consumer and the distributor. Against this we have a superior quality of product, due principally to the fact that our cheese is made from unpasteurized milk, whereas that of New Zealand is made from pasteurized. Pasteurization is detrimental in a favourable development in the maturing process. The premium asked for our cheese over the counter is around two cents per pound, and with a quality that approaches that of the finest English and Scotch Cheddars it appears that by taking a leaf out of the book of New Zealand we would undoubtedly be able to market our goods more advantageously in the future.

JOSEPH INSULL

ANOTHER INSULL

While Samuel Insull and Martin Insull face trial in Chicago, a third member, Joseph, suddenly finds the spotlight upon him for the first time in his 78 years. He owns the wealthy like his younger brothers and now he has some of their troubles as he lives obscurely on a pension in Springfield, Mass.

Critical Period Ahead

The cheese industry is very old branch of the dairy industry in this province, is at the present time facing the most critical period in its history. Factories are closing down because of lack of milk; factories that are burned are not being rebuilt; others are becoming so small in output that they are near the point where it is uneconomical for them to operate; with the result that a large percentage of the milk that was used for cheese is finding its way to cream-eries. Farmers on an export basis do not profitable to the farmer. Ontario Cheddar cheese has always had no place insofar as quality is concerned. Our cheese is considered the finest, along with Scotch and English Cheddars, yet the position that faces us today is that the trend is towards decreased production in cheese and increased production in butter. Will this trend be stopped this year? If so, what will stop it? Before answering this question let us deal with actions for the existing conditions as viewed by some authorities.

Cause of Conditions

One school holds to the opinion that by doubling or trebling our production we would regain our position on the British market. This opinion is based on the argument that, due to our low production, the British importers have become disinterested because of a lack of continuity of supply. Another school maintains that increased production through better bulls and the elimination of poor cows would put our producers in a better position to compete with New Zealand, whose production per cow is greatly in excess of our own. The next school adheres to the policy that development of the home market is the solution, pointing out that our consumption per capita of 3½ lbs. is greatly below that of other countries. Great Britain, for instance, consuming 12½ lbs. per capita. The opinion of the writer is that all three are essential, but, as considerable time is necessary to develop them, and as something of a more immediate nature is absolutely essential if we are to save the industry, we will have to look elsewhere.

This brings me to the question in the previous paragraph: "Will this trend be stopped this year? If so, what will stop it?" My answer to this most difficult question is this: Producers must take an active part of the producer for his industry. The cheese industry, as it has been, suffering from lack of interest by the producer himself, for the last 15 years with the result that it has been neglected and other industries have been utilized which have not always proved profitable to the farmer.

Patrons Show Interest

The writer in his capacity of secretary treasurer and organizer for the newly-formed Ontario Cheese Producers Association has had the privilege during the past three months of addressing a large meetings of cheese patrons in every cheese-producing county in the Province. These meetings have been held in afternoons and evenings and farmers have travelled long distances to attend them at the sacrifice of their time, which is no less valuable to them at this season of the year. They are looking for leadership today because they realize now that the time has come when more interest must be shown by themselves in their own industry. This newly-formed organization has been given financial assistance by the Provincial Government. The Ontario Dairy Department has given the association the assistance of its instructors, and the Agricultural Representatives are also assisting in the work of organization. Never before has there been such intense interest shown by the producers in the cheese industry, and never before has there been such an opportunity for them to organize for the purpose of looking after their own business. With such an organization functioning, the cures for the unfavourable condition of the industry as previously mentioned, viz., continuity of supply, increased production, and the development of the home market, will undoubtedly follow.

Uniformity in Marketing

What is the reason for the lack of interest by the producer? In answering this question the writer does so from his own personal observations. First, lack of uniformity in marketing. The marketing of cheese in the province is disgraceful. It is estimated that only 25 percent. is sold in open competition, which is setting the price for the balance. Private arrangements for sales are made, which in the end react to the disadvantage to the producer. No uniformity exists in annual statements returned to the producer, and in many cases no statement is returned at all. Discrepancies between cheese factory returns and returns from other sources through which the cheese in Canada is sold is practically impossible for the average patron to check. Under such conditions are not the fault of any particular class engaged in the cheese industry, but rather the result of a system that has developed through many years of indifference and haphazard methods of marketing by the producer. An overhauling is absolutely necessary and if any progress is to be made in trying to bring this old and well-established industry back to a position of real importance, it will be absolutely necessary for all interested, whether they are producers, manufacturers, or distributors, to work together for the common weal.

S. L. Ross,
Secretary-Treasurer,
Ontario Cheese Patrons' Association.

BERMUDA POLICE DECLARE WAR ON SCANTY PANTIES

Hamilton, Bermuda, May 22 (CP) —The day of the "scanty pants" is over on this coral island. Flappers must do their flapping in public places with shorts not shorter than two inches above the knee, according to police decree.

There have been no arrests since the police department's modesty move but many American visitors have been politely advised to return to their hotels and "cover up". The reaction to the decree has been on the whole one of good nature and amusement amongst the thousands of trippers. It is expected that the warning will be sufficient to prevent any "flagrantly improper" dress in future.

Visitors are green with envy over the bold appearance of the Manchester Regiment who paraded on their first route march attired in their customary shorts. Police didn't even budge to measure their pant legs.

The Chief of Police is determined that "the isles of rest" will not become a second Atlantic City. Some say that the trouble all started because a young lady cyclist on the South Shore skidded when her too-short shorts got entangled in the handle bars. Be that as it may, the official answer to the extremely scanty attire of the post-Easter parade is that bathing costumes and shorts of undue brevity will be looked upon with disfavor by police and that wearers of same render themselves liable to prosecution.

"Modesty shall prevail!" is the police slogan and vigilators who are stopped by policemen will find themselves hauled into court to answer charges of being improperly and possibly indecently dressed.

The large number of college students now in this Colony are the principal offenders. Many of them rush to and from the beaches, it is claimed, in a near nudist attire. Bathing costumes are best used by cyclists. Young women and girls were alleged to be wearing shorter shorts.

Now many are wondering under what authority the police are acting and if measuring will form part of their regular equipment when they go forth on the King's highway to judge improper dress.

POISONED BY ALCOHOL

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., May 21. —(CP)—Jack Kumak, 16, is in a hospital today suffering from alcoholic poisoning and it was he was knocked down by a car which passed over his arm and wrist. He was then taken to the side of the road and a half pint of moonshine poured down his throat, he alleges.

SAFETY SPEED COMFORT SERVICE

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

Sixty-three cents of every dollar goes for Wages.

The railways of Canada are among the largest employers of labour in the Dominion. In 1933 the Canadian National Railways paid wages to 70,625 employees, and in so doing disbursed $95,632,076.00. In terms of expenditure for operation, this means that of every dollar so spent by the Canadian National Railways, 63 cents was paid for labour. The balance was spent for fuel, material, etc., used in maintenance and operation, and, of course, these expenditures in turn contributed to the wages of those employed by the parties from whom the materials were purchased.

As the policy of the railways is not only to serve Canada, but to "buy Canadian", it follows that the railways, through direct payment of wages and indirectly through purchases, are of tremendous importance to the wage-earners of Canada and to everybody who is to any extent dependent on them—and that means practically everybody in the Dominion.

Yet, impressive as are the above figures, they are far below those of previous years. The number of employees is less and the payroll is smaller than hitherto. We want to change this. We want to restore men to their jobs and put their names once again on the payroll. In doing so we will be helping every form of business in Canada, and therefore feel entitled to the fullest co-operation of all citizens.

The railways are equipped for much greater service than they are presently called on to perform. Their standards of efficiency are higher than ever, and they are ready for and anxious to have additional business. The time of the year for vacations is here, and it will give additional pleasure to any holiday to have the knowledge that each dollar spent on railway travel has to the extent of well over one-half found its way straight to some employee's home.

But in patronizing Canadian railways you get more than the satisfaction—deep as this may be—of having helped to banish the Depression. You get railway service in all its varied branches at its best. Whether you have much or little to spend, whether you are going on a long journey or a short one, let a railway be your servant. And, of course, we would like to have the pleasure of your choice falling on us.

Advice to the Lovelorn
By Beatrice Fairfax

YOUNG LOVE

Don't take it for granted, when you see a laughing, joking group of boys and girls in their late teens, that life is just a riotous playtime to every one of them. They have that look, I admit. And the middle-aged onlooker, envying them their freshness and charming faces and outward gayety, is disposed to make light of any secret troubles they may have.

But youth can suffer. And youth does suffer. If it's the season for love, it's also the season for all the thousand miseries and misunderstandings and actual heartbreaks to which love gives rise. Youth is adorable, enchanting, enviable in a multitude of ways. But don't imagine for a moment that it is tragedy-proof.

Emmy, a correspondent of mine, is young, lovely, gay, companionable, sweet-natured—oh, all the things that a nice girl should be. She is popular without effort. And she is deeply in love. Surely, then, she has nothing of which to complain! On the contrary, Emmy is agonized.

"Must I give up my love?" she asks me.

"Let me tell you the whole story. My girl friend and I have been simply inseparable for about five years. During this time, we have had plenty of boy friends, but our boy friendships weren't really serious, and we have always talked the boys over in a happy, laughing way. You know how girls do.

"Now I can hardly tell you what has happened. We have both fallen in love with the same boy. It is simply terrible. We can't mention it to each other. And what will be the end of it?

"For a while we were a crowd of four, two boys and two girls. Then one of the boys moved to Buffalo. The three who were left had good times together for a while. Then things began to get queer. Each of us wanted to be alone with the boy, and I think he knew it. So if he likes or loves one of us more than the other, he is afraid to show it. But, why should he be?

"He is dearer to me now than my girl friend is, and I suppose she has the same feelings. But I can't play any dirty trick on her. What if we both lost him, just through being decent? Love and jealousy are terrible things, aren't they? Oh, Miss Fairfax, if you would only see this boy, you'd understand."

Triangular situations are always unpleasant. And this one is distressing, even heartbreaking, for one or both of the uncommonly nice girls who are involved in it. My advice would be, since the desirable youth can't possibly be made to serve as a sweetheart for both girls, that the situation be cleared up as soon as possible. And the simplest way to do this, I should think, would be to see that a fourth boy was added to the group. Then, when the four assemble to go out together, let the first boy choose his own partner.

If he fails to take advantage of this opportunity, it will mean, I should say, that he is not seriously in love with either girl. The fact that he has not already attempted to see either girl alone would, to my mind, make this pretty clear anyway. Perhaps he belongs to that delightful and unsatisfactory race of philanderers, or professional heart-breakers and marriage-dodgers who hardly ever love anyone.

But, naturally, I cannot forbear the secret hope that the youth is all that Emmy believes him to be, that it is she whom he loves (but through shyness or delicacy hasn't so far spoken) and that they will be happy forever after.

At the best, there's a heartbreak ahead for somebody. And the fact that youth can survive successive heartbreaks doesn't make it any less true that youthful suffering, while it lasts, is a thing not to be ridiculed.

Weddings

MORGAN—REDCLIFFE

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Saturday, May 19th., at 6 p.m. at 179 Dundas street, Belleville, by Rev. Harold Reid, when Hazel Grace, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Redcliffe of Thomasburg became the bride of Arthur J. Morgan, son of Mrs. A. Morgan and the late Mr. Morgan of Crookston.

The bride was becomingly attired in a blue crepe dress with blue and grey trimming, with grey shoes, hat and gloves to match. The bridesmaid, Miss Blanche Reid of Roslin, wore a blue dress with plaid trimming and hat to match. The groom was supported by Mr. Borden L. Redcliffe, only brother of the bride.

After a wedding supper at the Perfect Cafe, the happy couple left on a short honeymoon. The bride travelling in a navy blue wool crepe coat with grey trimming.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan will reside on the groom's farm near Crookston.

Sweltering Heat of 90 Degrees

Sarnia, Ont., May 22 (CP)—For the second successive day Sarnians sweltered under mid-summer temperatures. At noon Monday the thermometer registered 90. A light breeze tempered the heat wave somewhat but the river and lake fronts were popular.

Acceptances and Regrets

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please send me a few samples of letters to be used to accept or refuse an invitation?

M.

The kind of invitation determines its reply—as we say, "invitations are answered in kind." That is, formal invitations always demand a formal reply. Informal written invitations require a written note when we respond to them. An invitation by telephone receives the reply by telephone unless for some reason it seems to us that it would be wiser to send a note.

The reply to a formal invitation is written by hand, in the third person, on white or very light note paper. The writing should be in the centre of the page, with even margins above, below and on both sides. In writing the answer to a formal invitation we should use as near as possible the same form as is used in the invitation. And our acknowledgment of a formal invitation is the same whether the invitation invites us to a wedding reception or breakfast, a dinner or a dance.

When we write our acceptance of a formal invitation, we repeat the date and hour, so that if there has been a misunderstanding in regard to either, it may be corrected at once. In a "regret" (this, by the way, is the correct word to use, not the word "refuse" that you used in your question), we of course name the date, but it is not necessary, obviously, to repeat the hour.

This is the form to use when you accept a formal invitation:

Miss Mary Atwater
accepts with pleasure
Mr. and Mrs. Allen's kind invitation for dinner on Tuesday, the first of June at eight o'clock

The "regret" reads either like this:

Miss Mary Atwater
regrets that a previous engagement (or absence from town) prevents her accepting
Mr. and Mrs. Allen's kind invitation for Tuesday, the first of June

or like this:

Miss Mary Atwater
regrets that she is unable to accept
Mr. and Mrs. Allen's
kind invitation for
Tuesday, the first of June

Or acceptance to an informal invitation reads:

Dear Mrs. Allen,
It will give me great pleasure to dine with you on Tuesday, the first of June, at eight o'clock. Thanks you so much for your kind thought of me.

Very sincerely yours,
Mary Atwater.

Or, to an intimate friend:

Dear Dorothy,
Thank you so much for asking me to dine with you on Tuesday, the first of June,, at eight o'clock. I shall be delighted to come, and it will be a great pleasure to see you again.

Devotedly,

The regret reads:

Dear Mrs. Allen,
You were very kind to ask me to dine with you on Tuesday the first of June, and I am so sorry that I shall be unabe to be with you, for I am leaving for Chicago tonight, to be gone for three weeks. I am looking forward to seeing you soon after I return.

Very sincerely yours,

Fashion Flashes

The butterfly flits into the world of fashion as all the shops display clips of various composition materials fashioned into butterflies, spiders, ladybugs, and other insects. Tiny stones make the gleaming eyes.

A pretty notion is a hat of natural leghorn with a trim of rose and pink camelias that match a muff made entirely of the flowers.

Get wise to the fact that the smartest frock for roof-garden dining is made of cotton. A new model, in uncrushable voile, is of cross-barred black and white. It has a belt of red velvet ribbon and a cape of crip mousseline de soie ruffles, deep in the back but short in front.

The velvet touch accents many of the newest ensembles. One model in black taffeta is cross-barred with very narrow black velvet ribbon. The blouse is in white georgette with the jabot edged with narrow white velvet ribbon.

Separate the stock of your handbag by using one of the new bags that have two handbags mounted on one frame. One bag is fitted for money and change, paper and pencil, while the other is for make-up. This opens out and has a mirror attached.

Give a hand to the new silk trimmed doeskin gloves. A smart model with a flared cuff is made of white doeskin with a piping of black taffeta and a trimming of tiny taffeta-covered buttons.

HALLOWAY W. M. S.

The regular monthly meeting of the W.M.S. met at the home of Mrs. Arthur Wilson on Wednesday, May 16. Dinner was served to 16 visitors and members. At 2.30 the president opened the meeting with hymn 372 and repeating the Lord's Prayer in unison. The Scripture lesson was taken from devotional program and led by the president. Hymn 376 was sung and the roll call was answered by short Bible story. Several items of business were discussed. Mrs. Lillie Reid gave a splendid reading and hymn 226 was sung. Miss B. Spencer gave a good reading. Mrs. G. Rose invited the society to her home for the next dinner and meeting. The meeting was closed by the Mizpah Benediction. Proceeds of dinner amounted to $4.00.

DEAD DOG ALIVE BARKS AND EATS

Berkeley, Calif., May 22— The mongrel terrier which "died" on April 13 and was brought back to life, is regaining his strength and trying to shake off mental lethargy.

After 38 days, Lazarus IV, cannot yet stand unaided. But he eats greedily, recognizes certain voices and signals, barks and reveals affection.

Dr. Robert Cornish, 28 year old graduate of the University of California, who asphyxiated the dog and then revived him with powerful stimulants, is not yet ready to claim success for his experiment, which looks toward the saving of human lives. The dog's brain apparently was damaged during the brief period of "death" or while he was being revived. Lazarus IV approximates a half-wit.

Makeup Off at Night
(The Beauty Box)

Kahterine Hepburn

Knows that complexion care is a twenty-four-hour beauty task.

(By HELEN FOLLETT

ONE BEAUTY rule a girl must never break; she must take a clean face to bed. The complexion has not any easy time at best, it is beset with all manner of troubles. Understandard health robs it of its delicate coloring. Sunlight burns and toughens it. Harsh winds brush it while icy winds claw and ruffle surface scales. Atmospheric dust gets in its dirty work, burrows into the pores, destroys velvety texture.

Hence the need of faithful, continuous attentions, —scouring with soap and water, lubricating with a good emollient, brisk patting to urge blood streams to bring nutriment to every individual cell.

All hygienic measures aid the complexion — daily bath, plenty of water taken internally, deep breathing, daily exercise, a balanced diet.

A shining nose distresses many a woman. The powder pad helps only for the time being. Sebaceous glands are on a rampage, pouring a heavy film upon the surface of the skin.

Use witch hazel faithfully after the cold facial tubbing every morning. At night give the complexion a lemon rinse which will cut away the grease and remove soap deposits that may have defied the rinsing. Add the juice of half a lemon to a cup of water, apply with a small sponge or pledgets of cotton, let it dry on. Half an hour later can come the cold creaming rite.

Directions for developing the bust; every night massage gently with coco butter or lanoline, they are equally effective. Every morning, dip a large sponge in ice cold water, lave the breast; be careful not to chill the finger tips.

Stand erect, chest up, backbone properly curved, breathe deeply, swing arms in high, wide circles, an effective movement that lifts and lowers the breasts.

To make up for the laziness of sebaceous glands, the dry-skinned woman must be lavish with creams and complexion oils. It is not enough to apply them, they should be smoothed gently for at least five minutes every day.

Dry skin, dry hair usually, so hair must be basted, too, if shafts are not to weaken, to be torn in two by brush or comb. Brilliantine serves very well. Friction it into the scalp. Rub it over the teeth of the comb when setting the wave. Apply a little bit to tress ends.

SCOTTS' W. M. S.

The regular monthly meeting of the W.M.S. of Scotts' Church was held at Sidney Parsonage, Wednesday, May 9th. The call to worship was given by Mrs. M. B. Sine followed by hymn 253 and prayer by Mrs. Sine. Part of the 9th chapter of St. John's Gospel was read by Mrs. Gerald Sine for the Bible lesson. After the regular business Miss E. Ketcheson gave a short talk on Temperance. Reading by Mrs. Chapman, "Tale of Two Secretaries," Prayer by Mrs. Lott, Mrs. Moon and Mrs. Johnson. A reading by Mrs. Rose, "Jerry Pratt Writes Home." A beautiful solo "Smiling Through" by Miss Margaret Johnson, was enjoyed by all. Mrs. Howard Dafoe gave a comprehensive talk on the 3rd chapter of the Study Book called "Tampering With the Social Root." The social root is the family life which is held most sacred in China. Mrs. Dafoe pointed out that we, as Christians, might do well to emulate our Chinese brothers and sister in their loyalty and devotion to their homes and families. After the closing hymn 142, all repeated the Mizpah Benediction.

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 22 (CP)—Toronto Exchange Industrial shares followed at a distance the New York downward trend which set in today, after the Presidential statement regarding silver had been made public. The President's insistence on the right to say when the proposed silver backing for currency should be brought up to the 30-75 ratio to gold, was said to be one of the bearish features of the session. Losses were mainly in the interlisted section of the board.

Brazilian recovered to 10, closing 1-4 off after hitting 9 3-4 in quite active trading. Pond A was weak at 21, C.P.R. dropped a half point and Nickel closing at $26.30, showed a loss of 60 cents. Distillery shares held up well until the last hour when prices were shaded to 3-8 for Walkers Common, Distillers Seagrams and Industrial Alcohol.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, May 22 (CP)—Accepting the New York market's tone, mining listings on the Toronto Stock Exchange sold down this afternoon soon after Presidident Roosevelt's message to Congress regarding silver was made public. Silver, gold and some of the Base Metal shares dropped as much as 1 bit after a half hour of unloading pressure was lifted and trading process got under way. The majority of the issues, however were still on the down side at the close.

Malartic was the weakest of the big gold group closing at 41 1-4 for a loss of 21 -4c. Dome sagged 50 cents, Wright Hargreaves 10, Bralorne 16 and Pioneer 5c. Hollinger held a gain of 30 cents at $17.35 and Lake Shore added 25 cents.

In the general pressure Eldorado was carried back 30 cents to $3.50 from which point it recovered to $3.65 for a net loss of 15.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, May 22 (AP)—Led by metal shares the stock market turned sharply downward today following President Roosevelt's message to Congress on silver legislation. The selling which accompanied near the end of the fourth hour was active for about 15 minutes but trading again reverted to earlier dullness as mild rallying tendencies appeared. Silver shares dropping 10 to 3 points at their worst included U. S. Smelting, American Smelting, Cerro Pasco and Howe Sound. Utilities were resistant to industrial and rails lost 1 to around 2 points. Transfers approximated 820,000 shares.

Produce Market

Toronto, May 22 (CP)—Wholesale prices on produce delivered at Toronto as supplied by the United Farmers Co-operative Company to-day were: Eggs, grade "A" large, 19c; grade "A" medium, 18c; grade 1c Grade "C" cot. 14c; Churning cream, 1 lb. first 30 cents to 24c; Butter No. 1 solids lb. 20 1-2c; No. 2 solids 19c. Dressed poultry: Chickens, heavy 35c; Broilers, 40c; Dealer's price on live poultry: White beans, in carlots F.O.B., at point of shipment $1.75 1-2c.

NATS READY FOR OPENING

Jack "Chief" Williams Will Likely Hurl Morning Game

With Jack "Chief" Williams, recently reinstated pro. hurler, who in the heyday of Belleville's baseball teams reigned supreme as the outstanding pitcher in amateur ranks, back in the fold with his old love, the Belleville Nationals open the 1934 Central Ontario League season on Thursday (Victoria Day) in a twin bill with the up-and-coming Oshawa Dukes as their opponents with a game in the morning and a second game in the afternoon.

Williams with his lengthy and successful sojourn in professional baseball circles behind him, will naturally assay his team mates. For the past three weeks the Nationals have been practicing for the opening season, right well knowing the opposition confronting them on opening day. Oshawa has had the experience of nearly three weeks actual play in the Ulster Stadium loops. Manager Mills, after unsuccessfully trying to develop a youthful club in 1933, returns to the diamond this spring with a number of tried and proven veterans, along with some of the youngsters who proved promising last year. Besides Williams, the Nationals have Ernie Smith, Carl Jones, with the team in 1933; Vinny Utzuski, and a junior named Shakespeare to choose their hurling staff from. This assortment of pitchers provides the team with plenty of pitching ability for the first few games. Mills has will be Roy Smith, the Lou Gehrig of the club; Sonny Green is to retain his old position in the second, while a newcomer to senior ball, Dean Peck, will cover third base, with plenty of fielding ability and a powerful stick. Another newcomer is likely to step in cass Vaughan Jack, another reinstated player, who is slated to play left field. Either of these lads will prove a decided improvement to the club over the short fielders to have worn the Nats' uniform at that position in recent years. Johnston is expected to be one of the fastest players on the club, will be given another chance at the first corner position. Chuck Barrtage, the team's veteran third sacker being held for retaining his old berth along with a promising lad named Long from Picton.

Without fear of contradiction the outfield is stronger than in many years past with such ball hawks as Art Wellington, Earl Weir, Vinny Utzuski, Mase Hight, Vaughan Jack and other available outer gardener. The team will take the field all decked out to be found new uniforms and wine breakers, both black trimmed with white.

After a rather faulty start in the Ontario Southern League the Oshawa seem to have struck their stride as was demonstrated when they defeated the leading Danforths by the score of 10 to 7 on Saturday. Manager Sullion has a good hurling staff in Dony Ogden, Maggie Pride, Matty Sutton, Lefty Wills and Walt Knox, while the breaking date is well taken care of by Theo Elliott. Ah. Young, who learned his baseball in Belleville, is at present playing first, with Red Hollingsworth, ex-Petes'boro infielder, holding down shortstop. The game is a regular C.O.D.L. fixture and will be preceded by a short opening ceremony at which many baseball notables from Eastern Ontario will take part.

With rejuvenated interest the fans are anxiously awaiting the umpire's cry of "Play Ball" to send the 1934 edition of the Belleville Nationals on their way in quest of another senior Provincial baseball title on Thursday morning at ten o'clock.

Orioles in Market for Manager When F. McGowan Resigns

Asks President to Move Him to Some Other Club

By the Associated Press

Baltimore Orioles, struggling to get out of the cellar in the International League, were in the market for a manager today to replace Frank McGowan, heavy hitting outfielder.

McGowan, who took over the reins when Prils Maisel quit last year, resigned yesterday and asked President Ernest Kump to "make some other connection for him." Pending the selection of a new leader, Kump placed Wally Gilbert former St. Louis and Rochester star in charge of the club.

Gilbert got to pour pitching the Orioles have been unable to rise higher than sixth place this year and since May 10 have been firmly entrenched in last place, an unusual position for a Baltimore team. The night game with Albany was rained out last night, leaving the team with a record of only eight victories and conquered to 21 defeats.

In only seven games have Baltimore hurlers gone the route, Earl Moore turned in three of the complete performances while Beryl Richmond, Cliff Melton, Pete Appleton and George Granger hurled one full game each.

Three runs for the be best interest of anyone for me to remain as a player," McGowan said in turning in his resignation. An effort will be made to locate McGowan with some other club.

Johnny Neun, now with Newark and also a former Yankee first baseman, is said to be in line for the job if he desires it.

Two Games Played

Only two games were played in the circuit yesterday. The pace-setting Rochester Red Wings raced out Montreal Royals 8-3 and Toronto Maple Leafs blanked Buffalo Bisons 2-0.

Three home runs, two of them by Tom Winsett, were largely responsible for Rochester's victory. Estell Crabtree got the other home run.

While Keith Frazier was holding the Bisons to four hits, the Leafs made the most of their five blows off George (Lefty) Milstead and Bill Gould. They counted once in the fifth on a pair of singles and a base on ball and added another in the fifth on a pair of ree tickets, a sacrifice and a fielder's choice.

Lacrosse—The lacrosse sticks have arrive and there are two left over for those who desire one. The Aajmaa Lacrosse team have undergone stringent practices this last week. Everyone desiring to play lacrosse must turn out to every practice from now on which by the way will be held at Queen Mary School Grounds every Tuesday and Friday until further notice. The lacrosse executive have made application for the Albert College new rugby field for the summer months. If this field is rolled it will be the ideal spot for lacrosse. The players that Friday honored Ed Goodier as playing coach. Now it is up to the boys to back him and give Ed a chance to pick out his team. Peterboro would be down and this will most likely be played Saturday, June 2nd. Ed Goodier and Gordon Delaney will attend the O.A.L.A. meeting at Norwood which will be held shortly.

Wrestling—The wrestling executive have been given the use of the B.C.I. wrestling mat for the summer. Steve Tyler is coach for the wrestlers.

Dave Batchelor won the checker championship for the week but unfortunately he didn't meet Wyatt so he was forced to meet this week. Johnny Grant is Deseloo champion but Dave said he would take it away from Johnny this week.

HAND BOOK ON BALL IS FREE

Published by Kellogg Co. And Contains Valuable Information

Canada's ambitious young ball players, who look forward to excelling on the school, college or professional diamonds, will find a unique opportunity to learn the fundamentals and intricacies of the game through a new and "different" baseball book published by the Kellogg Co. well-known manufacturers of Pep, Rice Krispies, Corn Flakes, All-Bran and other cereals.

The feature, that distinguishes the book and gives it its outstanding value is the graphic and easy to manner in which it covers the many factors that contribute to the making of a great ball player. The cover is in full color and the foreword is a message from Mr. W. K. Kellogg, Founder and President of the Company, in which he stressed the importance of "playing the game" in life itself as well as in sports.

The opening article deals with the problem of determining the position you are really best fitted to play. "Study yourself" is the advice given, and it is pointed out that even great players like Ty Cobb and Babe Ruth had to first spend years in perfecting the form that was necessary before they learn the best way to do everything a ball player does, but developing your style, is the strongest sound advice given the young player.

Many Illustrations

The Book is full of 64 pages containing more than forty illustrations and diagrams, which supplement the text in explaining such factors as the importance of batting form, how to grip the ball in throwing an curve, how to slide to bases, where players should stand to play in front or to the right or left of usual. Practically every play that enters into the play of baseball is clearly illustrations or both. Following the instructive articles come interesting baseball records, which are filled with the records of great players in baseball's past and present.

The Kellogg Baseball book has been written by Al Schacht, celebrity on the game who shows that he thoroughly understands the art of teaching others how to play. Copies of the book may be obtained free from grocers with the purchase of two packages of Kellogg's Pep. In any instance where the grocer does not have the book, it may be obtained by sending two Pep package tops to the Kellogg Company at London Canada.

CHURCH LOOP

Two softball games were played in the Church loop last night when Christ Church "A" team defeated their "B" rivals by the score of 26 to 7, while St. Michael's downed Holloway St. United nine by the score of 8 to 5.

The game played between St. Mikes' and Holloway St. proved a thriller with both teams doing the ball of their own batting in the last few frames. The Irishers bagged three runs in the last two innings to clinch the honors while the Woodley-coached team from the west hill failed miserably with runners on the paths.

The line up:

St. Michaels—Davidson, Pitzgibbon, Durnan, Adams, Bihler, Donovan, Peets, Doran and Boyle.

BOXING

Five midget boxers from the South End A. C. were taken by Kingston by Matchmaker Joe Samalin last evening, when they appeared on an all-star boxing card that included some of the best boxers in Eastern Ontario, all the having to be under 100 pounds in weight. The Belleville contingent fared quite well during the program having the pitting a draw and losing two decisions.

Bobby Wilson, Bantam, the local lads at 60 pounds, opened the show with three fast rounds, the bout called a draw. Stan Jodrey, S.E.A.C. lost the Judge's decision in the Bantam at 80 pounds after three hectic rounds of boxing and slugging. Jodrey was the only local S.E.A.C. boxer to receive the short end of the decision, the most spectacular bout of the evening, when Samuin slugged it out with Glen White at 65 pounds. This bout was voted the best of the night.

Following the show of kids under 100 pounds, Matchmaker Joe Samalin of the local boxing club, was taken up with the kid night's card that he completed arrangements to have ten of these boys come to Belleville in the near future and meet their local lads. The boys are practically all novices, but more than the usual amount of action is seen, when these kids step into the ring and start exchanging leather.

TENNIS

Wilmington, Del., May 22 (AP)—Members of the Canadian and United States Davis Cup teams meet today, the Yankees coming here from their training quarters at Ardmore, Pa., to try the courts on which the first round of cup play will be held the last half of the week.

Gilbert Nunns, captain of the Canadian Davis Cup tennis team, refuses to predict victory over the United States netmen in the matches Thursday, Friday and Saturday, but he does "hope to make a good showing."

"We have a fairly well balanced team," he declared yesterday as the Canadians awaited arrival of Phillip D. Lyons, president of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association.

Light practice was held yesterday with Walter Martin and Marcel Rainville defeating the only two sets in which score was kept, but today Coach Wilbur Leith' captain says his final selection of the team will be decide our line-up."

Tomorrow will be devoted to making the draw, and practice will be resumed.

Lyons is expected to put in an appearance.

With Wilmer Allison back on the courts and Bidwell Jr. Wood is limbering diagnosed as nothing more serious than bruises, the United States team has nothing left to worry it. Neither Allison or Wood was dismissed to play against the Canadians and they remained at the Merion Cricket Club in Ardmore, to practice with John Van Ryn. The rest of the team, Frederick Perry, George Lott and Lester Stoefen—are with the Belleville contingent Richard Williams and Trainer Hans Nemelin.

RECREATION ALLEYS

The Coca Cola took the Pick-ups into camp for three points to win the championship of the Junior league. C. Cosss was high man for the Coca Cola with 600 and C. Scopis was high for the Pick-ups with 631.

Three mixed teams from Kingston bowled Recreation last night for a return game in which two of the local teams came out on top.

Team No. 1 of Belleville took all four points from Team No. 1 from the Bowladrome.

Team No. 2 of Belleville lost all four points to Team No. 2 of Kingston.

COUNCIL APPROVES PROBE

Stratford, Ont., May 22—(CP)—Stratford relief workers' request for a probe into the relief situation here has been approved by city council. The workers went on strike a week ago after a number of them refused to work on a stone pile, claiming the job was dangerous and unnecessary because a stone crusher was available in the city.

AVERILL HITS TWO HOMERS INDIANS WIN

Yankees Not Going So Wall as Hurling is Quite Poor

CARDS DEFEATED

Ousted From Second Place by up And Coming Pirates

All but invincible in their own ballpark on the banks of the Harlem, New York Yankees have met with a warmer welcome on their first trip into the west than they had bargained for.

The collapse of Joe McCarthy's pitching staff was further emphasized yesterday when Cleveland Indians hammered George Uhle out of the box in less than two innings and piled up nine runs. Mel Ait dropped thereafter and handed the Yankees their fourth defeat in five games on the West, 9-6. Monday the Yanks, the Indians, in second place, shared the honors in the American League lead to 3½ games.

Once a Cleveland pitching idol Uhle weathered a three-run attack, climaxed by Earl Averill's home run with two on in the first inning but went to the showers with only one down in the second after the Indians had pushed over two more counters. Van Alta was freely punished as the rest of the Tribe set-up helped him for a single that drove in one of the two runs the Indians scored in the fourth, and for his second homer of the game and fifth of the season in the sixth.

Manager Mickey Cochrane's single with the bases filled in the ninth gave Detroit at 6-5 decision over Washington and strengthened the Tigers' grip on third place, a game ahead of the Senators. Three home runs, including Jimmy Foxx's eighth, paved the way for Philadelphia's 7-3 triumph over St. Louis. Rowan, who previously dropped from fifth to seventh place, the Athletics nearing up the slide rung. Boston Red Sox gained fifth place with a 13-10 victory over Chicago White Sox in 10 innings.

National League

Developments in the National League were marked by a return to second place of Pittsburg Pirates after they had rubbed that post for a day to St. Louis Cardinals. Arky Vaughan contributed a home run double and two singles to Pittsburgh's 17-hit attack which resulted in an 11-4 decision over the Phillies. Larry French, Pirate southpaw ace, went the route for the first time this season.

The Cardinals, meanwhile dropped a 3-2 verdict to New York Giants as Joe Bowman pitched effective ball after a shaky start. Summoned for starting duty after Fred Fitzsimmons had been injured by a flying bat during pre-game practice, Bowman was nicked for two runs and five hits in the first three frames but blanked the Cardinals with three hits the rest of the way.

Chicago Cubs remained in first place by turning a 10-3 victory over Brooklyn in a game that lasted 3 hours and 20 minutes. The Boston-Cincinnati duel was rained out.

CURRENT SPORT

(Day By Day)

Owing to yesterday's hearty rain the Belleville-Picton ball game was cancelled. Every effort is being made to have the game played this afternoon, that is, providing the grounds are suitable. In the meantime the team is holding last minute workouts in order to be fit and ready for the opening of the season Thursday morning with the Oshawa Times.

The Nationals have a 19 game schedule this year of which they expect Jack Wallace to pitch more than his share of victories. Wallace is, despite all rumors to the contrary, in excellent condition and backed by ten years of professional experience should enjoy a season more before equalled by a hurler in the Central League. Ernie Smith only has to win four games and he will be twice as good as he was last season while Thrasher must win five games to double his winnings of 1933. The executive have planned for a full house each season tickets this year. For the small sum of two dollars a fan is assured of a grandstand seat to ten home games, which amounts to 20c per game.

Golf stories and golf achievements are in order to-day. It took one of Belleville's youngest sprouts, Sam Ord by name, to turn the trick, Harry Ridley, playing in competition with Jack Marsh and Joe Lapsley turned in a 81 score on under par. He had a birdie on the seventh.

Despite their numerous imports the Brockville baseball team ran into a snag on Saturday, when an ex-team mate, "Slim" Flynn, bested Ted Clancy and Lefty Weeks, as Smith's Falls beat them 4 to 3 in 11 innings. Clancy hails from Philadelphia while Weeks and Catcher Udell played for the Thomas "Tomcat" last season. Apparently Mickey Compeau and Vin McQuade did not burn up the game as their names were not even so much as mentioned in the press dispatches following the game.

Yesterday a local veteran track and field man stopped me and after rambling about on the subject of field days, suggested that perhaps the wrong system is being applied in the matter of track and field ing.

will bring a good card of wrestlers to Belleville at least once a month. Thanking you for the above space, I am,

ROLLER PASSES OVER BOY

Kerrwood, Ont., May 22.—(CP)—William Foster, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Foster who resides two miles east of here, is in dangerous condition today from injuries received when the roller struck a gale post and the team of horses bolted. His skull was fractured and his chest crushed at the heavy roller passed over him.

athletes at the Collegiate. "They don't specialize on the events they are most adapted to," he pointed out. I went on to say that it would be far better if the point system was discarded, especially in the senior series. The bulk of the competitors were completely exhausted after last Wednesday's meet and therefore could not be expected to give a creditable account of their ability during the regional meet Saturday.

By dispensing with the point system and not declaring any school champion in the senior series the athletes would be more inclined to centre their training on the few events in which the particular contestant was most adapted. For instance if Smith is a fair prospect in the broad jump, discus, high jump and 100 yard dash, he should not try the 440 or 880 yard dash. With the present point system in vogue the boys tired themselves out trying to pile up as many points as possible and enter all events. It would be better if the boys were master of one or two events, than jack of all and master of none, said our informant on leaving. By discarding the point system the school would be educating the various athletes to centre their efforts on the events best adaptable to them, thus raising the standard of their field day. The athletes could practice for the field day to become or better the standards attained the year previous. Another good thing the contestants plenty of competition.

An effort is being made this week to form a Belleville Junior Baseball League for C.O.A.A. competition. At present the Crystallates and the Big "A" team have signified their intentions of entering such a proposition, while another team is now in the making. Those at the helm of the organization are desirous of a fourth club in order to round out a compact fourteam loop. Any person, group or organization interested in sponsoring a junior team in Belleville should get into communication with Secretary Ellis.

The softballers over at Central Park were forced to postpone the first game of the playoffs in the Wall Street League last evening. The game between the Beavers and Grills will be played this evening.

10 BOX CARS SPLINTERED

was the polite but firm refusal on the part of Canadian National officials when queried. You can see, however, that the delay was only temporary.

Other officials at the scene of the wreck this morning were elated by an enormous hot firm in their refusal to comment on the scentracks. Rail crews started the work of straightening and replacing the torn up sections of rail, and replacing some of the four hundred ties that were scarred and battered by the flanges of cars. Relief was being brought up to fill up the deep depression in the road-bed. By 10.30 o'clock the line had almost returned to normal.

Scores of motorcars and hundreds of visitors from Belleville and surrounding district gave the scene of the wreck a holiday air all day. They swarmed about the tracks in spite of the efforts of police and train crews to keep them out of the way. Ignoring the heavy chain many of them stayed on until the last scrap of wreckage had been cleared and trains were running as normal on both lines again. During the morning a single line had been used to carry both east and west-bound traffic.

Between the ten crumpled cars and the caboose at the rear of the train no other damage had been reported. The cars appeared undamaged and evidently emerged through the wreck unstrained. The shock of the impact at the rear of the train, as usually reported by the end crew of the train was light. Only a slight jar was reported felt in the caboose immediately following the crash, the rear end crew discovered ruptureless by back tracking and setting out flags and signals.

Today's wreck has not been duplicated in this district for many years, old time railway men of the past have been mentioned by those reported. It is believed that the last million wreck in the division occurred near Gananoque some three or four months ago when a light derailment tied up the lines briefly.

Built-In "SHOCK ABSORBERS"

Every Gutta Percha and Roadcraft Tire is built of the highest-quality cotton cords, every strand impregnated with and protected by rubber.

These protected cords are built into criss-cross layers for added strength, and are further protected at crucial points by broad pads of live gum rubber built-in between the plies to safeguard the cords from damage, as shown in the photograph at the left. See for yourself how blows on the tread or side-walls would be cushioned by these "shock-absorbers." There are 7 of them—the 5 you see in the photograph and 2 on the other side of the tire. Letters to the Sport Editor

May 21, 1934

Sport Editor, Ontario Intelligencer, City.

Dear Sir:

Through the medium of your paper I should like to acquaint the Sport fans of this city with a few facts in regard to the wrestling bouts promoted by the Kiwanis Club.

I have attended the last three bouts sponsored by the Kiwanis and must say to fairness to those who actively took part that they are to be congratulated on obtaining such a good class of wrestlers. I have honored to promote several times to see the bouts there, which really are not worth the whole put on in Belleville, in fact how the Kiwanis can put on such a good card as an outfit lower professional than is charged in Toronto is beyond me. George Lee must have Tommy McClure hypnotized.

The attendance at these bouts is small and must be very discouraging to those who give their time and effort towards making them a success.

There is a good card slated for the 24th of May. Let us all get together and pack the old Armouries and help out a sport, which has merit as well as the good cause of the Kiwanis.

Just one good house, which each individual can help make, will surely be the means of encouraging those behind the game, so that they sons to encourage Community Singing," under the leadership of Mr. Sandy Burrows, community song leader, with Mr. Geo. Hughes at the piano. Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne asked to say grace. During the banquet several favourite songs were sung.

TWEED HOSTS TO ROTARIANS

Mr. Joe Shortt, Secretary of Belleville Y.M.C.A., was appointed Sergeant-at-Arms with instructions to carry a fine of ten cents on any one who was found not singing. In spite of his clever watch he was unable to find anyone from whom he could collect, so much did everyone enjoy the entire affair. He was compelled to ask the President if he might collect a fine from two fellows who didn't stop singing soon enough.

VISITORS WELCOMED

At the conclusion of the banquet, Dr. W. A. Paul, the President, asked the audience to drink the toast to the King and sing the National Anthem. Following this he called upon Reeve W. H. Sayers, of Tweed, who, on behalf of the town, extended a welcome to the visitors. Dr. Paul, the genial wire-wire President of the newly-organized Community Club, welcomed the members of Belleville Rotary Club and Chamber of Commerce to the first Community Club banquet held in Tweed. He referred to the motto of the Rotary Club, which is "Service Before Self." He said the organization was welcome because of its purposes and because of the goodwill of which its visit gave evidence. He spoke of the pottery as delightful and gave as a model purpose of the local Club the burning of the Improvement which may be the intake of anyone and the clearing up of misunderstandings. He said that if anyone joins a Community Club he will be benefited in time and money in bonds which will always pay dividends. The bonds may not be gilt-edged but they will be bonded, at the golden rule. He said that co-operation is an essential factor, if the Club is to succeed. In Tweed, he said that the interest manifested by the splendid audience was a sufficient guarantee of the future success of the organization locally.

ED BERNSTEIN PRESIDES

Dr. Paul then called upon Mr. F. Bernstein, President of Belleville Rotary Club, to have charge of the remainder of the programme. Mr. Bernstein expressed the appreciation of the guests for the invitation extended them to be present at the initial banquet held by the newly organized Club. He referred to the splendid time enjoyed by the Rotarians on the occasion of their regular visit, which they made to Tweed in the autumn of 1932. He said that to meet people in this condition of affairs Rotary itself is to blame because they are poor advertisers. This, however, should call forth commendation rather than condemnation because one does not advertise one's good deeds. He gave a brief history of the origin of Rotary, which was begun in 1905 in Chicago by Paul Harris, a lawyer, the first national association was organized in 1910 and in 1912 it was introduced into Canada, in Winnipeg and in the same year into England.

Today there are 130,000 Rotarians in 70 countries belonging to 3600 clubs. Each local organization has its own purpose and work, that of Belleville Club, having to do mainly with crippled children, but they are also interested in boys' work and in providing milk for undernourished school children. He quoted the 4 objects of Rotary Clubs and stated that the fourth purpose, the development of acquaintance as an opportunity for service was the main object of their visit to Tweed.

Improvement Noted

His Worship, Mayor Geo. O. Tice, of Belleville spoke of his pleasure in being present. He referred to the work necessary in Belleville during the past three years in providing relief for the needy but noted a marked improvement in conditions this year. He complimented Tweed on the formation of a Community Club and paid tribute to the Rotary Club of Belleville. He invited all the Rotarians in Belleville during the week of June 16th when the city celebrates the hundredth anniversary since being made a police village. He concluded with greetings from Belleville.

Mr. Wm. Springer, President of Belleville Chamber of Commerce spoke briefly a word of appreciation.

Mr. James Mahler, always a favorite in Tweed, delighted the audience with "The Road That Leads to You" and "Springtime Will Come Back to Me", with Mr. Leo Riggs playing the accompaniment. Mr. John Thompson sang "The Pirate Song" and gave an amusing monologue as an encore.

Miss Dorothy Sager, A.T.C.M., of Peterboro, one of Tweed's favorite daughters, sang beautifully "Come to The Fair" and "Coming Home", accompanied by Mr. Charles Allen of Stirling.

Judge Lavell Chief Speaker

Mr. G. H. Scott, past president of the Belleville Rotary Club in introducing Judge Lavell of Kingston, guest speaker, gave a brief account of His Honor's career from his graduation from Queen's University to his appointment as County Judge of Frontenac. Judge Lavell spoke on the subject of the "Bright Side of Law". He said that it was unfortunate in his official capacity that he must address people who didn't want to hear him even though he only speaks a "sentence" to them. Judge Lavell's address dealt with numerous instances which had come under his personal observation, since he began to practice the profession of the law, which gave a ray of sunshine to the usual drab, dull business. He spoke of the error on the part of some lawyers in pressing a witness too far and drawing from him answers which cause him to lose the value of a point which he hoped to make. He said that he thought the Irish had too high a reputation for humour, but quoted one instance of an Irishman in a witness box who lived up to the reputation of his race who stated when asked how long his wife had been dead, replied that if she had lived until the first of July she would be four years dead. He spoke of the difficulty in getting witnesses to locate time with some exactness and the humorous situations aroused in court by a lawyer pressing the point too closely with a witness. Many amusing situations were referred to by Judge Lavell who delighted his audience with his humour and showed that even such drab things as the Law and Courtrooms have their humorous side.

W. E. Tummon, M. P. Present

Mr. W. E. Tummon, M.P., a member of Belleville Rotary Club, spoke of the work of the committee in charge of the banquet. He referred especially to the efforts of the President, Dr. Paul in making it a success. He compared the local club with that in Belleville and said that the well-being of everyone in a community like Tweed was a matter of concern for a Community Club. He hoped to see the citizens of Tweed take up the matter of the leisure time of the ten-age boys to keep them engaged in wholesome pursuits.

Mr. Charles Dolan of Belleville kept the audience in a jovial mood by his fund of humorous anecdotes.

Miss Dorothy Sager again delighted the audience with her singing.

Mr. William Parker, Manager of Belleville Branch of the Royal Bank of Canada, spoke of the time he was manager of the Murray-Gordon Bank in Tweed thirty years ago. In the reminiscences he referred especially to Dr. Mather who was a particular friend of his at that time. He spoke of the pleasure of returning to renew old acquaintances.

Mr. M. P. Duff, ex-Mayor of Belleville expressed his appreciation of the splendid entertainment particularly referring to the excellent banquet.

The concluding musical number, "Brown October Ale" by Sandy Burrows and his chorus was loudly applauded.

Mr. T. D. Corcoran, Vice-President, expressed on behalf of the club his appreciation of the work of all those who had contributed to the success of the evening.

Auld Lang Syne brought to a close an event which should mark the beginning of a brighter day for the people of Tweed and the surrounding district.

NATIONAL PARK WANTED IN N.S.

Yarmouth, N.S., May 23 (CP)—With spring in the air Board of Trade committees throughout Nova Scotia are preparing for the tourist trade.

At a meeting of the Board of Trade in Yarmouth, Chairman Seymour C. Baker presented a resolution asking that the Nova Scotia Government be requested to have a surveyor of the National Parks Department come to this district to examine suitable areas for a national park in Western Nova Scotia.

Mr. Baker told the committee that Premier Angus L. Macdonald and Attorney-General J. H. MacQuarrie, Minister of Lands and Forests, were both favorably impressed with the establishment of national parks in this province. He also pointed to the beauty of the lake-land country in the province which, he said, was especially suited for a park.

The resolution was unanimously accepted by the members of the committee.

DEPARTMENT OF HIGHWAYS
MOTOR VEHICLES BRANCH

AN OPEN LETTER TO PEDESTRIANS:

Are motorists right when they say you are more than half to blame?

While figures cannot be depended upon to tell the whole truth, last year's accident records leave no room for doubt that there are reckless walkers as well as reckless drivers.

Last year 2,821 pedestrians were killed or injured in Ontario in automotive accidents. Many of these persons came to grief while violating a simple rule of safety . . . crossing a street between intersections . . . crossing diagonally at intersections . . . crossing against traffic signals . . . "hitching" . . . or coming from behind parked vehicles. Of the total number, 1,107 were children playing in the street.

Records show that in many of these cases the driver never had a chance. Accidents happened while he was doing his best to drive safely!

This department is more deeply interested in making the streets and highways of Ontario safe, especially for children, than in any other public duty. The conscientious motorist has frequently appealed to in many ways; several of his privileges have been restricted in an effort to make life safe in traffic for all. I know that this appeal to the pedestrian will find ready response among those who walk more often than they drive, and especially in the hearts of fathers and mothers of little children.

Will you co-operate? Will you help to stem the tide of needless bereavement and suffering by observing the simple rules of safe walking that make all the difference between safety and the jeopardy of life and limb? And you parents—will you not give your children a chance by teaching them the need of care for their own safety?

MINISTER

Toronto, May 7th, 1934.

Hon. W. G. Martin Speaker at Picton C. A. S. Meeting

Representatives of Various Organizations Present at Gathering

Picton.—On Thursday evening, May 17th, the semi-annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society was held in the Baptist Church. At six o'clock, Mr. Fred Herman, president of the Society, was host to 125 guests, at a banquet served in the basement of the church. These guests were representatives of the various branches of the Women's Institute of the County, the I.O.D.E., the Girl Guides, the Orange Lodge, the Toumans Y, the Kiwanis and societies and persons who are interested in the work of the Society. At seven o'clock a meeting, addressed by Hon. W. G. Martin, Minister of Public Welfare, was open to the public, in the body of the church. This meeting was very largely attended. Rev. T. E. Blanchard opened the meeting with prayer. The president then introduced Mr. Martin, who gave a comprehensive survey of the work the Department of Public Welfare is doing.

Mr. Martin commended the fine work that is being done by the organizations represented at the banquet, in working for the improvement of social conditions and for underprivileged children. He stated that the Government had tried to do its share by providing Relief, Workmen's Compensation, Mothers' Allowances, and Old Age Pensions. The Department of Public Welfare looks after the care for the 24,000 handicapped children in Ontario. There have been established the School for Blind at Brantford, and for the Deaf at Belleville, besides hundreds of auxiliary classes in Ontario schools, that provide for children who need special teaching.

A month ago the Department of Public Welfare held "Crippled Children's Week" when it was found that there were 400 children in Ontario needing Orthopaedic care. Help has since been given a great number of these. Mr. Martin spoke of the 32,000 children who have been cared for by the C.A.S. since its founding in 1892. He mentioned Acts of Parliament that had benefited underprivileged children.—The Children's Adoption Act, The Children of Unmarried Parents' Act, and the Amendment to the Industrial School Act. Since the legislation of physical and mental defects and wrong home conditions, to juvenile delinquency had been discovered, there are 23 per cent. less delinquents sent to Industrial Schools in Ontario. Many children are rendered to society by medical care and wholesome surroundings. Mr. Martin described the Newmarket Boys' School and the new school for girls in Waterloo County near Galt. He explained the benefits of Mothers Allowances and the work of the Soldiers' Aid Commission. In looking after the children of the men who made the supreme sacrifice in the Great War, Mr. Martin is of the opinion, equality of his address was brightened by many whimsical stories, and apt political quotations.

Mr. Colin Carter, president of the Kiwanis Club, moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Martin, which was seconded by Mr. Silas Blakely.

Mrs. W. R. Browne appealed to the organizations present for continued support of the work of the C.A.S., and thanked them for the help they had given in the past six months.

The meeting closed with prayer by Rev. S. M. Scott.

Mr. and Mrs. S. V. Hambly are expected home next week after spending the past year in Florida.

S. S. CLASS IS ENTERTAINED

West Huntingdon.—The Endeavor B. S. class of United Church met at Mr. Clayton Wright's for their monthly social evening. Mrs. Clayton Wright, president, presided over a very interesting programme that had been prepared by herself. After the singing of "Onward Christian Soldiers" Mr. Philip Carr led in prayer. Readings were given by Mrs. Foster Wilson and Mrs. Howard Cook. A duet by Mrs. Melville Reid and Mrs. Clifford Millott. Roll call was answered by Bible characters. Some plans were discussed relative to class membership. After meeting was closed all enjoyed a lunch served by the hostess. Next place of meeting, Mr. and Mrs. Flischett's.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Fargey and Christina left on Thursday for their new home at Stirling. Many friends and neighbors gathered on Wednesday evening at their home here to tender them a farewell and presented Mr. and Mrs. Fargey with a floor lamp and Christina with a walnut end table. Mr. Chester Hills read an address to them and Miss Lottie Lanigan read the following address:

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Fargey and Christina:

Dear Friends,

The old order changeth, yielding place to new. It is with this thought uppermost in our minds that we come in upon you this evening in this informal way. We have not come to say good-bye, but we just hope to see you often. But we wish to show something of our appreciation of your services in this community, for you have been a part of the community life of this neighborhood for more than a score of years and by doing since your departure is no near it is difficult for us to believe that you are actually moving. We thought you had become a permanent fixture. We are sure you that you will always be pleasantly remembered in your Ridge Road friends. We earnestly hope you will be happy in your new home as you have been and that every blessing will be yours. We ask you to accept this gift and as you see it is useful, dare it will remind you of your many friends in Rawdon Township.

Signed on behalf of the community

Sandy McCurdy
Harold McGee
Andy McInroy
John McInroy.

Mr. and Mrs. Fargey made suitable replies. Speeches were also given by Mrs. J. C. Wilson, Mrs. Volney Richardson, Messrs. Sandy McCurdy, Philip Carr and Arthur Wilson. Lunch and a social hour brought the happy gathering to a close.

Miss Lily Post of Ridge Road spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Post, of Moira.

Due to increased traffic the cement bridge at foot of Luke's Hill and the one on Ridge Road known as McCurdy's Bridge are found to be dangerous as they are too narrow. In view of this the committee on roads and bridges have decided to widen them and preparations have begun this week. Mr. Mac. Post is the engineer.

A very helpful and inspiring prayer service was held at Mr. Wm. Reay's home on Mill St. on Tuesday evening, when the pastor of Mr. R. J. Armstrong, pastor of Bridge Street Church, Belleville. There was a good attendance present and all enjoyed the wonderful address of Mr. Armstrong on "Power for God and with the Spirit." Mr. Armstrong remained in the community for a few days and made numerous calls at homes of the people. Prayer was the keynote with the service that other homes have been offered for this talented minister for prayer service.

Miss Matilda Fargey of Belleville spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Mark Fargey, of Moira.

Mrs. Alex Rummell and Constance Wannamaker motored to Belleville week at Mr. Philip Carr's.

1933 Butter Consumption Shows Enormous Increase

Prices However Lower During Year, Report Shows

Low prices were the keynote of the butter trade in the United Kingdom in the year 1933, both wholesale and retail, but an enormous increase in consumption of that product has followed. Regarding the consumption of cheese "it is not possible to give a very encouraging report on the consumption, notwithstanding the low wholesale and retail prices that obtained consistently throughout the year," according to the report of the butter and cheese trade of the United Kingdom for the year 1933, as given by the Commercial Intelligence Journal of the Department of Trade and Commerce.

The report which follows is bi' believed particularly to cheese makers and those connected with the cheese and dairy industry in the Belleville and central section:

Butter

The principal features of the butter trade in 1933 were the more or less consistently low prices both wholesale and retail, and the enormous increase in consumption that followed. Before the decline in prices in the depression period, the normal weekly consumption of butter was around 11,200,000 pounds. This has gradually increased to about 20,160,000 pounds.

Cheese

It is not possible to give a very encouraging report on the consumption of cheese, notwithstanding the low wholesale and retail prices that obtained consistently throughout 1933. For the past three years, as the statistics show, New Zealand has dominated the market, and retailers are influenced to adjust their policy to fit the supply from that Dominion, particularly as it is the cheapest. The consumer is gradually being educated accordingly.

Canadian Cheese

The quality and uniformity of Canadian cheese and the larger volume are more pronounced than ever, but its tonnage has declined compared with 1932, and relatively it is so much smaller than the volume of cheddars from New Zealand that the selling price has fallen more under the influence of the lower-selling product. There is no misconception, of course, of the specialised trade that will not sell anything but well-matured Canadian cheddar. Part of this trade and a small percentage of other cheddars, but it is rather limited in competition with the total turnover. Further, some houses prefer to mature their own cheese, and they want to make their selection when the cheese is young. They are prepared to balance the financial risk against the opportunity of obtaining the extra value for the matured product. It is not reasonable, therefore, to expect a price return for all Canadian cheese comparable with the higher price realized for that percentage, the sale of which is not negotiated until the cheese is aged and matured to the point of excellence. If that objective became the aim of the producer and shipper in Canada, and even if the total production could be financed, it would probably result in narrowing the British outlet for well-matured cheddars. Buyers would interpret it as forcing a change in their policy, and this would lead to endeavour on their part as to how their trade needs could be substituted.

The freedom of trading that has obtained in connection with Canadian products, in contrast to that which has developed with most of the other exporting countries, is a factor that is appreciated in the United Kingdom, and assists very materially in maintaining and developing goodwill.

New Zealand, it is shown by trade and navigation returns in reporting on the imports of cheese during 1933 into the United Kingdom, has obtained an enormous lead over Canada in the race for markets there. The gain of New Zealand and decrease in Canadian export is clearly shown by the following returns:

New Zealand — 1931, 1,722,630 cwt.; 1932, 1,849,153 cwt.; 1933, 2,050,393 cwt.

The home industry has expanded noticeably in recent years, and the surplus milk that is offered to the cheese factories in the dairying centres has become so heavy that the problem of using it has become serious. In relation to the volume of cheese that is imported because the price to the producer is fixed on the average value of New Zealand and Canadian cheddar cheese. The expansion of the dairying farms in New Zealand and the lower prices that have followed have added to the anxiety, and discussions have taken place, hoping for agreement voluntarily on some reduction on shipments, but without result. The economic position of the home industry was involved, and this included the Milk Marketing Scheme and the prices the management were able to pay for the milk for manufacturing as well as for liquid consumption. Every effort therefore was made to meet the position, at least temporarily, but it still remains embarrassing.

The large number of fry secured is due to the united efforts of the Fish and Game Committee of the Rod and Gun Club and the Municipal Councils of the Village and Township in cooperation with representatives of the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries. All citizens are urged to help protect the game fish in the waters of this district as they are one of the greatest assets to the community. DAMAGE HEAVY IN WEST ONTARIO

In Places Storm Reached Cyclonic Proportions With Hail, Rain

London, Ont., May 22 (CP) — Western Ontario farmers today were repairing the damage caused by an electrical storm which swept over the countryside, driven by strong winds and accompanied by hail and rain. Thousands of dollars in damage was left in the wake of the storm, which reached cyclonic proportions.

The hail battered greenhouses and pelted flowers and other plants especially in the southern part of Oxford township where damage is estimated at $5,000. Barns, silos and outbuildings were swept from their foundations by the fierce winds.

The rain, however, proved a benefit in areas where the land was dry and pastures and crops poor.

Matthew H. Gossell's barn on the south middle road in Southern Oxford Township was wrecked and an apple orchard damaged. The barn was hurled from its foundations and crashed to the ground 10 feet away. Roy Turner's barn and silo on the Johnston side road felt the storm's wrath when they were shifted a foot.

Here was in his automobile, when the wind and rain appeared and he said the machine was moved down the road although it was in low gear. The barn, he said, was moved about the same distance by a cyclone two years ago.

The storm followed the path as the tornado which swept the district 40 years ago.

QUALITY ALWAYS HIGHER THAN PRICE

The ROMANTIC RUNAWAY

by KATHARINE HAVILAND-TAYLOR

In New York Mr. J. Smithson Billings cleared his throat. He was dictating a letter and what he had to say was, "I can find no trace of him——" He knew he must say it but the words did not come easily. Billings moved in his swivel chair, picked up a pencil and laid it down again. Then he said boldly, determinedly, "I can find no trace of him—"

The stenographer made pothooks on a pad of soft, gray paper. Billings went on quickly, now. "Shall I go on with it?" he added. "Something you let drop when we last met made me think that perhaps you wished to drop the case—"

Pablito, in his hotel room, went to stand by the elaborately draped window from which he could see the shimmer of blue water through the palms.

He was stricken by the realization that the first announcement of Estelle's engagement had been only a rumor and also by the feeling that he might, perhaps, in some manner have forestalled the consummation of that earlier hint. He was certain that Alec Davids —whoever he might be—could not love Estelle so wholly as he himself did. Equally certain was he that he and Estelle belonged together in a way that was as rare as it was beautiful.

"Make him good to her," he entreated that some one—or something —toward which men grope when clouds are heavy and low.

He had been running in a futile effort to keep ahead of pain for several years now, he realized —a pain that was now actuality though it had been only a rumor before. Who was it who had said "Most troubles are built of apprehension?" Well, it didn't matter who had said it. There was really nothing that mattered since Pablito knew that his heart-break was no longer built of apprehension but was real; that —perhaps —he had lost a chance of somehow setting matters right.

Bitternes welled in him. Some man—his father—had caused him to be born of shame and into pain. Angela had put scars upon his body which, creeping into his soul and memory, had made him a murderer. Being a murderer, he had lost the right to claim the one girl in the world he loved. That was the picture of his life. If only he could meet that father who had forsaken him! What he would do to him—!

But all that was getting him nowhere. The words on the printed newspaper page danced before Pablito's eyes. "A rumor of the engagement—"

Yes, he would go back to Cuba, the only place that he could think of as home. He would build a house there, get to work and keep himself occupied with varied interests as a child builds up heaps of blocks, knocks them down and builds them up again. A home with a garden, some vegetables and fruits and trees and flowers. He could have that much, at least.

Perhaps he would become a collector like some he had met and go about buying little pieces of pottery, big canvasses, carved things from Spain. Then when he had grown portly and old he could toddle about among these treasures saying, "I picked this up in Toledo," or "I found this in one of the bazaars at Biskra." By that time, perhaps, he would look back on the hot noon of his youth with pity and not even a faint understanding, for by then he would love things and not people Perhaps that was the better way to love, after all.

He tried to think of Egypt for comfort of Egypt where he had stayed long, trying to learn the lesson that no man can remember —a lesson made of realizing the transiency of life and the relative unimportance of a heart-break or two. But thinking that he would breathe but for an hour out of the ages made him want more than ever to have that hour replete with all he needed that brimming cup of lethe that for some men must be held in one woman's hands.

"A rumor of the engagement—"

Estelle's face, as he had seen it raised to his, floated before Pablito's vision. "God," he said aloud, "I can't stand this!"

A moment later he turned, shaking, from the glare of the window and set to work assembling his clothing and packing his bags with hands that were not quite steady. What could etchings, canvasses, little pieces of pottery and carved things from Spain do to mute this hunger? It was a hunger that was old to him yet as keen as it had been on the day of its birth.

He knew Estelle was really his but what did that knowledge offer except deeper pain?

And again he saw the words, "A rumor of the engagement—"

Estelle noticed that her father was oddly pale as he made his way into the great New York house one cold evening he seemed unsteady after he had ordered a stiff drink and raised it from the tray on which it had been brought to him. A little of the amber liquid went over the rim of the glass, sinking into the thick rug.

He drank too hastily, then refilled his glass from the silver shaker. He wondered whether Estelle had seen the evening's newspapers. Of course Alec Davids and that mother of his had seen them. Of course Mrs. Davids would snub Jim Field now! She would show him what she thought of him— or, more cruelly, that she did not thing of him and could not possibly think of him.

He decided he would give Alec half an hour to break the news to Estelle that the engagement was off. Field wondered what excuse Alec would offer, if any. Alec's sort could be brutal. He wondered, with a softening of heart, whether this would hurt Estelle greatly and, propelled by a rare instinct, to her, hungry to lay a hand on hers.

She looked up from the deep chair in which she sat and saw his face, drawn by pain and blanched by it. She couldn't stand that. Estelle knew misery, whether it was deserved or not. She put out a hand and her father clasped it, holding it tight.

"Estelle," he said, his voice not quite even, "I'd like to run down to Cuba if you will. I've never suggested it —since that time— but perhaps you're over all that now. I've wondered—"

"I haven't much feeling left about anything," she assured him in a tone that was more chilly than she liked.

"Well then, if you can be ready tomorrow there's a boat sailing at 10. I thought the trip on the water might do me good. I haven't been feeling quite well." He mopped his brow.

"Tomorrow at 10 will be all right with me," the girl told him.

CHAPTER XL

Jim Field went on, speaking slowly, "I've been feeling the cold here and I thought a few weeks in Havana might pick me up."

What he was think was, "At least I have the Havana house. I can sell it and with Estelle's income—" His vague reverie pictured the two of them managing on a reduced income, trying to shave expenses. The big place in Havana would be too large for them to keep anyhow. It had always taken a horde of servants to run it. Now they would have to get along with only a cook and second maid. There would be no others—no maid for Estelle or valet for himself.

He gave Estelle's hand—grown limp in his clasp—a hard squeeze and again moved toward the table. She watched him down another stiff drink with a splutter and a gulp. Something was wrong, she knew. One of the few vices Jim Field had never acquired was overdrinking. Of course, she concluded wearily, with a blunt, matter-of-fact frankness that contrasted unpleasantly with her earlier moment of sympathy, it must be some woman. He had usually had his way with women but in a long lifetime of pursuit there was sure to be one desired one who would evade perhaps with a cruel and mocking laugh.

"I hope Havana will make you feel much better," she said gently. Field thought of Estelle as she had been a few years earlier. She had always spoken gently then. Again his eyes stung.

"Well," he answered, "we'll have a try at it—"

His attempt at jauntiness was not convincing. She felt herself thawing and fought against this. She did not want to feel again the old pain that . . . always . . . followed whenever she gave way to real feeling, hoping or caring—all those pitiable, beautiful and fragile emotions that go with youth.

A soft-footed servant announced dinner from the broad doorway. Jim Field got to his feet and, passing the servant, saw in the man's eyes that he had seen the evening's newspapers and was wondering about his wages.

Pablito was glad to find Lottie and Beau where he had left them. And with Lottie's arms clinging about his neck and her tear-wet face raised to his he felt a faint glow of warmth. Lottie had always cared.

"Oh, my God, it's good to see you, Pablito!" she whispered unsteadily. "We thought sometimes you was never coming back! Where was you, any way?"

She didn't wait for him to answer. "Beau and me have kept the place going," she went on quickly. "It ain't so popular as it was but if you'll start fighting again—"

"I'm not going to."

"Say you don't need to! Beau and me cleaned up good on a strip of land we bought. And you have enough anyhow. Say Pablito, you haven't been sick, have you? You are not lookin' so terrible good."

"I never was 'so terrible good', Lottie."

"Oh, Lord—grammar again! Just seein' you makes me excited and here you start in on that grammar. I meant you ain't lookin' any too well. But we'll fix you up! You ain't — married?" she ended with a gulp that told of her fright.

"Heavens, no! Do I look it?"

"I didn't know. Beau's married. The girl was a dirty, sneakin' little crook and he hadn't no notion of marrin' her—but she managed that. You oughta hear her bawlin' him out—but then you will! When she gets started you could hear her to Key West on a clear day. Honey—"

"Yes."

"I got your room. I moved outa mine so they—Beau and her—could have the other side of the house: I didn't want to hear 'em fightin' all the time! But I'll move to the next one if you'd rather I wasn't around—in your room—"

She ended with a hard flush but her eyes, lifted to his, were brave in their offer. Lottie had not changed, Pablito saw miserably.

"Aren't you over that yet, Lottie? he asked bluntly, but gently as he looked down at her.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was in her room sewing on the sewing machine, and she said, O deer, that gastly head ake is comming back. I'm going to take a pill. Benny, get me a glass of water, she said.

Wich I did, and ma opened her handbag and took a little pill out of a bottle and swallowed it with a swallow of water, saying, There that's gone and I'm sure I wish it luck.

O, ma, how can one little pill like that do any good? I said, and ma said, I dont know how, but it can, and that's enough for me. We've got to take certain things on trust in this bizzy werld or elts we'd never get anywhere. We cant go through life asking the whys and wherefores or every pro and con. We all have our own werk to do and it's our bizness to see that we do it properly and we have a rite to expect others to have confidents in our ability just as we have in theirs without asking a lot of doubting Thomas questions such as how and why and if and supposing. And the same thing applies to these pills. They may look little to you but they're made in grate enormous factories that have the last werd in science at their fingers ends because that's their bizness and their object in life so why should I lose any of my own imited time in asking a vain flood of ignorant questions. And just to prove my point I feel better already without a sine of a head ake, ma said. O my goodness, she said.

What's a matter ma? I said, and she said, Something tells me I took a soda mint tablet instead of what I'meant to take.

And she quick looked in her bag again, saying, That's just what I went and did, well of all things I declare. I must take a pill imeeditly, she said.

Well, why, ma? I said, G wizzickers, you just said you felt all a ways better already, I said, and she said, Perhaps, but I'm not going to take any chances.

And she took another pill out of another little bottle and quick swallowed it.

Proving we need labels to give us real confidents.

TARZAN THE TERRIBLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

"Tell me, woman, why you warned me!" demanded Ja-don, the Lion-Man, who now knew that the prisoner before him had saved him from the high priest's plan to hurl him into the gryf's den. "Anything were better than being in Lu-don's hands," she answered. "You look a brave and honorable warrior. I could not see you made a victim of that fiend. Now I throw myself upon your mercy." That grim warrior regarded her for several moments and then said: "Ko-tan would make you his queen. Surely that be honorable treatment from one who could make you his slave."

"The king believes you are one of the race of gods," he added, "and having but a single daughter, he desires a son." "I do not want him or his throne," cried the woman. "Ko-tan is king," replied Ja-don, simply, as though that settled everything. "Come. We will go to the Forbidden Garden. There you will remain with O-lo-a, his daughter, until your marriage day." At the temple's entrance two grotesquely masked priests attempted to prevent their leaving. "She passes by order of Ko-tan, the king," scowled Ja-don. "Stand aside."

They came at last to the quarters of the Princess, where Ja-don relinquished his charge to the guard before O-lo-a's apartment. "Take her to the princess," he commanded, "and see that she does not escape." Before a doorway, concealed by ja-toskin hangings, the eunuch halted, and beat with his staff upon the wall. "Princess of Pal-ul-don," he cried, "here is the stranger woman, the prisoner from the temple." "Bid her enter," answered a sweet voice. As Lady Greystoke stepped inside the hanging she beheld a richly decorated room.

Attended by a single female slave, O-lo-a, princess of the House of Ko-tan, lay upon a pile of furs covering a stone dais. She beckoned the stranger woman to approach, and when she stood beside her, O-lo-a half arose upon an elbow and surveyed Jane critically. "How beautiful you are," she said simply. And she who had found that beauty may be a curse, replied: "That is indeed a compliment from one so radiant as the Princess O-lo-a." "Ah! You speak our language," cried the princess delightedly. "I was told that you were of another race from some far land of which we had never heard."

AT THE BELLE

The Texas Ranger And Sally Blane

In Laughably Film

If all the trials and tribulations that go with editing an "epoch" collection in a big metropolitan daily fail to phase Mr. Brady Lee Tracy in his new picture "Advice to the Lovelorn," And we might add, "and then some"....for it is no ordinary newspaper column that the brash blond star conducts in the new 20th Century picture which begins a two days engagement at the Belle today.

The role of Tobe Prentiss is made to order for Tracy and his work under the direction of Al Werker, director of "The Mouse of Rothschild" and "Love and Kisses" which he has given to the memory of the many movies through the film life a wise-cracking whirlwind and when we tell you that it opens with an earthquake and closes with fire to the trembling end of a night stick in a film matter of mid-dream identity, you'll get a rough idea of showmanship Lee Tracy and Twentieth's story adepts Ben Markson and Harry Ruskin.

Sally Blane brings her superlative charm and loveliness to the role of the sweetheart who lives to alter her views of the newspaper profession and as Sandie, the photography secretary whom Toby inherits with the "Advice" column, Marjorie Holloway contributes to the joyful spirit of the production. Paul Harvey is excellent as the editor who is at the core of most of Toby's troubles and others who do outstanding work are Bradley Jewell, Justin Wood, Mily Bokay and Adalyn Doyle.

"Advice to the Lovelorn" is another splendid film entertainment. Belleville and district film fans in search of a long hearty laugh at what picture-goer is not these days? can do no better than devote an hour to one of the most completely satisfying films to come out of Hollywood in some time.

"Journal of a Crime"

Although the picture public is led to expect nothing but the best in the way of film entertainment from Ruth Chatterton, yet never has she given such a demonstration of power. In the portrayal of scenes of overwhelming emotion at she does in "Journal of a Crime" the second feature attraction on the same program, with Claire Dodd and Phillip Reid in important roles. In the role of a highly sensitive woman of fine breeding who is goaded into crime by her inability to keep a ruthless love-pirate from wrecking her home, she gives a character portrayal that is masterly superior even to her work in "Madame X." Warner Bros. can again be commended for its care in the selection of a powerful vehicle for Miss Chatterton, one with a real climax to grip and unmesh that it leaves the spectator gasping with surprise.

A funny Tom Howard comedy, and the newest newspaper "The Belle Current News will be exhibited as the second attraction. The last complete show starts nightly at 8.30 p.m.

AT THE CAPITOL

"HE NEELIE"—STARRING PAUL MUNI

Here's an excerpt from the story:

"Where's you and what's your angle?" inquired Detective Lieutenant Dan Brady.

"Well—I," Brad's brain was working furiously. "I came up to see you on business and found this drunk lying here. I was just trying to help him a bit—"

"Quit your stalling!" Dean shot out. "What do you want?"

"Did you tell you?" Brad queried with elaborate assessment. "I'm working for him on the job—something special." He leaned over confidentially toward the police officer. "You go to Herman Gee out of the Woodlawn Cemetery. He'll tell you the better." A warned in a low voice. "Because if you don't there's a newspaper in this town that's going to beat you to it—and I'm going to be in bad for all of us if they find Canfield in that box!"

Brownell convinced by Brad's authoritative tone, ordered Dean, "All right you heard him, he's backed. Get Martello to tie up that box and move it."

Brad drew a breath of relief, the door, was startled to see O'Connell watching. Quickly recovering his composure, O'Connell began politically, "Hi Chief!" he greeted him, and walked nonchalantly out of the door.

Leo and his men already had dug up the coffin when Brad approached.

"Hello, Leo," he called. "Let's see that box. I'll open the box".

Smiling to himself, the gangster stepped back and threw back the cover. "There you are boss—take a look. It's a good look," he added under his breath.

Brad looked in amazement. There was a corpse all right —but it wasn't Canfield!

"Say you've dug up the wrong box," he said, turning in astonishment to Leo. "That's not—he was about to say "Canfield" but stopped in time. "That's not Mr. Hernandez!" he finished lamely.

Leo let a low whistle of contrived hardly. "Okay,—go ahead."

He walked slowly back to where Brad had left Nancy and Fullerton.

On their way out of the cemetery Brad suddenly came to a stop. Landing off toward the mausoleum was a trail of fresh earth.

"Wait here!" Brad ordered to the two men and stole up softly to the tomb. A narrowed gap escaped him as his flashlight illuminated door and revealed that the lock was broken. With quick decision Brad opened the door and walked in. . . .

Now see the picture!

It has everything, rapid-fire action, thrills and uproarious comedy. Glenda Farrell, Ned Sparks and a host of prominent players in support of the star. See it today or Wednesday at The Capitol—there is no better show in town, nothing to equal "He Neelie" for genuine entertainment.

Dinnerware gifts tonight. A three-set in Dinnerware Premium. "Little Girl With Big Ideas" and an Alaskan Travelogue balance a program second to none.

LIBERALS PROTEST ACTION OF MEMBER

Allege Conservative Members Addressed Enumerators

Ottawa, May 22 (CP)—The West Ottawa Liberal Association will forward a protest to R. A. Hamphries, Toronto, Chief Election Officer for Ontario, over the action of Arthur Ellis, M.P., Conservative candidate for South Ottawa, in addressing a meeting of enumerators here Saturday night. The protest will be sent to Mr. Humphries' sometime today, it was stated, but the protest-message would not be divulged as yet.

"There was considerable discussion," the statement said, "with regard to have been made at the meeting, and a statement issued following a meeting of the Liberal Association executive tonight. "The liaison of the meeting was not divulged, but it is understood they had to do with posting of lists for public places following the enumeration," it added.

"I spoke to the enumerators," Mr. Ellis said in commenting, as a lawyer I explained the election Act to them. I also read and explained the instructions to enumerators and warned them everyone entitled to vote must be put on the list."

Glenda Farrell in Warner Bros.' hit "Ill, Nellie!" now showing at the Capitol Theatre.

Fallsidaphia, May 23—(CP) — A 50-year-old girl's sudden appearance in tight, silk underwear on a busy street led to her arrest, and that of a policeman on charges of holding up a millinery store.

The attempted robbery failed yesterday, because Mrs. Ruth Lafferty, owner of the shop, dashed a man with a pistol and tore the mask from his girl companion. A moment later the girl in the silk dashed up to a policeman and asked a "big favor." She was given it, but the material later led police to the same girl, when Patrolman Robert C. Whitehead 31, and Frances Walters were arrested.

FORM PLANS FOR CAMPAIGN

Conservative Cabinet Will Make Extensive Tour of Province

Toronto, May 23 (CP)—Conservative party plans for the campaign forming their plans for a great campaign which they hope will return Premier George S. Henry and his supporters to power, Wednesday's government's election manifesto before the public and candidates for the provincial house of ministers are expected to start an extensive campaign tour throughout the province.

Before the Liberal rally in Hamilton last night Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader, renewed his charges against the Henry cabinet and the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, and challenged the Liberals to declare any constructive policy they had to offer the people.

W. D. Black, who has represented Addington in the legislature for 26 years, again was chosen to carry the Conservative banner in the Ontario general election campaign for the riding. He was unanimously selected at the Kingston convention.

Albert Pinard was the choice of East Ottawa Liberals at an Ottawa convention last night, he represented the riding in the legislature from 1914 to 1929 and will face Eugene J. Labelle, Conservative, in the voting on June 19.

Another Liberal candidate entered the campaign when Thomas H. Murray was named as the South Renfrew Liberal choice at Renfrew convention.

PARLIAMENT TURNS DOWN SWEEPSTAKES

Members Vote on Non Party Lines And Defeat Bill 105-57

QUEBEC SUPPORTS

Cahan Says Ultra Vires of Government Relief For Provinces

Ottawa, May 23—(CP)—For the second time in as many years the House of Commons has turned thumbs down on a move to legalize sweepstakes, Canadians who wish to gamble for large stakes with a small sum will have to find other means of staking their money than in home-grown lotteries.

By a vote of 105 to 57, which cut across party lines, the commoners decided to give the traditional six-months' hoist to the bill sent down from the Senate, which would have legalized sweepstakes for hospital purposes. Many and varied were the arguments advanced for and against the issue as the House spent a full day debating it.

A. M. Cameron, Progressive member for Kindersley, had the distinction of contributing twice to the rejection of sweepstakes. Last year he was the man who moved the killing motion in the Senate Bill and he was the first to vote.

Leaders of the two major parties, Premier R. B. Bennett and Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King declared their unalterable opposition to the measure. Both also voted on non-party lines and neither leader called upon his followers to vote against the bill on party grounds. Mr. Bennett explained he had promised a non-party vote on the question in the throne speech, whether the vote was raised at the inter-provincial conference last winter.

High Income Fine

Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice, while opposed to the measure, though two changes could well be made in the present law to make it easier for a fine to an informer should be done away with and the fine made forfeit to the crown as a fine. Likewise he thought the old fine now imposed for passing lottery tickets might be increased.

Most of the support for the measure came from the Province of Quebec. Hon. Maurice Dupre, Solicitor-General, came out definitely in favor of the bill and recommended it be passed. Other Quebec members, Hon. C. H. Cahan, Secretary of State, declared the Cahan Act provides but was not wholly opposed to the principle of lotteries.

Mr. Cahan, argued the bill from the Senate was ultra vires in the Dominion parliament and has no power to give directions to provincial attorneys-General as to the conduct of sweepstakes. He said he would be inclined to support another bill on the order paper in the name of Hon. George Graham, Chairman of Saguenay), which would exempt sweepstakes from charitable or educational purposes from the prohibitive clause of the criminal court.

A national lottery was proposed by Mr. Dupre with the proceeds to be distributed between provinces on a per capita basis. He thought a referendum might be held on the question in the fall. The Gazette declared the League of Nations withdrawal motion briefly yesterday and meets again today.

The Henry government will back up the bill to establish a central bureau of government publications which has been reported from the public accounts committee and forwards will return to the marketing bill.

Fifteen New Teeth at 76 Boast of Beaverton Woman

Beaverton, Ont., May 23 (CP)—Beaverton district has claimed a third set of teeth is something the layman would hesitate to claim. Mary Ann Elliott of Beaverton, plans to celebrate her birthday next June by adding teeth to eat a special cake. Mrs. Elliott was born in Beaverton but younger and to prove it can show her birth registration dated and can see "right across the river now."

The aged Beaverton resident says her third set of teeth appeared with the first one quite short and the last one longer. Her sight also is improving and she is able to see better on dull days than when the sun shines brightly. Mrs. Elliott's doctor has informed her that all she requires is lots of good water and that is her only drink. Long walks occasionally are her exercise and Mrs. Elliott can move smartly despite her age.

On May 24 the aged woman will be 76 years of age. The modern world has no attractions for her. She does not want to be "bothered with a lot of new fads" and in her native town Beaverton River her birthday will be spent quietly. And she hopes that before that she can see "right across the river now."

Hundreds of letters from doctors and others have appeared at the Elliott home. A face lifter in Washington wants Mrs. Elliott to try her treatments. Letters have poured in from companies, urging her to use their products.

Beaverton waiter, Mrs. Elliott says is good enough for her, for she believes it was this water that restored her health.

FAIR BUSINESS SUGGESTIONS ARE PROPOSED

C. H. Carlisle, Goodyear President Sets up Plan

NO CODES NEEDED

Government Supervision Would Adjust Conditions

Ottawa, May 23.—One of Canada's biggest manufacturers appeared before the parliamentary mass buying committee today and appealed for more government intervention in business. It was C. H. Carlisle, president of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of Toronto.

The rubber manufacturer, tall, fair haired and ranger, suggested industrial associations, supervised by the government, to control prices, regulate wages and cost standards and generally to establish fair business practices for the industry. The Carlisle plan would be revolutionary because it would mean repeal of Canada's anti-combines law, repealed for years as the bulwark against monopolies.

The strength of the Carlisle industrial set-up would depend upon the effectiveness of the government supervision, its author candidly told the parliamentary committee. There were inherent weaknesses in it but he thought the government has power to give directions to provincial attorneys-General as to the conduct of sweepstakes. He said he would be inclined to support another bill on the order paper in the name of Hon. George Graham, Chairman of Saguenay), which would exempt sweepstakes for charitable or educational purposes from the prohibitive clause of the criminal court.

A national lottery was proposed by Mr. Dupre with the proceeds to be distributed between provinces on a per capita basis. He thought a referendum might be held on the question in the fall. The Gazette declared the League of Nations withdrawal motion briefly yesterday and meets again today.

The Henry government will back up the bill to establish a central bureau of government publications which has been reported from the public accounts committee and forwards will return to the marketing bill.

Jail Populations are Much Lower, Local Jail Situation Reflects Trend

On a trip of inspection throughout the jails of the Province, Jr. J. W. Elliott, Provincial Police inspector has completed a visit made the local County jail. He declined to comment upon matters concerning the jail during his visit, stating unofficially that the decline in population of jails throughout Ontario during the past year or so is quite noticeable. The local jail, it was reported, was considerably below average in number confined.

At present 16 males and 1 female are incarcerated. Two of the men are awaiting transportation to Guelph. The rest are short term offenders.

"The number is below average", commented Mr. G. H. French, secretary of the Children's Aid, from twenty-five to thirty in the past few months.

"Curiously enough the jail population has also upward trend during the summer months. We generally have more prisoners as soon as the weather becomes warmer."

Relief camps, and the concentration of the single men who would otherwise be unemployed and idle are held by Governor French as one reason why the population of jails is decreasing throughout the Province.

"We have noticed in particular in this section, he added. "The camps are keeping young men out of mischief, and consequently we are getting fewer of them."

CAR DRIVEN ERRATICALLY SAYS WITNESS

Coroner at Inquest Comments on Conflicting Evidence Given

BEER IN CAR

Girl Passenger Says Beer Consumed on Side-road

Oshawa, Ont., May 23 (CP)—Death of Vincent Kilgannon and Jack McIlbolon in a motor crash near Hampton last month was due attributed by a coroner's jury to "negligence of the driver." Evidence given at the inquest into the tragic was conflicting, and Coroner Dr. D. T. O. Callander, commented on the fact in his address to the jury.

Alex. Stevenson of Toronto, an eye-witness to the collision between the heavy transport truck and the light touring car in which Kilgannon and McGibbon were driving with two other youths and two girls, said he had followed the car for a mile and a half along the highway and had tried to overtake to pass it because of its erratic course. He testified that the car kept swerving from side to side and he had kept from 50 to 100 feet behind because of the uncertain course.

Miss Dorothy Fowler, riding in the car with the party, said they had stopped for a side road and the boys had "some beer." The beer, she said, was in the front seat and she had not seen it until the car started.

McGibbon, George Fowler and Oscar Heath "split" two bottles after the stop was made, the witness said, but neither girl had taken a drink. McGibbon had had "some more bottles in the car," she said.

"I was told the driver was consumed in a cafe and each of the four boys had a drink," she said.

Wasting Time Says Member in Resigning

Ottawa, May 23 (CP)—J. F. Poulin, Liberal member for Temiscouata, resigned from the Parliamentary Civil Service Committee today.

"My patience is exhausted. I am not going to sit here to be abused," declared Mr. Poulin, addressing the Chairman J. L. Bowman asked him to remain for a few minutes as there is a quorum of the committee.

Mr. Earl Lawson, (Cons. York West), and W. G. Ernest (Cons. Queens-Lunenburg), had consistently abused him during the discussion of the Superannuation Act, Mr. Poulin said. He had sat in the committee at the request of Mr. Mackenzie King, but considered he had wasted his time since he had not been included in any discussions. He had done his duty, and would ask Mr. King to recommend some one else in his place.

"I am very sorry; your efforts are praiseworthy, but you are all wasting your time," Mr. Poulint said as he left the committee room.

Owing to lack of be quorum, the committee adjourned until next Wednesday.

CLAIMS HENRY TAKES PLANKS OF LIBERALS

Hepburn Says Tory Leader Has Studied Liberal Manifesto

HIGHWAY COST

Liberal Leader Charges Inconsistency of Premier

Toronto, May 23.— "Practically everything on Premier George S. Henry's election manifesto has been stolen from the Liberal platform," Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader declared today after reading the statement made public by Mr. Henry last night.

Mr. Hepburn made his reply to the Conservative manifesto, in a statement handed out to the press through Toronto on his election campaign tour.

"His must have been reading our platform," Mr. Hepburn declared, "for it is thoroughly at least." Mr. Hepburn continued. "The Liberal party always has advocated a minimum wage for men as well as for women.

He also said the premier's provision to change the Mother's Allowance Act to care for a widow with one child, "is a plank on our Liberal platform."

Mr. Henry says the province now will assume 50 per cent. of the cost of King's highway, leaving 10 per cent. to be borne by the municipality instead of 20 per cent. as at present. "I have just one question to ask the party, if returned to power, will assume the whole cost of the King's highway system," the statement continued.

Rates of Interest.

"Henry, on the verge of election has made a dying pledge to reduce the rates of interest from five and one-half per cent. to five per cent. on loans from the agricultural development board. Long ago we promised to reduce these rates and all other interest rates.

"Premier Henry has been 'considered in regard to this promise he would have given the province the rates of interest on government loans, but instead he has made no move to issue a $40,000,000 loan recently in such a way he has set a rate of interest far in excess of current rates, as a evidenced by the premium at which the bonds.

Henry has another humorous dying pledge in the manifesto. The pledge is going to be 'policy the Hydro-Electric Power Commission with a view to the possibility of a zoning system with a view to distributing the spread in cost of service between urban, suburban and city consumers.

Rural Hydro

"Again Mr. Henry is stealing our platform. We have repeatedly declared that there is too much difference between city and rural rates. I have said also that the principle matter for the Hydro is the country and we have advocated a zoning system. I repeatedly have criticized the Conservative government enforced by the Hydro on rural users, and that the government promised to reduce it to a five-year contract which has been broken at every election. We will do away even with the five year contract and guarantee for rural users. They should be on the same footing as city consumers.

"Mr. Henry is not consistent and he can't fool the people with these last a la Bennett promises before the election. In fact, he is becoming more and more like Premier Bennett. He and his party have had opportunities to reduce hydro rates in Ontario for ten years and if he had meant to earnest he would have done all these things he now promises and he would not have waited until the eve of an election. His government has failed to keep faith with the people of Ontario by his performance in office. His promises made in past years, not on his pledges on the brink of an election."

Settlers' Bonus Plan Farm Loan Aid Pledged by Premier in Manifesto

Highway Relief For Municipalities Also Promised

6 POINT PROGRAM

Farmer, Jobless And Widows to Share Benefits

Toronto, May 23—(CP)—Premier George S. Henry today prepared for his election campaign with the Ontario general elections, June 19, with his election manifesto completed and before the public. Benefits to the farmer, the jobless and the widow were promised in the manifesto.

After nearly two weeks of preparation the manifesto appeared last night. Premier Henry reviewed his government's expenditures and announced if returned to power it would inaugurate new legislation aimed at curing the pernicious out of its difficult position. Old and new settlers will be assisted in the clearing and ploughing virgin lands under a large land settlement scheme. Jobless men have wished to take up land in the north will be helped in this manner and settlement on lands in Southern Ontario will be encouraged.

Assume More Cost

Premier Henry announced the government proposed to assume 50 percent of the cost of construction and maintenance of highways. The counties would bear only 10 per cent. At present the government carries 80 per cent of the cost and the counties 20 per cent. Formerly it is estimated, would be relieved of an expenditure of $1,000,000 through this plan.

Farmers borrowing from the agricultural development board now receive an interest rate on of one-half percent, which is considered. The government proposes to reduce the rate from 5 1-2 to five percent which, it is estimated, would mean a total saving to the farmer of $270,000.

The government also announced its intention to amend the Mothers Allowance Act if it was reelected Under the amendments a widow with one child would be cared for. This would result in an additional annual expenditure of $1,200,000, $750,000 being by the government and the remainder by the municipalities. It would add 5,000 beneficiaries to the present list.

The manifesto also contains the proposal that the Hydro-Electric Power Commission study the possibility of a zoning system with a view to reducing the spread in cost of service between rural, urban, town and city consumers.

Minimum Wage

A minimum wage for men is favored by the administration, which plans to take immediate steps immediately to confer with the province of Quebec and the federal authorities as to the best way to carry this out. Mr. Henry made official intimation was forthcoming it is believed the government is ready to go to the polls on a question with the Quebec authorities.

"The Liberal platform" the manifesto said, "should not be looked at as a political document. It lost on account of advanced social legislation which does not obtain in other provinces."

Earlier in the day addresses had previously mentioned the minimum wage for men but maintained Ontario should not adopt such a scheme until neighboring provinces had done so. Many industries might move to these provinces from Ontario to escape the regulations.

Unemployment insurance was referred to in the government announcement which stated the Henry administration was ready to cooperate with the Dominion authorities in providing this protection for the workless. The manifesto added that unemployment insurance could be by federal statute worked out in co-operation with the provinces."

While viewing the wreck on the C.N.R. just west of the city limits George Sabiston, 146 Yeomans St., had his bicycle stolen yesterday afternoon. The "bike" was later found by the police abandoned in a ditch near the corner of Dundas and Wallace. Master Sabiston had ridden out to the scene of the wreck and parked his bicycle on the side of the road while he viewed the smash-up. Later upon his return to where the cycle had been left it was gone. It is the belief of the police department that the bicycle was taken by another youth merely to ride home upon, it later to be abandoned. The bicycle was returned to its owner. Another small child's bicycle was also picked up by the police yesterday and awaits its owner at the police station. It is painted black in color.

SUN TO SHINE ON HOLIDAY

A cool north wind may call for sweater coats and other warm clothing for all those pleasureists who seek the open spaces tomorrow for their 24th of May holiday, but umbrellas will probably be superplus because according to the report of the weather man on condition one day ahead, "the sun will probably be fair—but cool," he promised today.

Last year, intended holidayers grumbled indoors and ate their picnic sandwiches there, but Mr. Ireland carefully prepared the evening before for the holiday just as he had carefully dining room table, while rain drops were a necessary part of the day's raiment, it will be recalled by many. But on May 24th last year ago, one of the heaviest rains of the season fell over the district. One-third of an inch of rain fell that day. It was cool and damp and disappointing. But the sun will shine tomorrow, it is expected.

CLUBS JOIN FOR BANQUET

Visit by Kiwanis And Rotary Club to Bayside Most Enjoyable

To further the friendly feeling existing between the urban and rural centres of this county, Kiwanis and Rotarians, Kiwanians of Belleville, Rotarians and Rotary Annes formed the delightful party to Bayside Community Club last evening at Riley's Grove on the Bay of Quinte. A community banquet and more such functional events will be held among the residents of Trenton and Belleville. The banquet was served by the ladies of Bayside, ably groaned with good things to eat and everyone present was extended to the ladies. The repast was delightful and full justice done by the participants.

The weekly meeting of the city clubs was extended by Rev. James A. Plant, pastor of Wesley United Church who in the absence of the host for President Eddie Shapiro of the Kiwanis Club and Mr. Gordon Ross, president of the Trenton Rotary Club called upon Mr. Ross to act as chairman. Charles Allore of Trenton and Mr. McMullen of Belleville sang leaders and Eddie Logan collaborated. Mr. Ross then introduced over to the good ladies of the club, Russell Hubbs, Belleville, at the piano for Leo B. Biggs, who was introduced as "Mr. Music" to the men's Chorus in this city.

P. C. MacEarrin was pinch hitter for Dr. Ross Hamilton of Albert College, who was unable to attend to deliver the principal address as to an urgent call of business. "Mac" did not fail us and was most brilliant address, which was in keeping with the occasion. The singing of the finest functions that the clubs have attended in a long time and more of them would be most welcome.

BOYS SELECT SKY ROCKETS

Noisier Type of Fireworks Less in Favor Today

Young Belleville has lost its taste for extravagant purchases of fireworks, especially noisy crackers, bombs and rockets that were so freely spent on noisy demonstrations on the occasion celebration of the Queen's birthday in the past are being diverted into safer channels of pele-fishing poles and tackle for instance, if reports from the local sories.

Local store keepers make no secret of the fact that their sales of fireworks for the approaching Empire day this year have been disappointing. Their best customers, the boys and adults, although stray pennies spent on fireworks, have not increased the total. But the old-time, glorious bang-up celebration of the 24th May died into a mere spattering. Window shaking cannon crackers which used to greet the dawn with blasting explosions, are now a rarity. "Nigger chasers," responsible in past years for many a wild-eyed but generally staid farm team dragging itself and its harness around the nearest telephone pole, live only in the imagination of oldsters. The fireworks manufacturers have of recent years worked more with the idea of safety than thrills. And the ordinary purchases that were being made today are comparatively harmless and safe.

Beautiful displays are more in favor. The sky climbing sky rocket has always been a popular seller and has been improved as the years have gone by. Other safe and sane aids to the celebration of the day are the innocuous but spectacular colored Roman candles and pinwheels. Even these with the maximum of thrill and enjoyment.

Police of the local force recalled today the dragging train of the occasional lady driver was their favorite target. When the farmer played safe and left "Old Nellie" or "Harry" home, he was safe in their stalls.

But those days have gone forever. Belleville may celebrate tomorrow evening and throughout the day, but the celebration will be a safe and sane one, confined to the use of small fire crackers and display of small fire crackers and skyshore of occasional rockets.

Montgomery, Sr., which were disposed of by public auction on Saturday afternoon was particularly well attended, all articles being sold for a reasonable amount. Mr. Clifford N. Baker has put in a bowling green at his summer cottage, Oak Lake.

Mr. Lorne Anderson and Miss Ruth Anderson have purchased a building at the Trent River and have had it moved and set up at Oak Lake for a summer cottage.

A series of showers fell over this district on Sunday and Monday morning and Sunday's rain was needed moisture to the crops suffering for the past few weeks from the drought. The pastures were greatly benefitted by the rain. The electric storms accompanying the showers were not thought severe and so far no damage has been reported although during the storm of Sunday morning a tree on Church Street near residence of Mr. Chas. Thompson, was struck by lightning, split asunder and the bark taken off.

The students of the Stirling High School are at present in the throes of the final set of teachers' examinations, the results of which will determine whether or not the pupils will be granted their certificates on their year's work.

LIGHT RAIN AID TO CROPS

Fall Is General Over the Province, Reports Indicate

By the Canadian Press

Light showers, general over Ontario today, brought relief to parched farms and pastures, but relief is only temporary unless heavier showers follow and assure healthy growth reports from centres throughout the province indicated today.

In many parts of Western Ontario, the rain which fell last night and today was only the second moisture the dry fields had felt. A drenching downpour was the hope of farmers throughout the province.

The fall was hardest from prolonged dry weather in Wentworth county and vicinity and the current precipitation failed to help matters to any great extent, drying grain, in this district, was reported two weeks behind normal, fall wheat had been ploughed under and replaced with barley. Hay promised to be stunted.

H. H. Stevens, the chairman, there was a deliberate attempt to prevent farmers from buying what they wanted.

J. T. M. Anderson Seeks Re-election As Premier of Saskatchewan

Regina, May 23—(CP)—Entering the political campaign with a declaration between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000 of relief indebtedness was being swiped from the broad shoulders of J. T. M. Anderson of Saskatchewan today was leading his forces in a big for re-election June 8.

The Premier, head of Saskatchewan's Co-operative Government formed largely by Conservatives, made his first major address of the campaign last night at Weyburn. Hon. James G. Gardiner, Liberal leader, spoke at Strasbourg, attacking the government and its expenditures. M. J. Coldwell, leader of the Farmer-Labor (C.C.F.) party, had no speaking engagements.

Both federal and provincial governments were wiping out consciously between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000 of relief indebtedness incurred during the last few years by residents of the drought-stricken areas of southern Saskatchewan, said Premier Anderson.

"We are handing back to the rural municipal councils millions of dollars of indebtedness incurred in this regard," said Premier Anderson, "telling the rural administrations in effect that all relief obligations as far as the provincial and federal governments are concerned.

"We are tearing up those repayment notes and are wiping out those millions of dollars of obligations entered into by farmers in the hard-hit areas because we realized that through successive years of crop failure they cannot possibly repay those amounts, and we want to give them a chance to re-establish themselves on a paying basis."

These remarks Premier Anderson pointed out, applied to obligations entered into by farmers through the relief commission.

HOSPITALS, INSTITUTIONS OF INDIGENT

Amounts paid by the city of Belleville to hospitals and to institutions for indigent persons during the year totalled $32,-380.19.

Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives received $805.50; House of Providence, Kingston, $824.24; Toronto Hospital for Consumptives, $693.00; Ontario Hospital, Woodstock, Ont., $266.00; Kingston General Hospital, $80.50; Children's Aid society, Kingston, $186.25; Children's Aid Society, Belleville, $2,096.10; Toronto General Hospital, $83.25; St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, Ontario, $35.00; Mountain Sanitarium, Hamilton, $105.00; Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, $778.75; Belleville General Hospital, $11,779.60; a total of $17,700.19 to which must be added $10,680.00 for Mothers' Allowance, and $4,500.90 for Old Age Pensions, to bring the total to $32,880.19.

Many taxpayers doubtless have had no notion how large an amount goes into the bad can hardly hold a candle against the facts contained in these figures. Much of this work is of a type which calls for the highest principle, the support of the weak and needy, and the sick in institutions of the class typified as above.

Above this is the extra expenditure of relief in its two forms, direct, and as practised this past season, work relief, which adds another burden. Not a penny of this cost is taken in the above enumeration.

Citizenship in this age means acceptance of responsibility to look after sick and indigent institutions, which are at the very foundation of Christianity.

Another point is clear in these figures—the burden is considerable—to be definite, about three mills off the dollar of assessment. Those who advocate spending more freely should take note of this item alone so as to understand why councils are not "made of money."

INDIAN GRAVES

Every now and then, the burial places of Indians are dug up. Last summer Zwick's Island yielded a burial mound and the bones of former inhabitants were dug up, and then buried. In Northern Ontario the other day an excavation brought to light no fewer than seven Indian skeletons who had been buried, upright. These were again buried, and so the story goes. Bones of prehistoric inhabitants have been dug up in many places in Belleville in the past and if the Indians did not possess the notion of a community cemetery such as modern graveyards are, The Indian bones have been found in prominent places, as on sandy hillsides.

In every case the human bones are returned to earth. Modern civilization bestows upon the relics of the red men who walked this country and paddled on these waters the gift of burial. Their bones have to the white man the same relationship as the relics of the whites have to white men. So they are honored with resting places.

Unfortunately the Indian burial places have not been in spots where they could avoid removal because these have not laid out according to modern planning. Yet even today cemeteries not much over a century old have to be entered and bodies removed from the path of progress.

Indian cemeteries were not of course marked for the whites. And they could never have been as populous as modern cemeteries because the habits and institutions of the Indians were not of the European type.

While we are not far in years from the old Indian life yet we have few relics of their past hereabouts. What Belleville first looked like to the first whites we have no record and never can have. That past is gone forever. The immense development which has taken place in the years century and a half in this section as in all other parts, shows the difference of type in two civilizations. The Indians had a natural civilization with a faith of its own. The Europeans have another which co-ordinates with the development of machinery to cause immense expansions.

The Providence which watches over the affairs of men, works out their mistakes, at times, to a healthier issue than could have been accomplished by their wisest forethought.—Froude.

There are few, very few, who will own themselves in a mistake, though all the world see them to be in downright nonsense.—Swift.

Misfortunes makes of certain souls a vast desert through which rings the voice of God.—Balzac.

A MOTHER

How can a mother ever find
Through toil-filled days, through hours of stress,
So many ways of being kind,
So many moods of tenderness?

Life, sometimes, is a lonely thing,
Bare of beauty and drained of dreams;
How can a mother always bring
Shining hope back and faith's white gleams?

Wild regrets like grim ghosts will rise,
Threatening all of the years ahead;
What but a mother can check vain sighs
And show how futile are tears we shed?

Failure and folly may trouble each breast;
How can a mother's clear eyes see
All of the virtues it once possessed
Bloom in the heart, as it used to be?

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY YEARS AGO this week Captain Joseph Brant, great War Chief of the Six Nations, and faithful ally of Great Britain, arrived with his tribe in the Bay of Quinte, refusing the invitation of the United States authorities of the time to make a permanent home in that country. Capt. Brant and his people preferred to cast in their lot with the side of the United Empire Loyalists who desired to live under the British flag and were prepared to make new homes in a new country at the price of their loyalty to the British Crown. This week the descendants of Capt. Joseph Brant celebrated the deeds of their forbears on the land set apart for them by the British government in recognition of their great services during the Crysis, "Tekonadenaga", pronounced Tal-yen-da-nyegeh, meaning two sticks of wood bound together, denoting strength, was the Indian name of Capt. Joseph Brant, born 1742 on the banks of the Ohio, died November 24, 1807. Joseph Brant first settled in the township of Tyendinaga, adjoining Belleville, and in the city of Brantford, which adjoins another reservation of the Mohawks, where a beautiful monument stands to the memory of this great Loyalist and pioneer. An outstanding feature of the commemoration on the reserve this week was the honor accorded Mrs. A. L. Geen of Belleville, long since adopted into the mysteries of Mohawk tribal lore, and recently made a chief with a name long and romantic—Chief Shojiyonweh. Clad in his robes of office, wearing his beautiful high headress of feathers and his abundant snow-white hair, Rev. Geen combines the appearance of the patriarch with the sturdy uprightness which marks the appearance of the Mohawk Indians even long after middle age.

BABE RUTH, home-run hitter extraordinary, has started another season in the big money and is finding the ball for occasional clouts of the horsehide into the ether. He is also making a dent on the radio with his boy friends, being on the air every Monday, Wednesday and Friday over the blue network of the NBC, from 8 to 9 p.m. Eastern Daylight Saving Time. Babe tells the future baseball players how to hit and run and various other interesting facts about baseball. Babe is also handing out baseballs, gloves and free trips to Chicago or New York to lucky boys who are his guests during the outing —what an experience! Babe between the field and the air and other income makers is making more money than he ever did. Not that he needs it for there is a trust fund tucked away that will take care of him in comfort when he decides to quit active participation in American League baseball, but Babe just can't quit for he loves the game and the great open spaces "where thousands cheer"—besides the ownership of the rising generation of baseball players still in knee pants who think Babe Ruth is the greatest god that ever was—the great god Swat, that's what.

Surplus Emotions Find an Outlet in Caring For Dogs, Cats and Birds

Most of us possess a superabundance of emotion which often annoys and upsets us because we do not seem to be able to find an adequate outlet for it. Restlessness and dissatisfaction may be the result, even nervous states.

It is for no better reason that some people take to pets, to the excessive use of alcohol, to philandering and to more extreme methods of behavior. Others shut themselves up and away from the world, become ascetic, and find refuge in imaging what life might have been.

Perhaps the best time to make a permanent home in that country. Capt. Brant and his people preferred to cast in their lot with the side of the United Empire Loyalists who desired to live under the British flag and were prepared to make new homes in a new country at the price of their loyalty to the British Crown. A Garden for the Baby's Greens

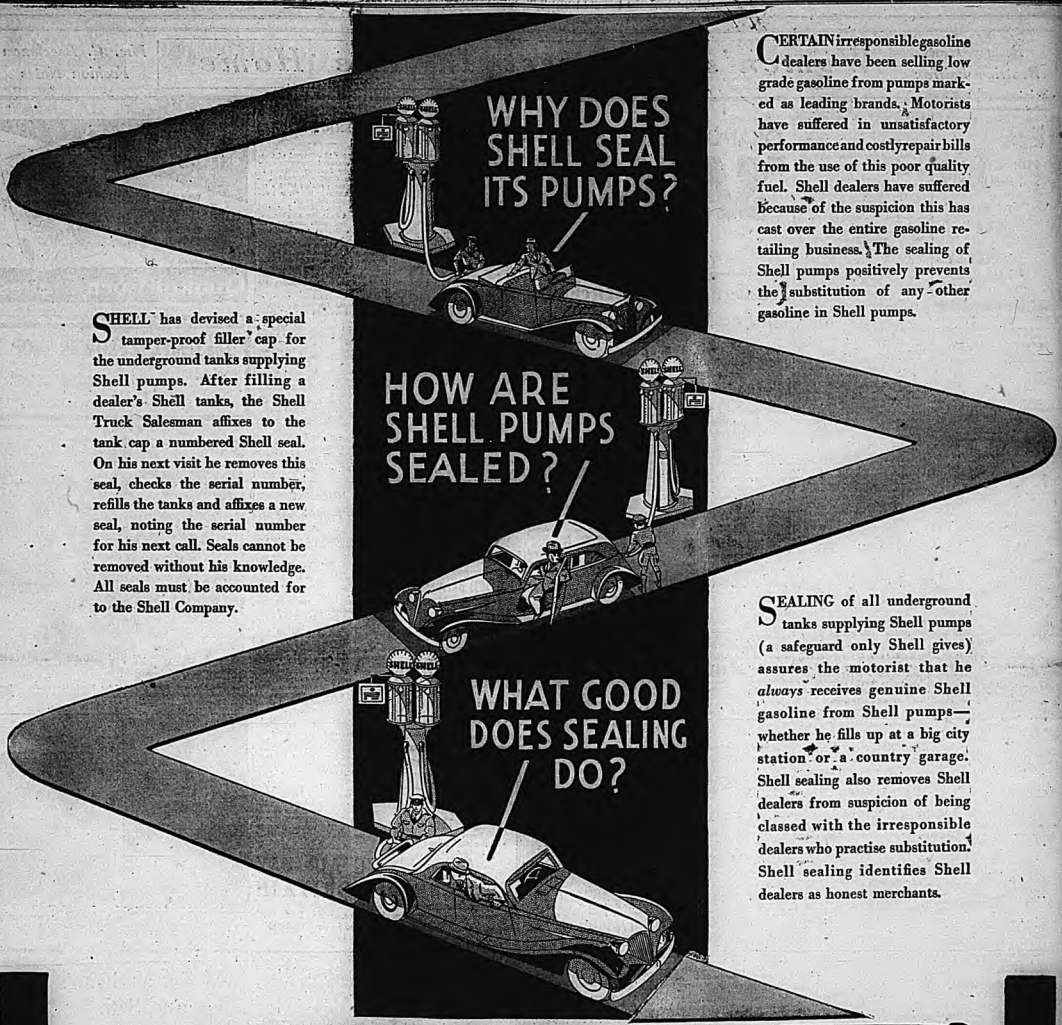
Spinach Mainstay of the Baby's Garden.

Vegetables in baby's diet have become as important as milk. Often the local market is the only means of supplying this essential food. The most natural way is the home garden, but many urban families thinking their small back lot insufficient, have neglected the means of providing the freshest possible greens for the babies.

To all those who live in homes, and to most of those living in small apartments, home grown greens are possible if they will only survey the available ground and start a garden. For growing children especially the very purest, fresh vegetables are vital and in a definite sense as much care should be taken in assuring their quality as in the case of milk. Green vegetables handled in the market have usually been brought into the city from some distance and considerable time has elapsed since they were picked. All of the leaf varieties, and to a certain extent the legumes, definitely lose vitamins as a result of shipping and storage, especially in hot weather.

The one way to know you are getting quality vegetables is to grow them yourself where you can serve them an hour after digging. Even a plot 5 feet square will yield a long way toward providing the baby with fresh greens, and a 10-foot plot will produce a considerable amount for the rest of the family. For the children, spinach, carrots and string beans are the standard prescription.

Fortunately these three are the easiest to grow in the small garden, and a tiny plot will furnish an ample supply. Spinach is of the first importance, and will occupy most of the plot, with only a row of carrots. And as the spinach is pulled out, more carrots may be planted, and finally when warm weather comes string beans may be sown.



It is a good idea to plant a few tomato plants in the plot when all danger of frost is past, but the standard is spinach with carrots and beans for succession crops. Remember, there is room in any back lot for a bushels garden, and fresh vegetables from it are better than any that may be bought on the market.

SCOTT'S SCRAPBOOK — By R. J. Scott

CERTAIN irresponsible gasoline dealers have been selling low grade gasoline from pumps marked as leading brands. Motorists have suffered in unsatisfactory performance and costly repair bills from the use of this poor quality fuel. Shell dealers have suffered because of the suspicion this has cast over the entire gasoline retailing business. The sealing of Shell pumps positively prevents the substitution of any other gasoline in Shell pumps.

SHELL has devised a special tamper-proof filler cap for the underground tanks supplying Shell pumps. After filling a dealer's Shell tanks, the Shell Truck Salesman affixes to the tank cap a numbered Shell seal. On his next visit he removes this seal, checks the serial number, refills the tanks and affixes a new seal, noting the serial number for his next call. Seals cannot be removed without his knowledge. All seals must be accounted for to the Shell Company.

SEALING of all underground tanks supplying Shell pumps (a safeguard only Shell gives) assures the motorist that he always receives genuine Shell gasoline from Shell pumps—whether he fills up at a big city station or a country garage. Shell sealing also removes Shell dealers from suspicion of being classed with the irresponsible dealers who practise substitution. Shell sealing identifies Shell dealers as honest merchants.

BIBLE SOCIETY ELECTS OFFICERS

Rev. A. L. Geen Again Chosen as President of Organization

The audience that assembled Monday evening of this week in Bridge Street Church at the annual meeting of the Belleville Branch of the British and Foreign Bible Society was better than that of last year but still less than the importance of the occasion demanded.

The meeting was called to order by the President Rev. A. L. Geen. Devotional service consisted of reading of Scripture by Rev. Mr. Naylor and prayer by Bishop Marshall.

A motion, from the executive suggesting that the officers for the ensuing year be re-elected and that any vacancies, occurring therein, be filled by them was confirmed.

The annual report of all resident Ministers and the following was presented. Rev. J. R. Gaetz, 1st. Vice President, Mr. F. R. McBride; 2nd. Vice President, Mr. H. W. Ackerman; Treasurer, Dr. Edwards; Secretary, Mrs. Wm. Moore, and the following representatives of congregations, Methodist, Mr. I. S. Moore; St. Thomas, Mr. B. F. Jennings; Christ Church, Mr. C. B. Smith; Tabernacle, Mr. I. O. Bell; Holloway, Mr. J. McCarthy; Bethesda, Mr. Hannah; Bridge Street, Mr. F. S. Deacon; Bethel Hall, Mr. J. Bach. Auditor, Mr. Christ. Mr. C. A. Start; Gospel Tabernacle, Mr. J. Bach; Salvation Army, Mr. R. J. Smith, and Kingsmen, Mr. Logan. Also Christ Church and the Salvation Army are to be filled by the executive.

The Treasurer, Dr. Edwards presented his report showing total receipts $3825.35, amount sent to Toronto $3150.00; other items $37.35.

The President introduced the speaker of the evening Rev. F. P. Allnutt, Secretary of the Upper Canada Bible Society. He is a forceful and attractive speaker, a man of long service as pastor and now as Secretary of the Bible Society. He spoke of the great value of the Bible and what the Bible Society is doing in placing the Bible in the hands of those nations that don't have it. There are over 3,000 languages in the world and less than 700 of these have the Bible. Eleven or more new translations are made every year.

An interesting feature of the evening was when Rev. Mr. Allnutt presented Miss Phyllis Geen, with a certificate of life membership from her grandfather, Rev. A. L. Geen.

Rev. Mr. Allnutt and Rev. Mr. Geen both spoke of the valuable service rendered by the lady collectors for the society. Much of the success is due to their faithfulness.

Rev. H. E. Neal closed the meeting with the Benediction.

Premiere of New Orchestra Thrills Many Music-Lovers

High Mark Reached in Symphonic Music by Organization

MEN'S CHORUS

Coast-to-Coast Broadcast of Chorus Announced by Mayor Tice

Musical history was made yesterday evening in the Collegiate Auditorium when the Belleville Men's Chorus, assisted by the New Belleville Symphony Orchestra, presented their annual recital.

His Worship Mayor Tice opened the program by expressing the appreciation of the citizens of Belleville for the splendid pleasure work that was being done by Mr. Ross Hunter, musical director of the chorus and symphony orchestra, and by the members of both organizations. He also announced that Stanley Mastaid of the Canadian Radio Commission has made arrangements for the Belleville Men's Chorus to be heard on a coast-to-coast broadcast within the next few months.

The programme was opened by a special arrangement of "God Save the King" which was made by Mr. Hunter. The second number presented by the chorus "Hail Smiling Morn" by H. Spofforth, and it was a study in delicate shading. It was followed by "A Brown Bird Singing" by Haydn Wood and the well loved hush with which it was received was far more eloquent than the enthusiastic applause that followed. The last number of this group, "Crossing the Bar" by C. A. Crowley swelled from a surge of haunting sadness to a great burst of triumph and faith and subsided to a mood of peace and reverence.

The Orchestra.

The Symphony Orchestra played the First Movement, Introduction and Allegro from Joseph Haydn's Symphony in D. This was most impressive and the orchestra showed great skill in their transitions from one strain to another, in balance and in modulation of tone. This first number of the Symphony Orchestra was an experience that will never be forgotten by those who were fortunate enough to be present.

The second group presented by the chorus demonstrated how easily they could pass through all shades of expression from the pensive mood of the Welsh melody, "The Old Minstrel" arranged by D. Protheroe, to the faith and rejoicing of A. Dvorak's "Going Home," gradually increasing tempo to Richard Wagner's "Our Native Land," and ending with the triumphant "Victory Song" by S. Coleridge Taylor, which had to be repeated to satisfy the enthusiastic demands of the audience for an encore.

The first part of the programme was concluded by the string section of the orchestra playing Carl Thern's "Cenilia Loer" and its quite naturally had a hearty following by the stirring strains of the "March Militaire."

The Symphony Orchestra opened the second part of the program by playing the First Movement, Allegro Moderato, of Frank Schubert's Symphony in B. Minor. The contrast between the delicate theme and the thunderous attacks of the brasses was most effective, and the orchestra showed great skill and balance throughout their impressive performance.

THE CHORUS

In the group which followed, the Men's Chorus showed their ability to express not only the most delicate variety of tone, but did what is much more difficult, to express many equally varied emotions. "Lovely Night", by A. Chetwi was perfection by the gentle swaying, like the note of renunciation was struck in "In the Evening" as arranged by J. A. Parker. In D. Protheroe's "Shadow March" they made one see the flickering shadows and feel the fear of a small child at their threatening approach. The final number was "Hail Smiling Down to Bay" by F. German, which was a rousing number varied by unexpected and delightful little tempos, and the delighted audience insisted upon it being repeated as an encore.

The Symphony Orchestra played a Minuet from Haydn's Symphony in D, and the passages for the woodwinds were particularly effective. The symphony orchestra throughout the programme delighted the audience with a touch of the very highest quality, and it was an emotional experience which is incapable of adequate description as the beauty of a sunset.

The programme was brought to a closing close by J. Barnby's, "Now the Day is Over".

The recital reflected the greatest credit upon the devotion, and musical ability of those who took part, and also upon the spirit in fact that several members drove sixty miles twice a week in order to be able to attend rehearsals. Belleville has always had talented musicians, however, and in spite of their devoted service, that in itself is not a secret of the sudden advance which has been made in the musical activities of Belleville during the past few years. Musicians are essential, but they are unproductive unless men such as Mr. Ross Hunter who have a profound knowledge of music, and great organizing power. The Belleville Symphony Orchestra which attained such a high standard of excellence in less than a year's time, is only one example of what he has done for the musical life of this community. Many members of the orchestra came from the band of the Belleville Collegiate Institute, and received all their instruction which has led to success, and the citizens of Belleville, owe Mr. Hunter a debt that they can never adequately repay, in return for the instruction he has given them, and the beauty he has brought into their lives.

The programme is given below, with a list, which is a matter of honour, of those patrons in Belleville's musical life who took part.

All these will be thrown open to the public tomorrow. The world's fastest long-ranged air liner will be on the principle air stations between Northern Ireland and England.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

TORONTO STOCKS (Close)

Toronto, May 28 (CP)—Looking forward to the holiday tomorrow, traders on the industrial section of the Toronto Stock Exchange took the new week-end in their stride today and the result was a slight preponderance of narrow losses at the close. Volume hovered around the lowest levels of the year. The distillery, oil and food stocks displayed a firming tendency late in the session.

Interlisted leaders reflected mildly the heatless movements on the New York Market. Mold worked down to 38.38 but recovered to 38.50 where it showed a net loss of 2 cents. Pont A took a loss of 1-8 and C.P.R. and Brazilian closed only 1-8 lower. Consolidated Smelters eased down 1 1-2 to 181 1-2.

TORONTO MINES (CLOSE)

Toronto, May 28 (CP)—Mining shares moved aimlessly today, following the New York Market down on a short distance in the morning session and then moderately in the afternoon. Narrow recessions were general all the close. According to Fry's interpretation of the U.S. silver legislation, the white metal group last ground but rallied with its small proportions. Losses up to 30 cents were shown in the gold and base metal shares for the day. Demands were for good buying in the morning but fell back with the general market around noon. The close at 42.50 was off 25 cents net. Base Metals followed suit. Noranda, Hollinger Consolidated and Sherritt Gordon all finished down in small amounts.

Price variations in the senior gold group were insignificant at the close, early recessions having been almost entirely recovered. Wright Hargreaves and Hollinger were off about 10 cents each, McIntyre was unchanged and Lake Shore about one point.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, May 28 (AP)—Financial markets were a little sluggish today, and prices, as a whole, were inclined to drift to moderately lower levels.

Overnight consideration of President Roosevelt's message found speculative stroke somewhat confused and a bit disappointed that the aid promised the white metal did not provide the inflationary stimulus sufficient to lift stocks and staples.

Fractional bonds were a trifle set up, prime investment loans maintained their ease to firm positions.

Cannifton Church Observes Mother's and Father's Days

Special Services Held on Appointed Sundays

On Sunday May 13th and 20th of Mother's and Father's Day was duly observed in special services at the various appointments on the circuit. The Mother's Day services were conducted according to the time-honored programme with mothers and children taking special parts together all to realize very deeply, that "Mother" is one of God's most precious gifts to the home as the light, inspiration and hope.

On Sunday the 20th Father's Day was duly observed, and as on Mother's Day the churches were adorned with suitable flowers to pay tribute to the memory of the father, who built our homes, churches and schools, who with our mothers prepared and handed down to us their children a great heritage, material and spiritual. The fathers present, participated in the services taking important duties including the reading of the scripture lessons, and offering of public prayer. The father's choirs rendered very effective and a helpful contribution to the inspiration of the services.

The message for the occasion was given by the pastor, Rev. W. R. Mercer, his subject being, Samuel "What Shall I do for My Son" emphasizing the training with mother responsibility of fathers to their sons and daughters in this modern age.

SECOND PLACE FOR LEAFS

Win Third Straight From Bisons By 4-3 Count

(By The Associated Press)

Their third successive victory over Buffalo Bisons today had enabled Toronto Maple Leafs to regain second place in the International League standing.

Ray Fisgerald's single, coming in the ninth after Manager Ike Boone had been purposely passed to fill the bases, gave Toronto its narrow margin of victory, and broke up a neat Pitcher's battle between Al Hollingsworth of the Leafs and Harold (Ace) Elliott of Buffalo. Each allowed only eight hits but Hollingsworth had slightly the better of it and might have won more easily except for Boone's error in the fifth which paved the way for Buffalo to score the tying run at 3-3.

Newark also won, turning back Albany for the Bears' 10th victory in 11 games. Vince Barton's 12th homer, following a double by Dale Alexander, drove Dick Barrett to the showers and the Bears went on to win fairly handily. Floyd Newkirk, three-fingered right hander, turned in his fifth straight pitching triumph.

Rochester's Red Wings, meanwhile, whipped Montreal Royals for the league's only five games 8-5, and kept their place at the top of the ladder.

Baltimore's attempt to inaugurate the night game season was blocked by rain for the third time in as many days, a heavy shower forcing postponement of Orioles' scheduled game with Syracuse.

Y'S MEN'S PREXY IS ALEX WEIR

At Semester Elections Harry Poste is Elected V. P.

Alex Weir was the unanimous choice of the local Y's Men's Club as their president for the coming semester at the annual election of officers presented by the nominating committee and which was accepted in its entirety.

Following the election of officers at their noon banquet the club members were afforded the privilege of visiting the National Battery and being conducted through a modern battery, which is operated by Reg Reddick, in the form of a social hour, explaining the various phases through which the ingredients pass before becoming good, wholesome bread. The group of inspection proved educational as well as entertaining. Various items on the club's recent revue and the district Y's Men's convention were also reviewed.

The annual election of officers found the following in office for the coming semester:

President—Alex Weir.

CURRENT SPORT

(Day By Day)

If Jupiter Pluvius decides to call a truce for a few hours more the local baseball diamond will be in the best of condition to be enjoyed for many a year, when the Belleville Nationals open the season against the Oshawa Dukes on Thursday morning. For some time past a battery of men have been daily grooming the infield and yesterday finished their job. Although Manager Mills would not definitely come out and say which game Nationals would pitch, we have every reason to believe that Jack "Chief" Williams will twirl the opening game in the morning.

In order to open the season with the usual pomp and glory; invitations have been forwarded to Hon. Mayor Wm. Bennett, K. B. A. Elliott, past president of the O.B.B.A. and the O.B.A.A., G. E. Gilbert, local executive member of the O. B. A. A. and other baseball notables as well as past presidents et al. Mayor Wm. will also be on hand to start the ball rolling and with brand new uniforms and an extra push by those invited notables, the Nationals should get off to a good start on Victoria Day. It is sincerely hoped that the new uniform jinx does not take its toll on the Nationals, especially in the morning tilt.

In order to encourage the boys to greater heights the proprietors of the National Billiard Parlors have donated 2,000 cigarettes to the local club, but they must win them before getting them. "Jim and George", the genial owners of the pool room in question, have offered 200 cigarettes to the club after they win in their first shut-out, 500 more cigarettes will be given to the player making the most hits during the C.O.B.L. schedule and a further 1,000 cigarettes will be given to the players providing they win the C.O.B.L. championship. Well boys, there's a start, and most likely there will be more prizes to follow. All the players have to do is make a showing and they'll find the support of the fans right behind them. Tomorrow tells the tale, may it be prosperous.

As is usually the case in this community May 24th sees the official opening of the out-of-doors baseball season. Besides the C.O.B.L. twin bill, the Belleville Golf Club are opening their season with a four ball foursome, but will take the morning off first to see the ball game. Down around the water front the South End A. C. and the Belleville Yacht Club are trying off the aquatic lid with punt racing. "Red" Rogers stepped out yesterday to say, that a new course has been laid out by the S.E.A.C. sailing committee. The punts will start opposite Victoria Park, head rightly south-east towards Bluff Point, around the buoy and hence westward by the Bay Bridge buoy and then back to the original starting buoy. The course is better laid out than last year, so say the punt racers. As per schedule the horse shoe pitchers will also swing into action, tomorrow as with the local tennis artists.

The sport scribe on the Oshawa Times recently made mention of the fact that "Red" Hollinsworth ex-Petrboro infielder now cavorting about at short stop for the Dukes, recently came through with a home run inside and settled to its make mention of the fact. We are glad to learn that the ex-Petersboro sorrel top is making good with the Dukes, but his hitting specs only belittles the hurling aspirations by the Ulster Stadium boys and we still will await his September batting average, which doubtless will be about the size of his hat at the end of the season. Incidently the Toronto papers recently make light of the Dukes' win over the league leading Dantorths. Why?

President Charlie Meagher has the new National uniforms on display in his shop window, while Mack Robertson is repainting the score board and figures at the Park Grounds so the fans will have practically everything new to look at on the 24th. From the general street talk it might be suggested that it will be a case of "come early and avoid the rush" on Thursday as the largest crowd in years is expected to usher in the diamond game. Naturally the fans are interested in the showing of Jack "Chief" Williams. It looks like a busy fire and gals did to be followed by the best wrestling show of the season a night. Matchmaker McClure promised the Kilwanis Club a real big town show on May 24 and his proposed card surely has the markings of a "big time" wrestling spectacle.

Amateur Boxing Results

TORONTO, May 23.—(CP)—The unique situation of two Canadian boxers retaining their amateur titles for the second year in succession without the necessity of raising a glove was written into the records today.

Jackie Callura of Hamilton, voted the best boxer for his weight at the 1932 championships at Winnipeg and Bill Mack of Brantford, will rule the featherweight and heavyweight divisions, respectively, for another year as the result of the failure of opponents to appear against them in the championship tournament, which concluded here last night.

Tony Canzano of Toronto had originally entered in the Bantam Division and J. Infante, Hamilton, was carded for the heavyweight section but their last minute withdrawals resulted in no contests.

Callura, after six titles decided in last night's milling were well distributed, Kindall in Montreal, Winnipeg, St. Catharines, Kirkland Lake and Hamilton covering one each. Lew Hamilton, Toronto, Hamilton chopped Ken Robinson, Camp Borden, Ont., unanimous decision to capture the middleweight crown. Wakefield only recently beat Robinson in the Ontario finals.

It took Louis Nicklo of Montreal only 45 seconds to determine the new champion in the welterweight division. Nicklo dropped "Peaches" de Napoli of St. Catharines to the canvas with a left hook to the head shortly after the bout got under way and the St. Kitts Italian, who had defeated Gordon Schmalz of Kitchener in the semi-final, stayed down for the long count.

Herbie Dyment, copper-colored youth from Kirkland Lake won the 175-pound division honors, when he obtained a split decision over Tommy Osborne, lanky Montrealer. Dyment with an inordinate reach appeared to have been well beaten and the decision was roundly booed.

A chinky scrapper from St. Catharines, Joe Serafino, accounted for the Eyesight Crown, when he clubbed Max Berger of Montreal to the canvas. Berger was always on the run and fought a rearguard action throughout.

The lightweight title went to George Bland, lanky Toronto boy who defeated his clubmate, Sammy Lafferty for the crown.

LARGER FARM IS LOOMING

Rural Population in East Canada Likely to Grow Little

Montreal, May 23—(CP)—Possibility of growth of rural population in Eastern Canada is very limited as the people are now very largely on farms and there is a tendency to move toward larger farms to the cities districts, C. A. Lemieux, of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Ottawa, told the sixth annual meeting of the Canadian Political Science Association here today.

Mr. Lemieux' paper dealt with factors in the growth of rural population in Eastern Canada.

"There was no relation between the time when a county reached its maximum rural population and its maximum agricultural area and development, Mr. Lemieux said. All the available agricultural land of the counties that have ceased growing had been occupied and in many cases the occupation took place only after the rural population had started to decrease. In the counties where the land was abandoned, it was because of its low productivity and not because of a shortage of population.

On the roof, looking down upon Le Bistro, are the owner's wife's clothes' roof hanging out a washing. Public enjoyment is brief and decisive. Above him was the blasé sky of north, indoor existence, indulging a love song of old Spain. The singer had a good voice—clear and strong—and he was singing across a stretch of vivid green dotted with tall trees over a little lake. Below bridges, defiantly scarlet. Down beyond the roofs of the canoe slowly forward him. It was hastily laden with smart canoe. On the narrow seat at some corner shop where cornrosettes and thin blinds are rolled high day some little daughters of Hawaii would be sitting, sick of the cane to nibble as they sipped lemonade.

The morning would see him strolling Obispo and O'Reilly and walking Grant to Montgomery and at the Cosmopolite for luncheon or supper to Le Bistro. He would be eating the dust of the street on his feet and breathing the life of the city street as he ate. Then, he decided, only

BULGARIA IN HANDS OF MILITARY FASCIST GROUP

Without firing a single shot, the military forces of Bulgaria last week and staged a coup d'etat, dissolved the parliament and set up a Fascist state under the leadership of King Boris. The new regime is now entrenching itself with its only opposition coming from the Independence-demanding state of Macedonia from whom the new regime will attempt to take all present power. It is feared that armed opposition might result. King Boris (left) while he took no part, gave his full co-operation. At right is seen Queme Giovanna. HONOR MOTHERS AT BANQUET

Four Groups of John St. C.G.I.T. Hostesses to Several Guests

Members of the four groups of John Street United Church Canadian Girls in Training gave a banquet in honor of Mrs. Robina Templeton, Sylvia Ross, Mildred Bertram and Sadie Denike, their leaders, entertaining their mothers at well-arranged banquets and program last evening in the Church Hall. Seventy were present and the girls were charming hostesses and interesting entertainers.

Wildflowers in low bowls and spring plants gave the setting for tables a dainty air. The C.G.I.T. emblem was reproduced as decorations on the serviettes, the painting being well done. A delicious menu was served, the dining room in charge being prepared by the girls themselves. Miss Margaret Leslie presided as toastmistress and Miss Card led the sing-song which opened the program. Guests heard with interest the really delightful folk songs of many lands which are learned at C.G.I.T. camps and which the girls they are enrolled under the banner of Jesus. Mothers' dreams are centered about their girls whom they want to be the best girls in the world. Their dreams are more practical than those of youth who look down a vista that seems to have go end. Mrs. Dinnese concluded with the hope that the mothers-in-training with the Canadian-girls-in-training would have all their dreams come true.

A dramatization of a chapter of the past-season's study book, Pearl Buck's "The Young Revolutionist" was successfully presented by members of Alma group. It dealt with a period in the life of Ko-Sen, who has been offered as a "hostage pawn" by his parents if he should recover from a serious illness. The realization of the dreary fate that awaited him cut off from family, overwhelms him for awhile after a time he is the novice he escapes and joins the army. Returning he brings to his family she message of a new God which coming two lives when the old gods have best destroyed, and he and his sister resolved to "take service with Jesus".

Miss Jeannie Williams as reader gave the background of each scene and these taking part were Phyllis Archibald as Ko-sen, Shirley Brown as his mother, Eleanor Johnson as the father and Doris Fryer as the sister. Each took her part with feeling and understanding.

The address of the evening was delivered by Miss Card, effectively known to the girls as "Peter". She brought thoughts for their consideration in the great question of how "our age Canada and the world training may best serve her country. She referred to the "reverence for image" when one looks at the image of the world with eyes that see not the divine image, but "graven image" bonds which link nations together and the elements that are common to all.

Questions over which they, as citizens-in-training, might reflect included fear of international peace and Miss Card showed how wars are caused by citizens of different countries to be top nation rather than trying to establish their proper place in a great commonwealth of nations. Resentful attitudes when students of other nationalities enter the school house list or race prejudices were mentioned and the duty of each of understanding them they will not fail them.

From the standpoint of making Canada what the girls want, they help much by making Jesus the center of all life, of every studying, of life. In conclusion Miss Card challenged mothers and daughters to do think.

CAR STOLEN FROM NAPANEE

At 2 p.m. this afternoon the local police were asked to be on the lookout for an automobile reported stolen from Napanee. The car was described as a Buick sedan painted a light green color and bearing the license plates Y-2307. Chief Constable Watts of Napanee, informed Belleville authorities by phone that the car had been taken by translators may be needed westward on No. 2 highway.

TWO COLLIE DOGS NOW IN POUND

Two fine specimens of collie dogs are at present impounded at the local dog pound, one wearing a 1934 Thurlow dog tag. One of the canines is black and white, while the other is sable and white. The dogs have been in the possession of dog catcher Thorns for the past 36 hours and will be destroyed tomorrow if the owners do not claim their property. Last evening the dog catcher was called to an East Hill residence, where the resident complained to the department regarding the bad behavior of dogs destroying his garden. The one in question was dog had been tracing up his garden, recently sown with seed. The dog was the dirtiest looking one.

Makes Solo Flight England to Australia in 15 Days 23 Hrs.

Port Darwin, North Australia, May 23 (AP)—Jean Batten, 24-year-old New Zealand girl flier, reached this city today after a solo flight from England on which she set a new women's record for the journey.

Miss Batten made the long, hazardous hop in 15 days, 23 hours and 35 minutes, eclipsing the former women's mark of 19½ days held by Amy Johnson, wife of Capt. James A. Mollison, British flier.

Miss Johnson completed her flight and set the old record on May 24, 1930.

The New Zealand girl arrived at Port Darwin in the accompaniment of a tumultuous welcome at 3 p.m. local time, 1.30 a.m. E.S.T.

Miss Batten was making her third attempt at the flight when she soared away from Lympne, England, on May 8.

Her first effort was in April 1933. Then her machine broke down beyond repair at Karachi, India, last month, trying again, she crashed in flame. She sustained severe facial lacerations and several stiches were taken in her lip.

Nevertheless, as soon as her plane could be repaired, she flew back to England and began preparations for the third try which has proved successful.

The plane in which Miss Batten set her record is an ordinary standard wooden Gipsy Moth biplane.

DIES ON WAY TO OFFICE

C. J. Berry, Asst. Editorial Writer of Hamilton Spectator Stricken

Hamilton, May 23 (CP)—Cecil J. Berry, assistant editorial writer of the Hamilton Spectator, died from a heart attack on the way to his office today. Mr. Berry had been ill, but his condition was not thought serious, death coming with shocking suddenness.

Mr. Berry joined the staff of the Spectator as a news gatherer, afterleaving high school and soon rose through the newspaper's ranks because of unique capabilities. He acted as a reporter until 1920, when he became telegraph editor. Later he was transferred to the assistant editorial chair, and his lilting comments were widely quoted in Canadian newspapers. He was a keen golfer, and his attractive personality made for him a wide circle of friends. His widow, one son and one daughter survive.

"WAS TAKING EVERY KIND OF DRUG FOR CONSTIPATION"

Then ALL-BRAN Brought Relief

Read this very enthusiastic letter.

"I am 34 years old and as far back in my life I have been constipated. I was so bad that I had one bowel movement every five or six days. I was taking every kind of drug known for constipation, for the blood.

"You talk in ALL-BRAN so much like that in leafy vegetables. Inside the body, I found a soft result. Gently, this clears out the intestinal walls.

"Isn't this safer than taking harmful patent medicines? Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Severe cases with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

"You'll enjoy eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN as a cereal with milk or cream, crisper or tasty as soft fruits added. Or, to use in cooking.

In the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

FAIR BUSINESS SUGGESTIONS

into the details of an industry. It is the difference between policies an industry and operation." Only if this the NRA has gone too far, entering the operation of an industry.

The industrial set-up recommended by him would not increase prices, Mr. Carlisle insisted when questioned by Mr. Young, Liberal member for Weyburn. "My scheme is for the stabilizing of industry and if properly established, I think the industries would operate profitably and still not increase prices."

The effect of the NRA had been to increase prices, interjected J. H. Ilsley, Liberal, Hants-King. Mr. Carlisle agreed but this had been President Roosevelt's avowed purpose.

It was not his intention nor did he believe it would be the result of his set-up.

Penalty On Big Profits

From a life-time in big business, Mr. Carlisle offered a penalty for exorbitant profits. Sam Factor, Liberal, Yeoman South-Carleton, asked how the government could discriminate as between the two respectable businesses manufacturing big profits, mentioning tobacco factorie.

"Because his selling price and increase the price of the commodity," suggested the Hon. Mr. Manufacturer. He did not agree a graduated income tax acted on profits would be fair.

As the scheme of government-controlled business, Mr. Carlisle suggested men should not be permitted to enter an industry unless financially responsible, an additional plant should have proper equipment, agree to pay fair wages and maintain fair hours. And, if the government considered a plant not efficient and operating the point where further competition might recognize it—but more competitors would be permitted.

The general picture painted by the Toronto manufacturer doubtless would have been more rosy had flies on his head a few years ago by the trust-busters and those opposed to combines. But the committee today did not seem to be anxious to hear his proposals, apparently taking everything in stride.

Archbishop McNeil Recovers Consciousness

Toronto, May 23 (CP) Archbishop Neil McNeil, head of the Roman Catholic Church in Toronto Diocese, regained consciousness today in hospital where he has lain in critical condition since an operation more than a week ago. Although he regained consciousness, it was not taken as an indication of an improvement in his condition which is still considered grave.

972 Families Cut Off, 729 On Partial Relief

Toronto, May 23 (CP)—Investigation instituted five weeks ago into needs of civic relief will save the city of Toronto approximately $100,-903 department officials estimated today.

In a statement issued today the department of civic relief showed 972 families had been cut off the lists as undeserving of relief while 729 others were reduced to partial relief. Total number on relief at this week ending May 19 were 23,996, the statement showed.

URGE SAFE SANE 24TH

A plea for a safe and sane May 24 was urged upon the citizens of Belleville by Mayor Geo. C. Thomson and Chief of Police Alexander Kidd, who called attention to the needless accidents and casualties of previous holiday seasons.

Ordinary precautions on the part of parents was particularly urged by Mayor Tho to guard against the loss of limb or life occasioned through the day's festivities. The chances of accidents will be multiplied on May 24th, and it is inevitable that that day will pass without some minor accident at least.

Holiday makers will carry journey to points outside the city, particularly those who will motor, and to observe the rules of the road and the ordinary safe guards necessary around water. Street youngsters themselves cannot be depended upon to look out for themselves, it is the duty of older members of the family to guard them," pointed out the Mayor.

"It is plainly evident that children will play with fire crackers and fire works as long as they are made and sold," said Chief of Police Kidd today. "We don't intend putting a damper on ordinary use of the fireworks or crackers, but indiscreteness on streets or in the city will not be tolerated," he warned.

"If it comes down to the fine point, it is really against the law to sell fireworks to minors, but the rule is seldom exercised."

The use of the horse and the usual accidents through runaways and other damages occasioned by the frightened animals boiling had been practically removed, he pointed out. Parents, however, must guard against the chance of accidents which will be enormously multiplied tomorrow.

One of the best tips relayed by the chief was that the family doctor's telephone number be prominently posted in case of accident which may require medical attention.

She shook her head, set her teeth on her lower lip and her eyes brimmed. "I never will be," she assured him in a high shrill voice that trembled a little. "I even took to sayin' my prayers that you would come back. I never done that before. Well, it worked I'm your doormat with 'Welcome' wrote a foot high. Say, if you knew how I felt you'd pity the blind. I ain't got but one thought of heaven and that's you. Oh, Pablito—!"

"Never mind!" he broke in a little abruptly. Then he smiled down at her, as convincingly as he could. Hands on her shoulders, he shook her gently and then looked around the big, bare room that had given him the feeling of returning home.

He found little change in the surroundings and this added to his feeling of home-coming. In the stretch of ground at the rear of the building the heap of empty tin cans had grown higher—their gawdy pictures of tomatoes, pears, peaches and apricots dimmed by the hard rains. The grocer had a new son who crawled among the barrels and the tin boxes, wearing little more than he had worn at his arrival, and the grocer's oldest daughter was to marry the young man who had sung beneath her window before Pablito left. Lottie's hair had become an autumn brown— an improvement over the flaming auburn, he thought.

On the roof, looking down upon La Senora Parra who stood on a lower roof hanging out a washing, Pablito enjoyed a brief interval of peace. Above him was the bluest sky on earth. Below someone was singing a love song of old Spain. The singer had a good voice—clear and sweet-toned. Pablito looked across a stretch of vivid green dotted with tall palms and saw a hibiscus hedge, defiantly scarlet. Down the road an ox cart came slowly toward him. It was heavily laden with sugar cane. On the morrow at some corner shop where corrugated iron blinds are rolled high by day some little daughters of Havana would, no doubt, buy a stick of the cane to nibble as they skipped homeward.

The morning would see him strolling Obispo and O'Reilly and walking through the park, stopping at the Cosmopolita for luncheon or going to La Union. He would be eating the dust of the street on his food and knowing the life of the street as he ate. Then, he decided, he would ride in a wildly lurching taxicab down to the docks and along the wall-guarded water front where the glare from the narrow bay causes blue eyes, unshielded by dark pigment, to squint and lower lids for protection.

He would ride through the smart Vedada, where trimly dressed nurse maids may be seen accompanying elaborately clothed little children; on out to Cerra where life is lived almost entirely in the open; and then on to the Vibora where lived his mother —his mother whom he had never seen.

He would order the driver to go slowly along la calle San Anastasia and at a certain door he would look long. For a moment Pablito's bitterness came back to him. Then again the wonder of the picturesque land swept over him. Cuba was home to him; it was gorgeous and wonderful.

A moment more and this mood died away—to know no reviving. Pablito had dreamed so often of sharing the beauties of Havana with Estelle, who had loved it, too.

CHAPTER XLI

The Noyes case absorbed Marcia Treadway. She knew that Pablito had lived with Noyes and now, of course, Noyes would step out of hiding to claim the fortune that was his. He could, no doubt, tell her where to find Pablito. Once he found the youth, Marcia had resolved that she would tell the truth and free him from the old charges.

No longer did Marcia dream of making Pablito dependent on her —of trips to France and Spain and Italy. She wanted instead to say, "This is the truth I owe you and must tell to set my mind at rest."

Her maid found her surprisingly kind these days. Marcia no longer become harsh at the slightest interference with her will. "Ah, well," she thought, smiling. "I've travelled a long way." She thought too of those years during which she had planned to shield Pablito and herself. She now knew that she could shield him only by the truth and that with the truth she must tear from herself the protection that sheltered her from the world's scorn.

The Noyes case filled long columns in the newspapers. There were many stories about Josie Martell who had danced and acted with so much charm and grace. "Another Maude Adams" she had been called.

Staid middle-aged men smiled, reading this column, and then sighed a little sadly. A look over the shoulder is likely to cause a sag, while a look ahead makes the muscles tense. And in middle age one does not look ahead so easily as one looks behind.

Norris Noyes' wife had confessed that she killed Josie Martell. In the midst of the confession she had lost consciousness and had been revived by drastic measures. Then, gasping and holding off the chill finger of death by sheer will power, she finished what she had to say the story she had kept secret since the night her husband had taken a revolver from her hands to say, "Go!"

Mrs. Noyes had been jealous, she confessed. Her jealousy had grown until it completely overpowered her; she knew no other emotion. She had followed her husband one night to Josie Martell's home which was well uptown. A maid had admitted her and she saw the maid disappear from the rear of the house. Then from the hall she listened to voices in the next room —Josie Martell's voice and Noyes'. They were talking of pictures and of artists and they said nothing that could possibly offend Mrs. Noyes. She went into the room then and Josie Martell arose to make her welcome. But Mrs. Noyes did not sit down. She stood in the doorway, smiling. Then she raised one hand, holding the small Spanish revolver that she always kept in her dressing table drawer. She fired.

When she next knew anything beyond her husband's swift, urgently voiced "Go!" she was on her way home. She let herself in with her key. The testimony of Josie Martell's maid that a woman had called that night to see her mistress was dismissed as unimportant after Noyes' disappearance had been interpreted as a confession.

Mrs. Noyes had had one letter from her husband after that. He wrote her that he had never been faithless to her physically. His interest in Miss Martell had been no more than a friendship based on mutual interests. Nevertheless he was guilty, Noyes said, because he had led his wife into loving him and later ceased to care for her. He also wrote that he was not coming back, that she must rear their son as best she could and with the realisation that the crime was his, not hers. Between them they had killed one of the best women who ever lived.

Mrs. Noyes' confession delivered between deep gasps, was complete. Perhaps it was a relief at last to speak. Beyond doing justice to her husband and delivering the money to him that was his —if he could be found—the confession made little difference. The son whose rearing had been left to his mother was one of those reported 'missing' in France. Perhaps the boy had been urged to a too-gallant duty by thoughts of a father who had killed a woman and run away.

Thus are the patterns of life woven.

At the same time there was also much space in the newspapers devoted to accounts of Jim Field's spectacular financial crash. There had been a drop in the market that took him under, leaving him completely at the mercy of men whom he had betrayed. These men —settling on the little that was left —bent their red, rough necks to pick the bones, as their feathers grew sleek and shiny.

Estelle's pictures were printed widely, one of them bearing the caption, "Deserted by Lover After Father's Failure."

Before leaving for Havana Estelle had learned of the crash. She had received a letter from Alec Davids the morning of their departure. Alec wrote, as cruelly as possible, that their engagement must be at an end. He said that he knew she had never cared for him. He had not cared for her either until he had determined to show her who was master. Then somehow he had learned a blend of love and hatred— a wish to love her as he dreamed of loving her and a wish to hurt her as men rarely dream of hurting women.

"Of course," his mother had drawled, watching him write the note, "it is quite impossible now. And after all, dear—!" The words ended with a raise of pudgy shoulders.

"Oh, surely!" Alec agreed languidly.

It was like Estelle to pull him into a mess like this, he thought. To make him love her and hate her and then leave him unable to fulfill the least of his morbid and cruel fancies. Yes, it was like her. He hoped she would suffer as she never had—as few women had!

Marcia came down to the pier to see the Fields off. The place was thick with a salt tang that had been carried into the big barnlike structure by the fog of the gray day.

"You're lucky to be out of this, you two!" she said, pulling her fur coat closely around her throat. "I wish I were leaving with you!"

She had decided it would be kinder to act as though nothing whatever had happened.

"Better come along!" Field invited with a weak echo of his old hospitality.

"I'd love to but unfortunately I have an important luncheon engagement. It's with a young man who writes poems to me and all that kind of thing. Estelle, you're rather lighty dressed, aren't you? It's such a fearful day. The jonquils in the florists' windows are positively insulting, aren't they?"

Suddenly she became silent and slipped her arm through Jim Field's. He was surprised at her touch. Marcia was reputed to be a "cool one". She had always had that reputation except at that one time when she was said to have cared for Ted Jeffries.

"Jim," she went on quickly, "I have a story to tell you. It's far too ribald for this child's ears. Come along down here a little way and I'll narrate the naughty thing—"

He walked with her, disinterestedly. Field had felt numb ever since the first threat of his loss had come to him with a drop of stock he had thought to be untouchable.

"I had a funny feeling just then," Marcia confided when Estelle was out of hearing. "Odd, isn't it, how we Americans use the word 'funny' in the wrong sense so often?"

"Yes," Field agreed. He wondered why she was sparring.

"Well," she went on, "I had this —odd sensation because I realised I have never asked you about someone of whom I want very much to hear. You know a good many things—too many, you know—and you might know this. If you do you must tell me. You must—"

"What is it?" he asked shortly.

"Do you know what's become of that boy who used to work for you —the one named Pablito? The one who lived with Norris Noyes?"

"What makes you ask?"

"I want to know, Jim. It's important!"

Little Benny's Note Book

Today in school Miss Kitty was telling the class about prompness and what a grate thing it is to do things rite away so they'll be done instead of posponing them till tomorrow and then maybe not doing them anyways, saying, A tardy and dillytory person is a cerse to himself and to everybody with hoom he has deelings. Waisting time is just as serious as waisting money, in fact there is an old but true saying, Time is money. Now I'll give you 10 minnits to see how many of you can compose some little story to show the evil effects of procrastination or waisting time, she said.

And she gave out paper and after a while she said, Time's up, raise your hand if you have compleated a story.

Wich about 5 fellows waved their hands including me, Miss Kitty saying, That's very nice, Charlie Simkins may reed his ferst.

Wich Puds Simkins got up and did, being, Once a boy was wawking on the raleroad tracks and he herd a train coming in back of him, G, I better tern around and look and see how close it is. And then he thawt, O well, what's a hurry, I'll look a little later, I'm a quick jumper anyways, good nite what was that hit me? He never found out the anser but it was the lockomotive. The end.

Well, it illistrates the evils of procrastination in a way, but no boy has any rite to be wawking on raleroad tracks, Miss Kitty said. I'll call on Benny Potts to read his, she said.

Wich I did, being, A lazy boy got a bone in his throat and started to choak, thinking, I guess I better ask somebody to hit me on the back. O well I'll wait a little while, I'm not choaking very bad yet, I'll ask them later. But pritty soon he was choaking so bad he couldn't ask, and he choaked to death while everybody elts at the table was too bizzy eating to notice him. The end.

O deer, let's go on to the spelling period, Miss Kitty said.

Wich we did.

BRINGING UP FATHER

By George McManus

TARZAN THE TERRIBLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

"Long have I been held captive in the temple," replied Lady Greystoke to the questions of O-lo-a. "There the high priest saw to it that I was instructed in your language. I am from a far country, Princess, —one to which I long to return; and I am very unhappy." "But my father, the king, would make you his queen," said the girl. "Surely that should make you very happy!" "It does not," replied the captive. "I love another. Ah, princess, if you had known what it was to love and to be forced into a marriage with another, you would pity me."

The princess was silent, for that situation was exactly what she was facing. "I do know," she said at last, "and I am sorry for you; but if a king's daughter cannot save herself from such a fate, who may save a slave woman? For such in fact you are." Meanwhile, in the great hall in the palace of Pal-ul-don, the king was giving a banquet to celebrate the morrow's betrothal of his only daughter to the beastly Bu-lot, son of Mo-sar. The bridegroom-to-be, his powerful father and most of the guests, were indulging themselves heavily in drink.

Now the king had little love for this mighty chieftain and his ugly son—nor they for him. He had consented to the coming marriage with O-lo-a merely to save his throne from these powerful claimants. The carousing was at its drunken height when Bu-lot, emptying his tankard at a single gulp, cried out: "This do I drink to O-lo-a's son and mine, who will bring back the throne of Pal-ul-don to its rightful owner." The king could scarce contain his wrath at this insulting toast, and rose to his feet, glowering at the offending guest.

"The king is not yet dead!" cried Ko-tan, "nor is Bu-lot yet married to his daughter. There is still time to save Pal-ul-don from the boasts of swine." Every eye turned upon Bu-lot and Mo-sar, who sat directly opposite the king. Suddenly sobered, Bu-lot sprang from his seat, where he had sunk after delivering the toast. Seizing a knife from the sheath of the warrior upon his right, without warning he hurled it with terrific force at Ko-tan. The latter had no defense, and there could be but one result—Ko-tan, the king, lunged forward across the table, the blade buried in his heart.

Medals, Certificates, Awarded at Tweed H.S. Commencement

W. E. Tummon, M.P., Speaks on Coat of Arms of Dominion

Tweed—The high School Commencement Exercises were held at Tweed High School on Friday evening. The attendance was not as large as an event of this kind merited. The reception committee was composed of Mr. T. E. Moffat, B.A., principal of the school; Mr. H. Trumpour, chairman of the Board, who welcomed each one on entering.

Mr. J. D. Corcoran, ex-chairman of the Board, in his address spoke of the relation existing between the teacher and pupil and the value of education. He said that there are times when a teacher must resort to sarcasm to get the best out of a pupil, who must look at it as a life lesson. He referred to the value of education saying that a student must form the habit of thinking in a logical and orderly manner. He complimented the pupils on their excellent work which was for them the commencement of a high School education.

Mr. W. E. Tummon, M.P., delivered an interesting and instructive address on Canada's Coat of Arms.

Armorial bearings, he said, came into use as a means of identification. They were important in time of peace and in time of war, often a matter of life and death. Until recent times, as history is reckoned, few men could read; now all men accentuate the advantage of newspaper portraits, moving pictures and the thousand other ways we now possess of identifying people. Heraldry may be described as a form of picture writing, worked out in the Middle Ages to afford a means of identification. Then men, people had the artistic perception — finer perhaps than we possess — to recognize; they liked bright colors and had artistic taste in the use of them. The result was a system of heraldry that was at once simple, practical, but beautiful.

Despite modern photography, and other modern inventions, we still make use of emblems, badges and symbols.

The maple leaf at once suggests Canada; the thistle, Scotland; the rose, England; the shamrock, Ireland; the bell, Wales; the lily, France and each is used as an emblem. The people of the Middle Ages, chiefly in access of space, resorted to a system this method of assigning to the rich and poor of arms is the most elaborate form of the system of heraldry, and the system became a science. It is curious to note that, in a measure, it abandons the practice of using armorial bearings and adopts in preference the emblems and symbols which belong to democratic institutions and inspire love of country. Of these symbols are the eagle and the flag as the eagle, the chief; and while the flag is the more frequently used, the coat of arms is the older—often the foundation of the flag.

Practical Value

The use of coat-of-armour began in a thoroughly practical manner. Uniforms were unknown and early have been dye, expensive in early times; soldiers therefore carried banners instead of their clothes, or their chiefs, and every man of importance, who, in battle, wore the visor of his helmet would be down, took care to assume armorial bearings — his identification mark—either by painted his shield, which was carved on vassels' or his tunic. Thus the arms of the first Duke of Lorraine, who lived at an Inn, he would announce that he was there by having the sign hung up his shield outside. Young people of social rank were thought to be ought to read or write, were carefully trained in armoury; and when a crusader, for example, found himself in a town the day before a battle, messengers could tell in a moment who were there by the devices at the shields which their owner had displayed.

Beginning with a simple use of badge and devices, heraldry developed into a science which still more than merely identify a man, was intended to make known in a small space a surprising amount of information about his social position and family history. From his coat of arms it might be possible to tell that his father was still alive—that he was a younger son—that he was married—that he was descended from this or that family other than his mother—that he belonged to a younger branch of his family—and so on. Thus, for example, the arms of the Prince of Wales are those of England with certain marks upon them which indicate that he is the heir apparent, whose father is still living: while the arms of the Duke of Connaught are the Royal Arms with certain other marks which indicate him to be a younger son of a Sovereign. Descent from a junior branch of a family is shown in that are called "differences"; while "quarterings" indicate a right to bear the arms of more families than one.

The Royal Arms

The Royal Arms are what are termed in heraldry "arms of dominion." They are the personal arms of the King, and are not his personal arms because he is King.

The Arms of England are a red shield with three golden lions.

The arms of Scotland, a golden shield with a red lion, enclosed in what is called a "double tressure," a sort of border of two thin lines.

The Arms of Ireland — a blue field with a golden harp.

Turning to the Arms of Canada, three facts are worthy of attention: First, that Canadians stand to their King in as close relation as do any of his subjects elsewhere; secondly, that Canada, an integral part of the British Empire, possesses, in the Great War, a member of the League of Nations; lastly, that Canada's standing has been recognized by four different races—French, Scottish, English and Irish—by adding hitherto the language, laws, institutions and traditions of their arms—of all four mother countries. In these three ideas expression is given in the achievement of arms which it has been His Majesty's pleasure to authorize Canada to bear.

Engraved with—that is to say, surmounted by—the Imperial Crown the achievement is as follows:

On the shield, on the upper two thirds of it, are displayed the Royal Arms, differenced by what once was the Arms of France, before shown in the fourth quarter; and on the lower third, silver on waves, a green three-leaved sprig of maple, the emblem of Canada.

The crest is a lion, in its right paw a red maple leaf, which lies over, during the Great War, came to be used as a symbol of peace for Canada.

The supporters are, with some slight distinctions, the lion and unicorn of the Royal Arms. The lion on the dexter side, the unicorn on the ancient banner of France.

Canada's Motto

The motto is "A mari usque ad mare," "From sea to sea," alluding to the fact that the Dominion of Canada stretches from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It is taken from the Latin version of Psalm 72: 8—"Et dominabitur a mari usque ad mare, et a flumine usque ad terminos orbis terrarum." In the authorized version, the quotation reads: "He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth."

Prolems in Education

Mr. A. W. McGuire, B.A., I.P.S., spoke on the subject of Problems in Education. One difficulty met with by both teachers and parent is how to interest the boy or girl in school which is the most important institution in the life of a citizen, even excepting the church. This interest may be aroused by the parent taking an interest in the pupil's work and encouraging him. Another problem is Homework, or Home Study. Both these have thought profitable. He favored home study partly for the knowledge which could be gained by it and partly for the habit of application which was gained from it. He spoke of Medium which he thought a most important subject. He urged the importance of ideals in life.

KIWANIS SHOW A STANDOUT

Holiday Wrestling Card One of The Best Ever Given

Bellevillians are in for it— the greatest thrill of their lives in the course of watching athletic entertainment. The event is the Kiwanis Club's next show of light heavy wrestling. The venue is the Belleville Armouries. The time is Thursday night, to wind up Victoria Day in a blaze of glory. The attractions include two of the finest mat men ever seen, attempts to be staged on this continent at the same show, banged together four of the most outstanding wrestling performers in their classes for a display of holds and counter-holds to make the fans enthusiastic about the sport.

In the first main fray the Black Panther of Asia, Ali Baba, City's Karsten-Belt, who has shown here before to his own great advantage, will stack up against Jackie Michelle, the South Seas Kid. Three two combatants recently performed in the city of Toronto and took the crowd and assembled aerties with such eclat that Big Time Newspaper Correspondents raved about the affairs in the prominent metropolitan columns. This match, over the two-falls-out-of-three route with the one-hour time limit rule same duration as the other scheduled main bout) is sure to produce more fireworks than are otherwise purchasable in the city for this holiday occasion. In fact the entire card is more than likely to be productive of all the speed, skill, science, thrills, and action for which this light heavy grappling has come to have a name in the minds of dyed-in-the-wool wrestling fans.

AT THE REGENT

Crosby and Lombard Head Cast of Tuneful Gay Romance

Bing Crosby, Carole Lombard, Burgess Meredith, Fred Kohler and Leon Errol—that's a cast of which any number could "carry" a picture—but they are altogether in a refreshing change this advance in filmusical that comes to the Bells starting Thursday, matinee daily.

"We're Not Dressing" is the Paramount vehicle in which the six stars of Hollywood combine to create a swift-moving zeryny mixture of song and action.

Crosby is a sailor aboard the yacht of Miss Lombard, cast in the role of a wealthy heiress, with Miss Meredith, Errol and the fortune-hunting princes, Jay Henry and Jay Millard, as guests aboard the cruiser.

There is a shipwreck and this colorful band of refugees from a South Sea Island haven. On the other side of the island are Burton and Allen, a pair of nut naturalists.

The shipwrecks always been Crosby has to take command of the situation putting the former pleasure-seeking pushing guests to work.

Song by Crosby and Miss Lombard arise from story situations, which mix romance and those hit tunes were written for him and Miss Merman by Paramount's ace team of songsters, Ralph Rainger and Harry Revel.

Miss Merman, the Broadway girl who sang her way to Hollywood, who made and became famous with "I Got Rhythm," swings into musical screen prominence with a pair of jungle tunes.

Same As Top Speed

Throughout "We're Not Dressing" Director Norman Taurog has injected a reflection of timing and sequence suppose, which keeps the picture running at top speed, just where it is to project to full extent the easy love scenes between Miss Lombard and Crosby.

The actor emerges as not only a splendid singer, but also as a capable actor.

Under Taurog's direction, Crosby is allowed in his new picture to take advantage of a few of the scenes written for him by Benjamin Glazer.

Paramount has in this picture an outstanding piece of entertainment—a clean picture with features to attract every family-group.

Exceptional Shorts

A handy collection of short gems has been assembled for Paramount's new vaudeville program including an all-star comedy, an interesting novelty "Hollywood Wild Bears" and "Cooking the Movies" among the clever adventures of the News Cameraman.

Also Features Tonight

Lee Tracy and Sally Blane are featured in Hugh Herbert comedy drama, "Advice to Love Lovers" at the Bells tonight for the last time. Also Paramount's "Journal of a Crime" is the second feature attraction.

PROMISE MADE BY HEPBURN

Divorce Cabinet Ministers From Corporations if Elected

Hamilton, May 23 — (CP) — Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader, today was enroute to Sarnia Lake and Calcargo, leaving a promise with Hamilton, electors, that if his party is placed in power Cabinet members will be free of all entanglements. His Cabinet Ministers, the Liberal leader said, will be "unfettered with financial corporations.

They would be divorced, and from such affiliation before they assumed office. He charged the present government members could not claim such positions, but he promised that the general rally here last night.

The Conservative Administration, he said, had permitted Premier George S. Henry and even Hon. Charles McCrea, "most honest and efficient of the ministers," to hold stock in a firm with which the Hydro Commission negotiated purchase.

Mr. Hepburn attacked the Government for "reckless, unpaid-for" public money. The Provincial Power Distribution and Transmission Corporation for $23,000,000 was criticized by the Liberal leader who said It was no worth $8,000,000.

The beer and wine question will be removed from politics if a Liberal Government gains power, he added.

"As soon as we are in power we'll proclaim the bill and that will be the end of it as a political issue," Mr. Hepburn said.

The Liberal leader claimed efficiency of the Conservative Cabinet and declared the Henry administration has announced themselves as Independent of the leadership of Premier Henry.

He mentioned the programme of President Roosevelt of the United States and maintained, that with a little "common sense" Canada also could accomplish the same things. He attacked high wages costs of the government and taxation implement-ed by the Henry administration.

DAN HAWLEY OF MARMORA HIT BY AUTO

Serious Injuries Sustained on Outskirts of Village

MAN IS HELD

Wm. Barry of Montreal, Autoist, Questioned by Police

Daniel Hawley, 65, laborer, resident a short distance from the limits of Marmora, is lying in Belleville General Hospital, in a serious condition, the result of allegedly being knocked down by a motor car, while he was walking on the road toward Marmora shortly after five thirty o'clock on Thursday evening. Police investigated the accident and held William Barry of Montreal who today will be charged in police court with reckless driving according to Inspector F. Gardner.

According to Dr. J. J. Robertson who attended, the injured man suffered serious injuries and his condition is given as critical. "The man sustained severe internal injuries also to chest and skull, the latter being not fully determined", said Dr. Robertson. "Other x-ray plates will be taken today to determine the exact injuries." The man is in a semi-conscious condition and unable to give any statement as to how the accident occurred."

Provincial Officer Ted Hill of Madoc, and Inspector Gardner were at the scene and after certain information was received, they apprehended Barry and charged him with reckless driving. The man police say admits being near the scene of the accident at the time but disclaims he was driving the car, that struck and knocked down the aged man.

Mr. Hawley was walking towards Marmora and a car proceeding in the same direction is believed to have knocked him to the side of the road. The man was only "clipped" by the car but when thrown, he landed among large boulders by the side of the road and it is believed these contributed to his severe injuries especially about the chest and head.

Mr. Wellman, driving a stone truck in the opposite direction states, that he saw Hawley walking on the road but did not see the actual impact and was unable to state, which car struck the man. Barry is alleged to have claimed, that another car proceeding in front of him struck the man but that he did not secure the number of the licence. More investigation of the accident will be instituted by the police.

However, when he appeared in the local police court before Magistrate Mikel this afternoon, Barry admitted striking the injured man, but assured the court he had been forced to the side of the road by an oncoming truck. Barry was travelling about 15 miles an hour at the time of the impact, he said. Barry was charged with negligence, but was admitted to bail, the matter being enlarged indefinitely.

LIFE-SAVING BOAT NEEDED

Chief Lynch Makes Suggestion After Waterfront Incident

Fire Chief William Lynch today recommended the purchase of a city owned boat for the use of the department in rescuing capsized navigators in the Bay of Quinte and the mouth of the Moira River, following a second call made to rescue three youthful sailors from the chilly waters of the bay after their sailing punt had capsized some distance off shore at the rear of the Belleville General Hospital.

Summoned to the scene by police shortly after five o'clock in the afternoon, members of the department arrived on the bay shore in time to see the three youths hanging from the sides of their upturned craft in the chilly water. Putting out in his boat, Mr. George Scames, waterfront resident managed to bring back two of the youths, while the third was rescued by Mr. Geo. Gray. The waterlogged boat was then towed ashore. Firemen wrapped the boys in warm blankets and rushed them to their homes, but neglected to get the proper names of the navigators.

American Hardware Additions Announced by Officials

W. H. Patterson Given Bldg. Contract, Howe and Hagerman Plumbing

Contracts signed yesterday by the American Hardware Company for additions to their plant on Coleman Street will when completed make this the most modern industrial plant in the city and the best equipped Builder's Hardware plant in the Dominion according to an announcement today by L. E. McLean, manager of the local factory.

Successful contracts after much deliberation and consideration were given to local contractors, Walter H. Patterson being in charge of the building operations, while Howe and Hagerman were given the contract for heating and plumbing. It was the express wish of the American Hardware Company, that a local contractor should secure the contract if at all possible and Mr. Patterson's tender was accepted as well as that of Howe and Hagerman.

Floor Space

The two additions to be erected will add thousands of square feet of floor space to the present factory, the same to be completed so that occupancy can take place some time in early September. These additions are to fit in with a programme laid out by the engineer of the company. One addition will be erected on Coleman Street on property acquired by the company some time ago, while the other will connect with the south end of the present factory and run east and west. The buildings will be two stories in heighth of brick construction and completely fireproof. Both old and new buildings are to be equipped with sprinkler system to protect them against loss by fire, while a modern electric elevator will also be installed. When completed the plant will have close to 70,000 square feet of floor space. The work will be started immediately.

Previous Improvements

The transformer capacity will be stepped up to 500 horse power and in the new additions 75 additional horse power in motors will be installed. The American Hardware Company has been established in this city for a number of years having taken over the plant from the Springer Lock and Manufacturing Company. Since their acquisition many improvements have been made and the programme of building started in 1931 will be further carried out with these two additions. It is expected that later more additions will be made to the plant. The factory has operated practically at full time since the depression started and according to Mr. McLean, the trade is picking up and the factory is being put in conditions to handle the increased business. Workmen in the factory will have an ideal place to work, the comforts of the men and women being especially catered to. There will be plenty of sunlight and fresh air.

The starting of this project will no doubt improve labor conditions in the city and probably Belleville has reached the turning point in the depression.

Golden Wedding Is Celebrated At Cannifton

Cannifton, May 25 (Special)—On Thursday, May 24th, about fifty of the older residents of Cannifton and vicinity forgot their ages and assembled to do honor to an old and respected couple of the village, Mr. and Mrs. Watts, who were celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage.

The gathering might either be called a surprise party or a charivari.

These old young folk led off with an old time charivari. After a session of noise and merriment the visitors were invited in by the groom. Following felicitations a short program of music and readings was given, led by Rev. W. R. Merrick. The honored couple were presented with a beautiful linen table cover, a vase, a lovely silver card case, flowers and a wedding cake.

The bride and groom expressed their surprise and also their thanks and incidentally gave reminiscences of the village as they found it 50 years ago, with its numerous mills and tanneries, owned and operated by the Canniffs, the Sutherlands and the Milletts. A man worked a week at that time for the munificent sum of $5.00.

Beast 114 Feet High Weighed 50,000 Pounds

Randolph, N.Y., May 25 (AP) — The mammoth whose skeleton is the object of a search by scientists in this Cattaraugus County Village was probably lured into a marsh on the shores of a vast lake in search for food somewhere between 50,000 and 75,000 years ago, in the opinion of Chris Hartnagel, assistant state paleontologist directing the digging.

Succeeding ages, he said, saw the lake gradually filled up with soil, which preserved the bones of what may yet be known as the "Randolph Mammoth."

It was possibly 114 feet high and weighed all of 50,000 pounds, Hartnagel believes.

Workmen digging a pond for the rearing of fish unearthed one of the great tusks and the skull of the animal a week ago. Since then scientists have been searching for the remaining bones.

1,000 Mile Flight by Surgeons Precedes Operation on Explorer

Los Angeles, May 25 (AP)—William Albert Robinson, wealthy explorer, was reported "doing as well as could be expected" today following an appendicitis operation performed by U. S. Navy surgeons who made a 1,000-mile aerial dash to his bedside at Tagus Cove in the lonely Galapagos Islands of the Pacific.

Robinson, who was stricken Sunday aboard his tiny world-girdling honeymoon craft, the Svaap, was operated upon last night after the arrival of the U. S. destroyer, Hale, which had been dispatched from the Canal zone. Two Navy seaplanes carrying medical officers and supplies, had preceded it.

A message to the Associated Press from wireless operator King aboard the trawler Santa Cruz, which has been standing by the Svaap since the Cambridge, Mass., textile engineer, became ill, said:

"Hale reports operation performed and Robinson doing as well as could be expected. Planes leaving at dawn to return to Balboa."

HUNT SWAMP EAST OF CITY FOR AUTOIST

Three Men Arrested on Another Count as Search Goes on

CAR IN CASE

One Arrested Early Today And Two Later

Three men were arrested and a fourth, who escaped from the police, is being sought by a posse of officers in a marsh east of the city today. The police hunt followed the finding of a stranded automobile on Dundas street early today, which is believed to have been stolen last night at Niagara Falls, Ont.

A man giving his name as Matthew Baker, Toronto, was arrested by Constable Arnott on Dundas St., this morning while an alleged accomplice, whose name is said to be Walter Wilson of Montreal, escaped when the officer attempted to arrest the two men in connection with a motor car stolen last night in Niagara Falls, Ont. The car was found on Dundas street, by the officer and confiscated.

Baker, who is being held on a nominal charge of vagrancy, informed the police that the other named said to be Wilson had picked him up in Toronto early today. Both Baker and Wilson struggled with the officer when he apprehended them, Wilson running away while Constable Arnott scuffled with Baker. Found in the car was a handbag the alleged property of Wilson. It contained a hack saw, water pistol, the exact duplication of an automatic revolver. When making his escape this morning, Wilson headed east.

After searching the countryside immediately east of the city, the police believe they have Wilson surrounded in a marsh some three miles east of the city. A man answering Wilson's description was seen running towards the marsh by nearby residents, but has not been seen leave the swampy grounds that are covered with brush. City and Provincial Police had the marsh surrounded at 2.00 p.m. today and expected to apprehend Wilson before sundown.

Two other suspects were arrested by Constables Kelly and Isard near the city limits this afternoon. They admitted to the police coming from Cobourg to Belleville in the stolen car, but left the stranded automobile when it ran out of gasoline. They are being held as material witnesses.

City and Provincial police arrested a man said to be James Campbell and another Albert Eldahl, Simcoe Street, Toronto, shortly before noon as they were proceeding eastward on King's Highway No. 2 in pursuit of a man, who had escaped from the police earlier in the day. The men were found sitting in a car on the highway and unable to give a satisfactory account of their movements were brought to the police station with the car. They were held on a nominal charge of vagrancy and it is believed by the police the men were travelling in a stolen car. The automobile bore Ontario plates issued in Niagara Falls, Ontario. Campbell is alleged to have told the police, that he found the car on Highway No. 20 about a week ago and at that time it was abandoned.

Three Workers Cornered, Beaten And Tools Tossed Away

TORONTO, May 25.(CP)—Hand-to-hand fighting broke out today among strikers supported by a crowd of sympathizers and workers attempting to return to their posts at the Marshall Upholstering Company on John Street. Three of the workers were cornered by a score of strikers and beaten. Their tools were tossed over the roadway.

Police said Max Littlejohn, one of the workers, had been struck by a stone. A warrant had been sworn out, they said, for the arrest of his assailant.

A crowd of 150 persons milled around the plant, where the workers went on strike May 15, in protest against the wage scale and working conditions, before a detachment of police arrived at the scene and restored order.

GOLF COURSE NEEDS POLICE ASSISTANCE

Fort Erie, Ont., May 25 (CP)—Fearing some damage will be done by older men caddying these depression days at Erie Downs golf course here, officials, following their refusal to return to the old standard of three ears ago of a $1 per round on the course, Thursday asked for police protection, owing to the truculent attitude of some pickets.

The latter are preventing other caddies from working through threats, and also are openly talking of injuring the greens, cutting waterlines, etc.

An offer of a 10 cent increase over a present rate of 65 cents was refused by the caddies.

Robert J. Graham Dies After Brief Illness, Was Mayor for 3 Terms

Native of Sidney Township Early Became Leader in Business

MANY ENTERPRISES

Exceptional Business Gifts Marked in His Career

In the passing from this life of Robert J. Graham at his residence, Montrose, Sidney township, on Thursday evening, the city of Belleville and the county of Hastings have lost an outstanding citizens; one who had occupied a prominent place in the social, business and religious life of the city and who had ever the best interests of the community in which he lived at heart. He was a man of keen business insight, rare executive ability; untiring and intrepid in his undertakings and he accomplished much for the benefit of the city in which he passed all his life. He was staunch in his friendships and his passing will be much regretted by many citizens and personal friends.

Mr. Graham spent the past winter in Nassau, Bahama Islands, and returned home only a few weeks ago. Since his return he had not been in good health and about ten days ago the illness assumed a serious aspect and resulted in his demise last evening.

The late Mr. Graham was born in Sidney Township the son of the late Ketchan Graham, who was at one time member of the Ontario Legislature. Mr. R. J. Graham, followed in the steps of his father as a student of politics and of provincial and federal problems and in the year 1917 he contested the local riding unsuccessfully. Prior to this in the year 1894 he contested West Hastings for the Federal House unsuccessfully against the late E. Guss Porter.

He was educated in local schools and early in life entered business, his early training fitting him for the post which he played for so many years in the agricultural and business relations. He was interested in the evaporating of fruit and therein his business took on an international character. He was at the same time deeply interested in the development of local industry and fostered many local enterprises, to launch and develop many local industries. He was a stalwart supporter of the Board of Trade of which he had been a president and of the Chamber of Commerce. At one time he represented the Belleville Chamber at Cape Town, South Africa at the conference of the Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce of the Empire. His business ramifications touched not only all parts of Canada but even the United States.

He was a member of the City Council in his early life and 1901, 1902 and 1903 served as Mayor succeeding the late J. W. Johnson. He arranged for the consolidation of the indebtedness of the city and established a sinking fund. Since his retirement from civic affairs, he still preserved a close association with the civic administration. Years later his son, Mr. R. J. E. Graham became Mayor after a successful aldermanic career.

The late Mr. Robert J. Graham was one of the pioneer members of the Bay of Quinte Country Club, a member of Rotary Club until recently, a member of Moira Lodge No. 11 A. F. and A.M. and a leading member of John Street United Church. He was an elder and some years ago presented to the church an organ in memory of his late wife.

One of the buildings at Albert College remains a memorial to Mr. Graham, whose interest in education had been always foremost.

Some years ago he presented Belleville with the site of the present Memorial Park and was chiefly instrumental in the erection of the municipal war memorial which adorns this park.

Throughout his life, Mr. Graham was a man of the most enterprising type in the financial and business sphere which not only had a local interest but also an interest extending over a great part of the Dominion. Even at the present time he was in the highest post of the Stewart Warner Corporation, being chairman of the board.

His large evaporating business interests concerned him during his long and active business career.

Mr. Graham leaves one brother, Prof. W. R. Graham of Guelph, one sister, Mrs. Sarah Gilbert who resides in Sidney, just west of the city, three sons, George K. Graham, Lt. Col. R. J. E. Graham, and R. Bruce Graham, all of this city, and two daughters, Mrs. Jamieson Bone and Miss Grace Graham of Belleville.

Mrs. Graham who was Miss Grace Roblin, died in the year 1927.

LATE R. J. GRAHAM

Ex-Mayor of Belleville, Chairman of Board of Stewart Warner Corporation and prominent manufacturer who died on Thursday evening after an illness of over a week's duration at his home in Sidney Township.

LIQUID SUPPLY FISHED FROM QUINTE BAY

Somewhere in this city or in the nearby ditsrict is a man firmly convinced that May 24th was his lucky day, and that tales of buried treasure are not to be scoffed at. A case of whiskey reported to have been fished from the bottom of the Bay of Quinte in the vicinity of Massassaga on Wednesday afternoon, while angling from a boat is proof enough of his belief.

The gentleman, whose name was not learned, and whose place of residence is even more vague, had been fishing with little success from a boat near the point in company with a friend. His fish hook was said to have snaged on a wooden box and to have held splinters of new white wood when pulled up. Curious to learn the reason, further grappling with a heavier line brought up a case of whiskey, it was reported. The case, said not to have been buried long under the water was whisked out of sight and danger via a nearby automobile. But rumours around the waterfront were strong this morning regarding the incident.

FERRY HOUSE IS TORN DOWN

Historic Hostelry Passes After Long Association With Docks

An old building, one of the oldest landmarks in the city, said by some to be in the neighborhood of one hundred years of age, was yielding stubbornly to the wrecking bars and hammers of the house wreckers at work in the south end of the city today. The building is said tender to demolish the old Ferry House, but the task is a simple contractor, with his crew of men completed yesterday afternoon. Today a good start had been made in the interior of the building. The work was beginning to slow up owing to the stone derricks being used to pull the strong walls, constructed two bricks thick even to the foundations of the building. The woodwork was stated to be sound and firm despite its age.

GOLD COAST IS DEPICTED

S. A. Adjutant Fred Bowers Tells of Heathendom

An appreciative audience heard Adjutant Fred Bowers, late of the Gold Coast, Africa, Thursday night deliver an impressive lecture on "Heathen and Its Cruelties" under the local Salvation Army Citadel on Wednesday evening.

The scenes displayed showed much of the ways and living of the Gold Coast natives, also the Army's institutions and work for the neglected boys of the colony.

Their readiness to receive Christ was very evident in the scenes, showing a large group of boys, having become converts, marching with their illage streets with the Army flag and drum.

The Adjutant told in tender references of the work of his wife and the affection and loyalty of his daughters during their long absence, and the speaker repeatedly referred also to his appreciation of a return to the country of his life's labor.

In spite of the holiday observed by other workers, progress was made in the filling in of the ditches along Front Street. Eighteen men and the city worked throughout the day yesterday, on the west side of Belleville cemetery, and in the vicinity of Jones' Creek, good progress had been noted. A number of Belleville men are engaged in the work in this section. A start has also been made on the Picton-Belleville highway with a total of forty men now engaged in filling in the deep ditches.

Room-Base VERSUS Wheel-Base

WHEEL-BASE This is the outside distance from hub of front wheel to hub of rear wheel.

ROOM-BASE The inside body room of the car —the distance from the dash to back of rear seat.

Actual photograph showing roomy rear seat of Ford V-8

Note wide entrance and roomy front seat.

It's the V-8 engine. In this design, the eight cylinders are built in two banks of four each and are opposite each other in the shape of a V. This compact construction means that they take up only half as much space in the hood as they would if they were strung out in a long straight line. Your own tape measure will show you how much more leg room, seat room and head room you get in the New Ford V-8.

The wheel-base of a car is not always an iidication of its body room. Cars of limited wheel-base may vary considerably in the amount of interior space available for the comfort of passengers. That's the difference between wheel-base and room-base.

Take the New Ford V-8, for instance. Its wheel-base is 112 inches —a good, generous dimension. But the roominess of the body is even greater than you would expect in a car of this size.

The reason is plain and easy to see. But it is not something that you usually associate with body room.

$34 A MONTH with reasonable down payment now buys a New Ford V-8.

AMPLE ROOM IN FRONT—Ford V-8 Tudor Sedan measures 44 inches from dash to back of front seat. Exceptional leg room.

It has the Servashelf for carrying dishes from refrigerator to kitchen table. DOGS AND MEN

Mayor Mitchell of Windsor, has made a name for himself with dog owners, without trying to do so; he has offered a reward for the detection of a person poisoning dogs in that city. The man who would poison a dog is capable of doing anything, he said.

Thousands of Bellevillians endorse his viewpoint of the dog-killer by the poison means.

For dogs are pets. Now man has not so many pets in this world. He has human friends, he may by his kindliness make pets of birds as some few men are able to do, he has dogs, or he has horses, cattle, or ponies, or sheep, or goats. But the dog stands in peculiar relationship to man and child. It is a relationship which has existed for many thousands of years and it is a relationship which will last until the end of time. No one can conceive of an ending of the ties which bind the dog to mankind.

So poisoning a dog means not only suffering and anguish to the poor beast unfortunate enough to eat the poison, but also pain and bitterness of heart to the adult or the child possessing a dog pet which devours the drug.

Affection for a dog must be almost innate, so few are those men and women who do not like dogs.

Windsor's mayor has taken the proper stand on dog poisoning. He but expresses the stand of probably every mayor in Ontario. A person known as a dog poisoner loses his good name for no virtues can cower over the blackness of heart of the person who not only hates a dog but who can cause the death of a child or animals by careless placing of drugs.

Dogs by their very nature have become domesticated, have come to trust man and whoever will set out poison for them is at enmity with man who has encouraged in the intelligence of dogs that love for human beings which they all manifest. Dogs have left behind to a very large degree or to become the friends of mankind and so are in a special sense dependents upon man and man is responsible for them.

NAMES ON VOTERS' LIST

Belleville voters must see to it that their names appear on the voters' list for the coming provincial general elections. The government has gone to the trouble of having enumerators visit every home in the city but there is a possibility that in a number of homes there will not be anyone in at the time the enumerators call. Though every effort is made to get every name on the rolls, there always remains the possibility of names being left off through inability to find the voters. The provincial notice regarding the enumeration urges the voter to take no risk or trouble to find out if his or her name is on the lists.

"MAPLE LEAF TOUR"

How Canadians prepare, pack and transport to the British market primary and secondary foodstuffs of Canada will be demonstrated during the month of "Maple Leaf Tour" of British representatives of food distributing trade which will bring ten hundred and fifty men to Canada during the summer under a project planned by the Canadian High Commissioner, the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, in co-operation with the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific railways.

The men will be in Canada from the first of August until the sixth of September and will visit a large part of Canada.

Central Ontario Commerce Crusaders through Mayor Tice have written to the High Commissioner requesting that the Maple Leaf Group pay a visit to the Bay of Quinte district to inspect cheese and canning factories with a view to the extension of sales of these products of these factories in the British market.

It is the belief of the High Commissioner that Canadian plants are their own best advertising, that expansion of Empire trade can best be assured by promotion of first hand knowledge of commodities and markets by those concerned and that Empire markets can only be retained by the exporters of goods which are of superlative quality and produced under the best conditions which science and administration can devise.

This district, if the members of the touring party visit here, need have no doubt of the impression they will make upon the Britishers.

SIDELIGHTS

GRAVE and GAY

(Reported by The Lamplighter)

FACE TOWARDS THE SUN

I have turned my back to the shadows,
I have set my face towards the sun,
And my life shall be as a syllable
In the song which is never done.

The frailest, bright-winged insects
That sway on a blade of grass
Take joy in the light and the flowers
Ere their moments of living pass.

And each one is patterned and painted
With an exquisite design,
With an infinite care for perfect hues
And power and faultless line.

Then dare I to doubt a purpose
Which runs through the limitless scheme,
From amoeba which thrives with its single cell
To man and his noblest dream?,

Now I set my face toward the sunlight,
My life's rapture I open thy soul
And I go, made strong by the perfect trust
Of a heart which is sure of its goal!

—Aline Michaelis.

APACHES OF PARIS, that underworld and underground horde of thieves and assasins, were the precursors of the modern gangster, United States variety, who has vastly improved on the technique of the Apaches of Paris night life. The Apaches carried knives—the city gangsters of today carry machine guns, sawed-off shot guns, rifles and revolvers, and have no difficulty keeping their armament up to date, so loose is the sale of deadly weapons in Uncle Sam's land. As long as politics and crime go hand in hand United States gangsters will live on the fat of the land and will shoot their way into the Front Page and Big Money. Canada would not put up with that kind of thing for a minute.

IN VIEW OF THE FACT that one hundred and fifty years have passed since the United Empire Loyalists pitched their tents in the then wilderness of the Bay of Quinte region, the following historical paragraph will be of general interest:

Adolphustown was settled by a party of Loyalists who sailed from New York on September 5, 1783, and arrived at Quebec, October 9. They were under command of Capt. Van Alstine, "with a fleet of seven sail and protected by the brig Hope of forty guns." Capt. Grass had been granted the first township, the second and third were to be possessed by Johnston's Second Battalion, as Van Alstine's corps was given the next township. The party left Sorel, Quebec, first of May, 1784, in a brigade of batteaux and reached the fourth township on the 16th. of June. The names of some of those in command the party were: Van Alstine, Rutzan, Huyck, Velleau, Mayette, Shorman, Herman, Dase, Dase, three families of Petersons, Loyce, Vanskiver, Phillips and Thomas Dorland, Cornelius Van Dyke, Thomas Dusen, Jacob Auger, Huff, Richard Heagle, Roblin, Fitzgerald, Stout, Allan, Hoover, Ferguson, Baker, Germain, Rutler, Noxon, Casey, Rutledge, and Barker.

The audience was very unkind at the speaker's temperance lecture and kept interrupting. At last he hired a former prizefighter to keep order. That night he contrasted the content of home life with the squalor of drunkenness.

"What is it we want when we return home from our daily toil?" he asked. "What do we want to ease our burden, to gladden our hearts, to bring smiles to our faces and joyous songs to our lips?"

He paused for effect, and in the silence the voice of the keeper of the peace could be heard:

"Mind, the first bloke that says 'beer', out 'e goes with a 'ell of a bang!"

MAJORITY OF PERSONS ARE EXTREMISTS

Adhering to The Happy Medium is Much The Wiser Course

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

In this country most of us are extremists. It does not take long before we bend every effort toward achieving a certain goal, whether of pleasure or work. The result is that we foolishly labor to excess.

We tend to work too hard or too long. And when we play we likewise overdo ourselves. On the sensitive side, instead of sleeping too long we sleep too little, or instead of eating too much we don't eat enough.

Always does the pendulum, instead of hanging quietly in the middle the way it should, swing in wide excursions either to right or to the left.

We don't seem to be satisfied unless we jump the bounds of moderation.

It is probably easier to conceive why a person should overdo in work than in play. Work is linked with money to buy the necessities and perhaps some of the luxuries as well. Work, too, is necessary to the accomplishment of duties.

The same holds true for dancing, which should be and is, if properly practiced, a healthful and invigorating exercise, as well as of pleasure. But it is overdone to another matter. To keep it up until the wee hours on the fat of the land and feet can scarcely be called carrying and which shoot their way into the Front Page and Big Money. Canada would not put up with that kind of thing for a minute.

Why do we feel called upon always to go to such extremes? Are we wanting to go somebody one better? Is it that there is quite a zesting instinct has something to do with it. That we have, on the whole, been an abnormally energetic people is also a factor.

We really feel too youthful, too exuberant, too buoyant,—too full of life, too strong, too much energy, for words. We think it must always be put to the best possible use, that being a result of some kind that is worth while.

One of the difficulties recently experienced by Americans was that they without employment, or who have had their hours of work cut down, have been at a loss inability to relax, to take things easy, to forego the zest they formerly felt in going at full tension.

If the depression has taught us the value of living less intensely, more comfort can be derived from that ordeal. But the trouble is that when business again starts to boom everybody will promptly revert to old habits, and excesses will again be practised as of yore. At least, that is likely. On the other hand, there probably always will be some who have learned their lesson. At any rate, let us hope that is true.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

In tossing infants to drink water, one should never add sugar or other sweetening by way of encouragement. Not only does too much sugar possibly injure the youngster, but it interferes with the child's appetite for milk. Children should learn to drink water in its natural state. They should drink enough of it as a rule. During the hot weather children need to be given greater quantities of water than during other months.

ZION BRANCH VISITS Y.P.S. OF MT. PLEASANT

Athletic Society Organizes For New Season's Activities

Rawdon, May 25.—A large number of members of Zion Young People's Society of Warner's Corners, with their pastor, Rev. F. McTavish, journeyed to Mount Pleasant on Friday evening of last week to visit friends. The church hall was nearly filled and the visitors gained a splendid program which was heartily enjoyed. Mr. John Coggins, president of Mount Pleasant, welcomed the visitors and remarked about such a large gathering of "joyous people". After a period of worship and devotion he turned the meeting over to the visitors. Mr. George Brenton, president of Zion Y.P.S. graciously replied to the welcome and all sang a hymn and read a passage of Scripture respectively. The topic for "Cheerfulness" was very ably given by Mrs. Fred Bermun. She said, "Let us all be cheerful as a laugh is a physical tonic for one's health".

She closed her fine paper with an appropriate poem by Negro dialect, "Join De Legion of De Cheerful". The Misses Alma and Cora Petersch delighted with a couple of guitar duets. Miss Evelyn Barnum was heard in a very fine reading, "De Store Trip Yoh" and as an encore she gave "Ma and the Auto". Miss Cora Petersch gave two vocal solos with guitar accompaniment, "Silver Haired Daddy of Mine" and "The Royal Palm". Little Jean McPherrell recited, "How Pa Enjoyed My Christmas Toys". Miss Pearl Herr read a humorous sketch, "When the Fire Come Back". The Misses Evelyn and Helen Barnum rendered a pleasin duet, "Just An Old Covered Bridge". Mrs. Thomas Fry read a paper entitled "Be Short Yet Methods" and pointed out that there is no short cut roads to Success or Heaven. Miss Doris Barnum read a poem, "Smile Wherever You Can". Mrs. Lindsay Anderson then conducted a banana-eating contest with Miss Mildred Milligan and Mr. Kenneth Holmes as winners. The others were Miss Pearl Herr and Mr. John Coggins. Miss Laura Watson and Mr. Clifford Holmes, Miss Frances McKeown and Mr. Harold Hagerman. Everyone then took part in a cake-guessing contest which revealed many new cakes. Four young men next were called upon to make a dress for a young lady model according to pattern. The audience heartily enjoyed the proceedings as the boys managed the pins and material so my one fellow ran out of newspapers. The judges were Misses James Smith, McKeown and Barnum and they awarded the prize to Mr. Frank Parsons. Four boys took part in a needle-threading and biscuit-eating contest. The folks at Mount Pleasant served lunch and after a social half hour, votes of thanks were tendered by each society.

ORGANIZATION MEETING HELD

Liberal-Conservative Ladies of Prince Edward Lennox Meet

Picton, May 25 (Special) — The Liberal-Conservative ladies of Prince Edward-Lennox held an enthusiastic organization meeting in the Conservative committee rooms in the Maher block at two o'clock on Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Thomas Walmsley, occupied the chair and introduced the speakers of the afternoon. She welcomed the ladies present from Napanee and regretted that the ladies' Conservative organization had not held a meeting in the past four years. Now they had only one month to accomplish a great deal.

Mrs. Morton Weese of Amelianburg was the first speaker of the afternoon. She regretted that meetings had not been held here once a month, but felt sure the ladies had been active to the interests of their country by reading. She felt that Mr. Colliver who has been a farmer, a canner and a business man, was the logical choice as a representative for the riding. He had been praised by the Prime Minister and had done much for the country since he has represented us. In times of stress such as the present she felt the choice of a new man, who had not proved his efficiency, would be illogical. She regretted the passing on of some of the aforesaid Old Conservatives in the persons of Mr. W. H. Williamson, Mr. Davison, Mr. Albert Powers and others. She felt we should have a young Conservative Club here, for training the young men and women to take their places.

Mrs. Catharine Powell of Napanee next gave a very interesting address. She felt that the women in their organizations such as the Women's Institute, the Daughters of the Empire and the Local Council of Women, had done much, and that they could do a great deal in politics. She said that Mr. Henry and Mr. Bennett had given us clean government, safe banks, laws well enforced, and had kept down Communism. Our exports had increased. Mr. Hepburn spoke of Mr. Henry as "Old George with his ragged honesty" while Mr. Hepburn's own colleagues called him "wicked". Mrs. Weese spoke of the benefits the women and children received from the government measures. The Department of Agriculture supplied nursing classes for our young people, and speakers for the women's meetings. The wider distribution of Hydro had been a boon to women. The Department of Public Health had established clinics, such as the one at Kingston, where radium treatments were given in cases of cancer. Tuberculosis tests were available free for our children, and wonderful things had been done for crippled children by the Department of Social Welfare. The speaker wondered if we would rather have the gasoline tax reduced one mill and give the power rate 10 a cent or so tax on gasoline and drive over good roads?

Mrs. Ross Bush of Consecon spoke of the necessity of interesting the younger women in politics, and of getting election campaigning each woman could do in her own district.

Mrs. Frank Minaker, in moving a vote of thanks to the lady speakers, mentioned the fact that Premier Henry's wife was a cousin of Premier Pickett, and for same years lived in Picton, when her father was a minister here.

Mr. Horace Colliver next addressed the meeting. He spoke of prosperity coming back to Canada, and of the fact that farm prices here are better than in the United States. He said Ontario was the only province that showed a surplus of $400,000 for this year. Quebec with a Liberal government, faced a deficit of $6,000,000.00. Part of the money spent by the Henry government will return to the treasury. The government has loaned the Hydro $180,000,000.00 from which it will get returns, and has made farm loans of $60,000,000.00 which will be paid back. The agricultural development board has helped many farmers with a 50 per cent. equity in their farms from being them, by taking over the mortgage.

Brigadier Gen. R. R. Hepburn urged the ladies to canvass as many "negative votes" as possible. He said the women could do much to influence legislation to do away with the present evil of cheap labor, and inadequate wages paid.

Mr. J. A. Hepburn urged the women to spur the men on, to find out who they were on the committees and put them to work.

The president announced that there would be some speaker every Saturday afternoon at the committee rooms and closed the meeting.

The young son of Crown Attorney and Mrs. Gordon Walmsley entertained Prince Edward County Hospital on Monday to undergo a tonsilot operation.

More than twenty beautiful silver trophies are on display in the east window of Mr. R. B. Tully's store. These will be presented to the winners in the music competitions conducted by the County Teachers' Institute on an early date.

A YOUNG HOSTESS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be hostess at a banquet to be given in honor of the basketball team of our school, and as this is my first experience as hostess, I do not know just how to go about it and I hope you can help me. There will be prizes at the table, the basket-ball boys and thirty invited guests.

1. Just when I should introduce the toastmaster and what should I say?

2. Just how should the invitations read to be up to the minute?

E.

1. You should introduce the toastmaster very early in the dinner, perhaps just after the first course, so that he can carry on with his duties during the rather long dinner and for the rest of the program as planned.

Your introduction should be very simple, I want to say just a word of enthusiastic and cordial welcome to our guests and to introduce to you the members of our basket-ball team. You should be a great hostess to come and you have given us great happiness and pleasure to introduce to you the toastmaster of our banquet, Mr. Jones, (name).

He does this business of toastmastering so much better than I am going to take away a minute of his time, Mr. Jones.

2. Your invitations would be written as notes and in the third way you as a hostess, might word them:

Dear Mrs. Anderson:

We are going to give a dinner in honor of the basket-ball team of our school and the invitation of our school on Friday, the first of June, at seven o'clock, and we are very eager to have you and Mr. Anderson be with us for the dinner. Will you so say that you will come.....hers submitted by readers.)

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

(Copyright 1934 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

USE YOUR IMAGINATION

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am deeply interested in three boys, whom I will call A. B. and C. I am more interested in B. than in the other two. The trouble is that they all seem a little backward, though I think any one of them would make me a fine husband. The word. Would it be all right for me to ask one of them to take me out, or should I wait to be asked for a date? I meet them often. I pass one or the other of them on the street, nearly every day but we just speak and go on.

Patricia.

I think it is always easier for a girl to wait for the advance to come from the young man, but boys are very often afraid of being refused. They need encouragement. The next time you meet B. or even one of the boys, you might tactfully imply that you were disappointed about going to a movie that night, and suggest he go with you. Or ask paying their own way.

Dancing enrollment might be found useful. Make inquiries until you come across a young woman who knows him. Discreetly manage, ed, she might arrange a party of four, including B. or any of the other boys.

There is usually a way, and you can find it by being imaginative. In most cases the girls are more successful than men.

SOMEONE ELSE SAW HER OFF

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am deeply in love with a young lady for the last five months and I am deeply in love with her. She says she loves me more than anyone else. Because she is still a schoolgirl, we have agreed, mutually, that she may go with other fellows, and that I may take out other girls, I took her out two days in succession, and then asked if I might see her at the station when she was leaving on her vacation. She told me that someone else was going to do that.

If she loves me best of all, why did she have some other fellow see her off?

Puzzled.

Frankly, I would not take a small matter like that too seriously. I might give her a chance to explain, but I would not be assertive about it. Rather I would be huffier. This girl is probably just as much in love with you as you are with her. Perhaps this other fellow asked her first and, expecting that you had shown her every attention before the departure, she let this boy see her off.

You must remember that it was agreed between you that, owing to the fact that she was a schoolgirl, you were not to demand exclusive attention from each other. Be a sport about this thing.

HIS PARENTS OBJECT TO HER

Dear Miss Fairfax:

His parents have no objection to me as an individual but they do not want him to marry now or in the future. Because he won't give up, he has lost his position with his father. Do you think it is fair for parents to object to a marriage when both the young people are so well suited to each other and very much in love?

P. D.

You write me "his parents have no objection to me as an individual but they do not want him to marry now or in the future." I am afraid that your letter is ambiguous. To avoid hurting your feelings his withheld the reason for the objection of his parents to his marriage. The point involves his parents and the utmost delicacy and tact will be required in speaking of them. At the same time, the vital question is, why do they object to his marrying.

If this comes to nothing, you might try to find the answer through a mutual friend. If no satisfactory explanation develops your choice is open to you to marry a man who is out of a job. Hardly advisable, especially when the parents are against the match. You might defer any action for six months; seeing your young man but rarely. He might, in that way, win his parents to a favorable decision.

PLAYLET GIVEN BY MISSION BAND

Stirling, May 23.—The Maple Leaf Mission Band of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, met in their basement on Saturday, May 20th, with Dorothy Saunders, president, in the chair. The meeting opened with the hymn, "Jesus Bids Us Shine, Because We Are Ringing". Jean Sine read the Scripture Lesson and Mrs. Harper Reid led in prayer. A business discussion ensued. A brief playlet, "The Church", was given by Leslie Eggleton, Charles Saunders and James McCann. A recitation, "Shining Little Pennies" was well given by Doris Saunders, while Dorothy Gay gave a delightful piano solo, "London Bridge Is Falling Down". A little play entitled "Why She Didn't Join" was then presented by Jean Dafoe, Mary Tulloch, Eileen Chambers, Lillian Mathews, Helen Bonney, Shirley Ormiston and Helen Murduff. Lillian Matthews gave a reading, "Missionary Day" after which a trio composed of Jean Dafoe, Helen Murduff and Shirley Ormiston sang sweetly "Little Golden Ringlets". Mrs. A. E. Reid told of the Mission Band's activities in Manchuria following which Mrs. H. Rolling gave a most interesting story, "The Mission Band". The singing of the Mission Band chorus brought the meeting to a close after which a dainty lunch was served.

The Monday evening meeting of St. Paul's W.A. was devoted to the missionary departments. Presiding was Mrs. Percy Hollis presided over the devotional period. Daughter's Choice of Friends

Wise Parents Can Do Much to Eliminate The Undesirables

By LISA GRENELLE

HAS YOUR daughter become absorbed in a friendship that is difficult for you to understand? Unable to understand? While you are not alone you have small consolation. Your daughter has been carefully brought up, has been sent to schools, and certainly has never met any but respectable and conservative people under your roof.

Then where could have she picked up such a girl companion is the question. Where, indeed? Probably nearly the sort of girl you frequently say those where your daughter visits. There is no harm in her, but on the other hand she may eventually prove a serious influence.

At best, she seems anything but a desirable associate for your daughter as far as manners are concerned. She seems too old, too sophisticated with her carefully made face and graces, her cynical viewpoint and her talking about men. Shocked and disgusted, you wonder how your daughter could acquire such an unlikable deviation to this girl who is your own kind.

But perhaps that is the very reason. It is a very frequent occurrence. Girls are attracted to those who are different from themselves. Opposites attract. Girls who are quiet and retiring are attracted by the ways of the world—cheap, showy women who are unaware of their own circle, the very antithesis of the women in their own families.

Don't Criticize Her Friend

Why do they do it? It proves against parental domination—and parents are the most girls are different and exciting, representing the open spaces into which the sheltered girls are longing to venture. In choosing such chosen companions they are asserting the right to choose, to direct their own lives, make their own experiments, stand on their own feet and be responsible for them.

And they are right. Their demand is natural and proper, and must be granted.

But it can be granted in the form of this girl you object to. You may be right about this girl. She may be a bad influence.

But you must consider that calls for careful handling. If you forbid your daughter from this friendship, you will start a battle that will arouse defiance and resentment. She will disobey you, and you will lose your influence.

So don't criticize her new friend or tell her that you wish she would drop her. Instead, be very "interested". Pretend that you see nothing wrong in her. Invite her as a new friend; even overdo it. Try to find out what it is in her that so attracts your daughter, what she has in that your daughter needs.

When you find that out, you can act. Find a way to give your daughter what she is looking for in the other girl, and the latter will no longer be necessary. Give your daughter more grown-up responsibilities. Let her do more as if she were your age, and no longer a child.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, May 25—(CP)—Trading was a little more active in spots this afternoon in the mining section of the Toronto Stock Exchange and the price tone displayed a mild firming tendency in the last hour. McIntyre was outstanding in the session, gold group, trading at 944 at the close. Many of the base metal shares also recovered morning losses.

While trading was unusually slow in the early session today of the mining section, gold and base metal shares maintained a tone of firmness but silver shares were generally soft. Siscoe sold at 2.30 cents in the morning to 2.30 and halved its loss by moving up to 2.40 in the early afternoon.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 25 (CP)—Several of the industrial leaders pulled up this afternoon, following a speedy morning session of Toronto Stock Exchange and the close was definitely firm. International Nickel closed up about 10 cents from the day's bottom but still down 20 cents for the session. A few sporting issues also were scattered through the oil, food, distillery, construction, and miscellaneous groups. Walkers was a feature, advancing 1 1-2 to 34.

The industrial section was unable to get up steam today with brilliance lacking and traders on the side-lines. Board rooms were almost deserted, many customers having apparently extended Thursday's holiday.

In quiet trading Walker's Common, Canada Malting, gain of a point and the other distillery shares were unchanged. Nickel swung back to 36 30, off 30 cents and selling was fairly active in Smelters which gave up as 9 1-2, its low point in more than a year.

NEW YORK CLOSES

New York, May 25 (AP)—Scattered buying lifted stocks to better levels today despite extreme dullness. Tobacco shares firm. Silver shares improved. Late advances of 1 to 2 points were recorded by American Tobacco B., Liggett and Myers B., Reynolds B., American Can, Du Pont, Chrysler and Cerro De Pasco. U. S. Steel gained a major fraction. Transfers approximated 500,000 shares.

SEED POTATOES CHIEF REQUEST

Scores of vacant garden plots, formerly neglected and weed-grown will be turned into fruitful vegetable patches this summer by the unemployed of the city, it is indicated by the quantity of seed potatoes so far given out by the Central Relief Office. It is believed that one-half as many men again will be added to the number, who undertook the job of raising their own vegetables in the garden lots last year. Seed potatoes are the chief request of the unemployed this year, with other vegetables running a close second.

SMART RACE STAGED BY FOUR CLUBS

Giants, Cards, Pirates And Cubs Are Closely Packed

BROWNS ADVANCE

American League Football Appears to be Going Places

By HUGH S. FULLERTON JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

The current trend of the National League race, instead of heading toward a decision of some sort, appears to be toward keeping the teams as closely bunched as possible for as long as they can hold out. Ever since the Giants ran into difficulties in the west, that knocked them out of the lead in a hair-raising four-club race between Chicago, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and New York with every team experiencing its share of reverses, that have kept them close together.

Today's standing found Pittsburgh's Pirates with a clear lead of a half game when their 7-3 triumph over Boston Braves, coupled with New York's 5-4 victory over the Cubs who wiped out the situation whereby it was necessary to watch the percentage closely to see which team was ahead.

Chicago dropped a third a few percentage points behind the Cards, who bounced Brooklyn 7-3 while the fourth place Giants were only one full game behind the pace-setters.

A home run by Harry Lavagetto, rookie infielder, ended the ninth inning that touched off the Pittsburgh threesome. It came in the ninth to give the Bucs a 5-2 lead in a duel between Bill Swift and Ed Brandt. Then Pittsburgh went on to get four more tallies in the eighth. Carl Hubbell, thoroughly trounced by the Cardinals his last time out, failed to hold Chicago to four singles in the smashing Chicago attack, while the Red Sox Cubs were held to four hits by Lon Warneke and Jim Weaver pitching in relief for different innings.

The Cardinal advance resulted in steady and timely hitting with Dutch Leonard as the principal victim, with a couple of freakish mistakes and some effective hurling by Paul Dean. Curt Davis, who appears to be fulfilling some of Manager Jimmy Wilson's hopes for an effective pitcher, won the other National League contest by the Phillies 3-2 which limited the first place Cincinnati club to three hits.

Yesterday's Leaders

St. Louis Browns continued sparkling advance through the American League ranks to gain exclusive possession of third place with a 4-1 victory over Washington. Rookie Ray Pepper again sustained the honor by limiting the Senators with Harland Clift on base in the seventh in the only game after the Senators had scored five runs in the first.

Detroit, remained in a virtual tie with the Browns but slipped back by one percentage point by a 6-3 triumph over the Athletics gained when Tigers assisted Lefty Mahony Marcum for four doubles and six singles to account for them in the early innings.

The Yanks managed to add a bit to their dwindling lead by taking a 2-1 victory over Chicago White Sox in Chicago. Lefty Gomez while Cleveland and Boston were rained out. Cleveland won the only other Yankee victory in the west, held the scr to three hits, while his mates got to Milt Gaston for both runs in the eighth.

Amateur Ball Roundup

Toronto, May 25.—(CP)—A bombardment today found London Winery pounded into the Senior Intercounty League and Hamilton Westinghouse interested at the head of the Hamilton Steel Inter City League, Galt Terriers also celebrated the Dominion Day with numerous double headers, by repeating their first win in the International Amateur Baseball League.

London Winery visited Orillon to bat the ball about for a 11-1 victory over Mickey Lash. The Guelph club couldn't figure out the pitching of Charlie Henshaw, former Dundas intermediate hurler and all they could collect off the visitor was six hits. Johnny Jones, veteran second baseman of Galt, was the only hometown player who gave a real display.

Terriers had a difficult task in trouncing a 10-8 win from Hamilton Victorias in their own backyard. Their first victory of the season, however, was a spectacular one as they rapped out hits to tally seven runs in a seventh-inning rally. Terriers were on the wrong side of a 6-2 count, when they found their batting eyes, sending Brown on, on the mound for Vics, off the field.

Ellsworth, rightfielder, Jon Vics was the star of the game. He set the Terriers batting down as fortunate to get three homers and a double in four times at bat. Collecting seven of Vics' eight runs.

Moodie Tigers settled into first place on the Hamilton City Circuit by two impressive triumphs. Dunlop Grafton very humbled 7-2 in a morning game at Hamilton and Galt Terriers in the afternoon victims as Johnny Dawson pitched his team to a 4-0 shutout. In the morning Johnny Anderson allowed six hits but Terriers managed to obtain 11 hits to Tigers' six. It was the game from Watson.

NEWARK COMING

Slug Fest Enjoyed by Baltimore And Syracuse Chiefs Winning 18-14

(By the Associated Press)

Seasonal batting records for the International League fell thick and fast in the afternoon when Baltimore Syracuse Chiefs and Baltimore Orioles, the loop's cellar dwellers.

All previous marks for runs, hits and total hits this season were shattered yesterday when the Chiefs rallying for four runs in the ninth, defeated the Orioles 18-14 at Baltimore.

Nine pitchers, five for Baltimore and four for Syracuse, toiled during a game that lasted three hours and allowed a total of 40 hits, the losers outhitting the Chief. 21-19. Johnny Walkwood and Manager Ownie Carroll batted in seven runs with four hits each. Tom Oliver and Woodley Abernathy did like wise for the Orioles. Abernathy's batting included a pair of home runs. Joe Judge, new Baltimore first baseman, also had a field day, scoring two runs, in the midst of Baltimore's five-run rally that tied the score in the ninth inning.

While Syracuse thus was protecting its hold on second place, Rochester Red Wings dropped Toronto Maple Leafs to third place with a double header, 7-6 and 12-8, and Montreal Royals split with Newark at 2½ games. Ray Harrell pitched the Montreal Royals to victory in the opener although he looked for trouble in the ninth inning of the opener. Lefty Richard Bell was batted freely and after eight innings of the second game he was relieved by Ken Burnett who took the box with a seven-run rally at the stake. Burnett was effective and score more respectable. Ival Goodman, Red Rochester outfielder, batsy of Toronto, led the hitters with three home runs apiece. A double defeat dropped Toronto deeper into third place, two games back of the leaders.

Newark got five pitching from Bobby Weiland and second baseman Albany F. J. Brown granted only six hits while the Bears bombarded hits with passes to score all their runs in the afternoon and eight in the morning.

Montreal took the first game of a doubleheader from Buffalo 7-2 as Ray Harrell pitched a three-hit ball. Ival Goodman's home run with the bases empty in the fifth inning was the big blow. Buffalo's Ray Prim from the box in four innings.

RANGERS WIN FIRST START

Game Played on Soft, Sloppy Field at Rednersville

CARRYING PLACE, May 25.—(Special)—Quinte Rangers won their first game of the season at Rednersville on Monday evening, when they won a close game from the visiting Cavan Flyers by the score of 14-13. The game went only six innings and even at that darkness had fallen and the game was concluded. Rain falling earlier in the day made the field sloppy and wet, and many fanciful plays were to be seen as players frantically sought to retain their balance as they ran for the ball. Yellowed to stop ground balls. The Quinte Rangers present a very smart appearance in their new suits of white uniforms and crests, and appear to be rounding out nicely as a team. Under the coaching of the senior team from Redersville the boys have improved a great deal and no doubt will continue to do so. With Hicks pitching for Gardenville after the third inning failures finished strongly, and might very easily have won, had not darkness intervened. The third was the big inning for the Rangers with nine runs being tallied off Norrington's offerings. Hicks, brought in the second from Gardenville formed nicely as a first attempt at pitching, but a wet and slippery ball kept all of the players on both teams constantly on the alert. For the winners Peck pitched until the fourth when he retired in favour of Gilmore.

McLARNIN PLANS LINE OF BATTLE

Expects to Floor Ross by Not Allowing Him to Show Speed

(By Edward J. Neil)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK CITY, May 25.—(AP)— While one half of boxing's most colourful combination old Jimmy McLarnin, Irish-born and deep, dark plots, the other half soft-voiced Jimmy McLarnin, plans his campaign for preparing to bring sudden unconsciousness down upon slender and young stingman.

Jimmy is certain he will tag out powerful Barney Ross, the lightweight champion of Madison Square Garden's Bowl on Long Island Monday night. You can't get the Vancouver leather hurricane to make a positive statement in that effect however. Almost quiet, reserved and given to anything but boastful predictions Jimmy is confident down in every line of his perfectly trained fighting figure.

"All I know about Ross," Jimmy says, "is what I gathered from all the motion pictures of his second fight with Tony Canzoneri. He's a fast boxer, I've always found. But he's not fast enough for me. He was to crowd them into a corner, where speed doesn't count, and he's not the type to do that. Anyway, I works a very large part of the time.

It worked with Al Singer, Ruby Goldstein, Billy Townsend, Young Kid Kaplan, Sid Terris, Joe Glick, Tommy Paul and Tony Canzoneri to mention some of the famous Jewish fighters who faced the McLarnin problem before Ross, and wound up with the Irishman's name in the ring lights overhead.

McLarnin probably will have a weight advantage of some 10 pounds when he climbs into the ring for the second meeting in history between the reigning champions of the lightweight and welterweight ranks. He has to make 145 pounds by private agreement, at noon Monday or forfeit $10,000. He is down to 148 as of today. But he will be at least 148 and possibly 149 by the time an expected capacity crowd of 70,000 paying close to $300,000, settles back for the 15-round battle.

Ross, a natural lightweight, is not expected to scale over 138 pounds at the weighing in Monday and may be as low as 136. He will start off by a few ounces before this mark.

NOT THEORIES!
By Alex Morrison

Too many golfers have asked themselves at this stage of the game, "Something in their swing goes wrong but as the clubhead strikes the ball." This is where they are wrong. It is likely,

The time in which the club travels through the hitting area of the swing is but the smallest fraction of a second, so short a space of time that we don't have a chance to act upon any thought we might have.

It's simply this: we sense that something is wrong in our swings about the moment of impact but the error developed well before this point.

Baseball Season Opened with Nationals Scoring Double Win Over Smart Oshawa Dukes

1934 Edition of Nationals Show Real Class in Both Fixtures

WILLIAMS FEATURED

New Comers to Team Round Out Imposing Squad

Baseball came into its own again in Belleville yesterday when the 1934 edition of the Belleville Nationals demonstrated to nearly 2,000 fans, in a twin bill that they pressed from the Oshawa Dukes by decisive scores, that this city is once again a power in the O.B.B.L. as the Mills-led clan took both ends of a double header from the highly touted Oshawa Dukes. The Nationals came from behind to win both games, winning the morning tilt by the score of 12 to 4 and duplicating the feat by whalloping the second game in the afternoon by the same score. The morning game was a regular schedule O.B.B.L. game while the afternoon tilt was only an exhibition game. About 1,- 000 fans crowded the park to witness each game.

The feature of the morning game was the return to the mound of Jack "Chief" Williams, who after an absence of three years from competition in professional ranks, returned to the fold to make a grab through the local fans and assure them of the return of baseball on a higher plane in this city. After a rather shaky start, when Williams yielded three runs in the initial frame, he settled right away to once again prove his worth on a local hilltop and his fine pitching ability, tossing up a shut-out performance in the most professional exhibition in the city by Nationals locally in over three seasons. Williams, in spite of the cold weather, that proved a draw-back to his performance, looked almost as the game progressed and especially during the closing stages when the Dukes pressed in the latter innings. Pitcher Whitely caught Duke batters and issued but one lethal pass to first base but improved as the game progressed much to the satisfaction of nearly one thousand fans to witness the opening game. The feature of both games was the marked improvement shown by the local hitters with the bases populated, a trait that has been somewhat lacking in the hitting of the Nationals during the past few years. The new additions to the club have come through and assurance of rejuvenated interest.

Used Many Players

In the afternoon exhibition tilt, Manager Mills used all of his available material, giving each and every player an opportunity to display his wares. Leaving out the older and proven players of the club, the work of Vaughn Jack, ex-Oshawa and professional player, was remarkable. Jack's hitting was timely and when injected into the infield, he endeavoured and rarely fire-talk added inspiration to the players. Dean Ford, a junior coming up from the ranks, more that made his mark with the club in the morning game as did Johnnie Kerr at the hot corner. Manager Mills seems to have little worries this year in the outer garden with Harriett, Weir, Utzrodt and Jack to patrol the pastures, while Roy Smith and Sonny Green are tried and proven infielders. Judging from the initial showing of the Nationals yesterday senior baseball is assured of a banner season.

After proving to the fans in the afternoon that he is still the Jack Williams of old, The "Chief" came back and hurled the final inning with the afternoon, much to the satisfaction of all present. Ernie Smith, local slongaed right hander finished the final half of the afternoon till and gave a satisfactory demonstration, while the return to form of Carl Casey, who followed in line for three innings, was a revelation. Casey seems to have once again caught his stride and experienced little difficulty in blanking the Dukes for the three innings he toiled on the mound. Casey should prove a buyer of strength in the local batting staff, his control being the steadily perfect this year.

The Dukes seemed lacking control of the ball, their hurling staff to one scores pitchers in both games, Louis Holmes, ex-Belleville leaguer, lasted but a short three innings in the morning tilt to be relieved by Ferrier, who fared little better as he was touched for most product, finishing the game. In the afternoon Maldberg started and was relieved by Knier, who was in order followed by Copper and Smith, so much so were Dukes hurlers. Ty Tyson, an old O.B.B.L. catcher was seen, for first base yesterday. The box scores that photography tell the tale of the hitting ability of the 1934 edition of the Belleville Nationals, who are now league leaders.

Previous to the morning game the Belleville Municipal Band played a selection and while the flag raising ceremonies were in progress the Nationals sang the National Anthem. The usual opening day ceremonies were in order with Mayor Mills throwing out the ball to the Belleville Nationals, Newt. Thompson, secretary of the club, and Joe McVeigh taking the major roles. The Nationals appeared on the field with their uniforms, of a black and white hue, and wind-breakers to match.

CURRENT SPORT

(Day By Day)

After being the underdogs in the O.B.B.L. for the past couple of years the Belleville Nationals, today are once again league leaders, and unless statistics fail they will be well up in the running when the curtain on the final count is taken next fall. The Nationals have taken it on the chin and have come back to develop a winning team, for some seasons past, but it looks as though Lady Luck has smiled on them once again. The season for our optimistic feeling is the fact that the Mills-led clan is at last assured of good pitching and hard-hitting simultaneously, a combination hard to beat.

Yesterday's double win over the Oshawa Dukes demonstrated the most enterprising effort towards the assurance of interest in baseball in this city, that has happened in a decade. Yesterday return of "Chief" Williams to a local mound was the paramount climax and Johnnie did not disappoint those who came out to witness his first exhibition. After witnessing Williams' return to the local hilltop, in front of his old batterymate, Percy Mills, we do not expect wonders from Williams, but predict that when the season of 1934 comes to an once again be the master of baseball artistries he was a decade ago. He has not lost his cunningness. Williams, like all seasoned veterans, needs the warm weather to demonstrate his real ability. Watch him about July 1st, we'd suggest.

As expected the veteran members of the local club came through in a fitting style, but we are more interested in the new comers. Dean Ford, the junior infielder now playing short step for the locals, surely made his mark in senior circles; Ford is no flash in the pan, but he is the goods and will following such efforts on his part, develop into an infielder par excellence. The kid looked a peach in the afternoon tilt, but he played heads-up ball in the all-important morning game and we predict a brilliant future for him if he'll "keep in there". Another local infielder, Jack Green, showed a marked improvement over last year was likewise there. This lad has shown as much ground as any infielder in the loop and should rate above the average, but, like all up and coming youngsters, he wrestle with the temptation to be more than locally as good as the best of ball players, even in the big leagues.

Yesterday was a big show in local baseball circles. The Belleville Municipal Band rendered a program and played the National Anthem as the flag was raised, along with the past pennants won locally in the O.B.B.L. President Charlie Meagher, Newt Thompson and ex-Mayor Morley Duff looked after the opening ceremonies, and take it from us President Charlie was mighty proud of his boys after that morning win. Charlie Meagher has laboured long and often towards the success of baseball in this city and he deserves the best he may take as a task for mentioning his name we wish to congratulate him and his able executive on the 1934 edition of the Belleville Nationals. Why shouldn't we be proud, for at least a day or two? There's league leaders.

One might go on for some time relating as to the achievements of the Nats, especially their hitting to the pinches, and they still can conclude a bit of practice in that category, but the hitting of Vaughn Jack in the p.m. game assured the locksats of no see in the hole. "Strapping" as he was known in Belora, is still the cagey hitter he was five years ago, making the pitcher throw 'em where HE wants 'em. There was a 2 Mitchell, Great Britain, 6 and 4.

rejuvenated interested shown in the local infield when he was moved into short step, with his continued line drive hitting. Incidentally the local outfield seems to be taken care of this season than in some time past.

While referring to hurlers, pitchers, chuckers and what have you, we mentioned only Williams, Ernie Smith, Weir Ford Smith Green and Jack. Carl Casey, was up to his old tricks of toeing 'em on the inside corner once again. Casey showed the results of an excellent pre-season training and had uncanny control. Willie Whitely, ex-Oshawa and Uttrohl for pitching duties, the Nationals have little to worry about on the mound and the next step in Kingston on the 24th.

Some little softball was played over the holiday. The first surprise was the defeat handed out 22 to 11 victory of the Bearcats over the Grills' Garage in the first play-off game in the Wall street loop. These two teams hook-up again tonight in the Bearcats' lair in the Bay City. And then in the church league St. Thomas' defeated Trinity 15 to 5 and Christ Church, while Holloway Street United was beaten by Bridge end of the season from St. Michael's by the score of 10 to 8 in the Catholic league.

Down on the water front a brace of punt races were staged yesterday, weather is decreasing to get a holiday Victoria Park for those interested in the aquatic event while the Belleville Yacht Club staged their races off the Government dock.

To cap off a real day's sport entertainment the Kiwanis Club put on their all-star wrestling bout last night at the Armouries. The feature of the show was not the main bout, but the fight between Referee Jack Thomas and Walter Stratton, the Chinese bad man. All three bouts were thrilling but the main go between Messrs. Hazen and Stratton was a pip. Stratton is a self-styled bad man from the East and he has much to the dissatisfaction of the Belleville fans present. Referee Jack Thomas repeatedly had to warn Stratton. This bad boy tactics finally tossed him for a real "row". Stratton, who is a big husky guy, and the local "white haired boy" but, if he wants to wrestle, Jack Thomas, who doesn't he must let him locally, as many fans as want. This boy Stratton is no mean wrestler, and in the main Stratton bout should cram 'em in any man's arena.

Stratton, Bad Man of Ring Tossed for Loss by Referee at Kiwanis Wrestling Show Loses Bout, When He Offends Against Warning of Third Man

PANTHER WINS

Show Provides Smart Card For Holiday Seekers

A referee non part of the deciding fall in a wrestling match to the vast delight of five hundred or more fans who attended last evening's crowd pleasing match staged by the Kiwanis Club in the local Armouries.

Jack Thomas, Windsor, well known in the grip and toss game himself as one of the best of the many stirrups, and popularly called the Connaught Flash" for his prowess in the game, pressed into service as referee for the hectic series of encounters staged here last night, put the well known finger upon the deep-dyed villain of the ring, Walter Stratton, of Chicago, in his burning, arm twisting, site encompasser with the ten cheap Indian Raglan in the final bout of the fracas and threw him for a loss.

Thomas handed out that fact that he repeatedly warning Stratton—with little result—for his underhand tactics, finally managed to make a point on his opponent, and the crowd when he indulged in a semi-flying tackle to the midriff of the offender, the scowling Stratton, leaving him open for a massed attack by his opponent Hagen, whose only trouble was to find a body spot to drop on the recumbent form of Mr. Stratton, to decide the fall. Both boys were weary and tired of the extra effort required to hold down the villain, Hagen, however, had the best of the bout, and his average dependable build the hair tearing and sly underhand methods and jobs in which he indulged. Hagen, from Louisiana, displayed the same, slow and methodical tactics, proverbially allotted to the Southerners, but showed a fine knowledge of the game and a hard working inferior of 8 minutes.

It was a fast fast that fast affair—with the help of the referee—in 13 minutes, action of the referee and the discomfiture of Stratton after the bout.

Good Show

Take it all and around, it was a good show, as shows go, and Mr. and Mrs. John Belleville and those from the surrounding district who stormed the wicket to the gate were amply repaid. One and one-half hours of solid excitement concluded the bill.

In the semi-final bout the Black Panther, a dusky gentleman from the Harlem of New York, whose reputation in the city is boisterous and cordial, had the well known Indian sign on his hard working opponent, Jackie Nichols, of South Bend, Indiana, although it was no real matter to dispose of him. Both boys fought a clean, clastic game throughout. It was cagey and fast, with a good deal of bridging and throwing in for good measure. It was close most throughout, and fans gleaned some new idea of harmony holds the average grappler carries around with him. Scissors, head and strangle holds and arm locks predominated in the main. Another was the first fall in 16 minutes with a black mark on the score. In the second round Nichols came back to the front with a flying tackle and his perspiring foeman in 13 minutes flat. His "pile driver," a specialized hold, which consists in attempting to dish out the opponent's brains on the hard floor after bouncing him from a height via, is accurs held. The referee gave the verdict and won the plaudits of the assembly by taking this man in just one minute flat in the third and deciding battle.

Kicked Through Ropes

The first bout was lackadaisical and vague. Harry La Belle of Jersey, and Joe Turpinski of Hungary, at catch weights around no enthusiasm. It was swerred by one fan to be a bit pedicious. Although both grapplers worked hard, neither had much advantage over the other. La Belle was kicked through the ropes once which aroused a bit of comment among those who occupied the front rows, but he speedily avenged the defeat and regained his prestige by returning to grapple over Tripanski. La Belle, in turn, got so thoroughly unsettled and peeved on a dizzying airplane spin to floor his man in 14 minutes.

Owing to the unavoidable absence of Tommy McClure, referee, the gap was filled by Jack Thomas, as previously enlarged and by Mr. Ed. Shaugh, president of the local Kiwanis Club, who announced the results and thanked those who had turned out in such numbers to support the worthy efforts of the club.

A note of appreciation was also voiced by Jack Thomas, referee of the evening who promised more and better action to local fans in future, if dependable support could be assured.

The same bill presented last evening that practically the same as that offered to Windsorites this evening on their regular schedule of mat attractions in the Border cities.

It is the hope of Mr. Thomas to have big time artists perform here in the near future.

First Bout—La Belle, Trenton, N. J., won from Tripinski, Hungary, 15.32.

Second Bout—The Black Panther, Harem, won the third and deciding fall from Jack Nichols, Kiwanis Club, who announced the victory and thanked those who had turned out in such numbers to support the worthy efforts of the club.

A note of appreciation was also voiced by Jack Thomas, referee of St. Andrew's Church Calls Rev. W. J. Walker of Niagara Falls, Ontario

Brilliant Young Minister Chosen on First Ballot

HAS NOTED CAREER

Acceptance of Call By Mr. Walker Is Expected

Rev. W. J. Walker, B.A., B.D., of Niagara Falls Presbyterian Church was tendered the unanimous call to the pulpit and charge of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Belleville, at a meeting of the congregation of the latter held in the Sunday School room on Wednesday evening. Mr. Walker was chosen on the first ballot from among nine ministers who had been heard here in the past two months or more. In the announcement of the vote made by the Rev. E. M. Cram of Picton, interim moderator of the local charge and Moderator of the Presbytery of Kingston, the vote of those present the call was made unanimous for Mr. Walker preached in St. Andrews some weeks ago.

In calling the Rev. W. J. Walker of Niagara Falls, Ontario, St. Andrew's has offered the charge to one of the most brilliant young ministers of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. It is expected he will accept the call and will be inducted through the regular channels.

Rev. Mr. Walker graduated from Queen's University, Kingston, as bachelor of arts about 1917 and in 1919 and from Queen's Theological College in Kingston in the year 1920. In his final year he was senior scholar, both with the highest standing and his course was marked by brilliance of performance throughout.

For a time he officiated at St. Mary's, Ontario, and then went to Niagara Falls about five or six years ago. He has been stationed there since that time. It is interesting to note that his home town is Niagara Falls, Ont.

In Two Churches

In his work at St. Mary's and at Niagara Falls he has met with marked success and his congregations showed substantial progress during his years of ministry.

He is married and his family consists of five children.

After the decision of the meeting to give him the call a number of members spoke in the highest terms of his qualifications as pastoral and ministerial capacity. Hereof Mr. Walker, the moderator read the charge, referred in the highest terms to Mr. Walker and the Rev. Harold Reid, M.A., was able as a schoolmate of Mr. Walker to tell of his career in college at first hand. Mr. Archie Cameron told of a letter he had received in which the highest praise was given the Niagara Falls minister.

The Rev. Mr. Walker will have a meeting of the Presbytery of Kingston summoned at the earliest possible date when the call will be signed by those who were present so as to expedite the proceedings. Messrs. W. J. Campbell, Arthur McCoy, C. A. Carscallen, E. V. Illsley were appointed a committee to present the call. After it is dealt with by the local presbytery it will be sent to the Presbytery of Hamilton at which Mr. Walker will declare whether or not he will accept the call. His acceptance and release of his charge are expected. It is just possible that Mr. Walker will be able to occupy St. Andrew's as minister about the end of June.

Rev. W. H. Reid in Charge

Rev. Harold Reid still continues in charge of the pastoral work and will also take care of the services until the call is dealt with and the arrival of the new minister in the event of the call being accepted and sustained.

The moderator, Rev. Mr. Scott of Picton, presided at the congregational meeting.

The congregation of St. Andrew's has been without a minister since the middle of February when the lamentable death of Rev. Dr. J. A. Seymour occurred.

Charges Minister Used Gov't. Plane in The Campaign

By JACK N AMBLETON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Kingston, Ont., May 25—(CP)—Swinging north on the next leg of his provincial election campaign, Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader, headed today for the riding of Cochrane-Sudbury, where he will address a number of meetings prior to leaving for Cochrane Saturday night.

The Liberal leader has temporarily ended his Eastern Ontario tour and is expected to issue the party's election manifesto tonight or tomorrow. He will spend some hours in Toronto today to discuss with prominent party supporters certain features of the document before leaving for Barrie.

In addresses on Amherst Island and at Kingston yesterday Mr. Hepburn attacked the administration of the Department of Lands and Forests, under Hon. William Finlayson. The latter, he charged, had used a forestry service aeroplane in making trips to political conventions and had taken pilots and officials of the service away from their duties to do so.

In addition to the plane, Mr. Finlayson had a large government limousine and also a boat, on a northern lake, said Mr. Hepburn, all of which were bought and operated with the taxpayer's money. If his party were returned to power, he declared, not only would new planes and boats be turned over for the use of the department "but we should be," but his cabinet ministers would use their own automobiles.

E. PHILPOTT MAKES CHARGE

Says Both Parties Received Money From Liquor Interests

Toronto, May 25 (CP)— Another liquor charge took its place in the Ontario General Election Campaign today as government heads prepared for an intensive tour of the Province. Conservative Campaign director, June 13. "The new charge came from Captain Elmore Philpott, Conservative Commonwealth Federation supporter.

Before a C.C.F. meeting in Milton last night Captain Philpott declared both Liberal and Conservative parties had obtained several hundred thousand dollars to finance elections for campaign funds. His statement came, while he was discussing the "oil gate" charges of Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal Leader, against the Liquor Control Board.

Liberals and Conservatives, Captain Philpott claimed, had received sums of money aggregating several hundred thousand dollars from the liquor interests." Captain Philpott also alleged he had been approached by prominent Liberals urging him to persuade withdrawal of C.C.F. candidates in the election.

Two more C.C.F. candidates entered the election, they were Robert F. Heatherington of Mount Dennis who will run in Halton and Rev. Stanley Elliott who resigned his Woodbine United Church pulpit to enter as candidate in the Toronto riding of Beaches. There are now 20 C.C.F. standard bearers selected.

Premier George S. Henry today journeys to Hamilton to address a Conservative rally for the opening of his official campaign here. Mitchell F. Hepburn, Liberal Leader, will speak at Simcoe, the start of a speaking trip throughout the Dufferin-Simcoe riding.

The Liberal party's election manifesto is expected to appear tonight or tomorrow. Mr. Hepburn was in Toronto today conferring with party leaders regarding the document, arriving from the Kingston district, where he delivered two addresses yesterday.

Next week Wentworth Liberals meet tonight to select a candidate with Mayor Bethune, Thos. McCombe and A. M. Shaver reported as ready to stand for the nomination.

Holiday Quietly Spent No Accidents to Mar Same

Residents Enjoy Numerous Sport Attractions Arranged

It was a quiet May 24th. Holiday seekers found their pleasure in the open spaces of the nearby country where shady pools invited the last minute bathing parties, and the family picnickers, who congregated in the favored spots, leaving streets and avenues of the residential sections deserted. Only the local recreation centres had their quota of visitors, where ball games, boat sailing races and other sports attracted the stay-at-homes.

Young Belleville emerged thru' the day unscathed. Fewer eye brows were singed by delayed action aerials and fireworks. There were fewer fingers scorched with powder burns. Careful census of medical men in the city disclosed the fact that only two or three patients had been treated for minor injuries attributed to the day. One was victim of a small girl whose eye burned by some fireworks. A small boy had swallowed some pebbles in his pocket.

Firemen kept on the alert at both stations, but their only call thruout the day was that for a grass fire on the west side of the city. They chalked up a new low record for the day which is generally good for six or more calls on a holiday.

At the Belleville General Hospital all was reported served and quiet, with just the usual cases.

Firecrackers in Abundance

Doctors who decided to forego the usual holiday golf and stick to the office might have called the day a disappointing one, but didn't.

Along Front street, during the fore part of the day the only activity observed was the unhurried stroll of occasional pedestrians, who were up and early to enjoy the advantages of the day. There was the sporadic crackle and spatter of fire crackers tossed into the street from some nearby doorway, and at night the intensity of the outbursts grew more frequent, but little more than noise was reported.

Police called the day a quiet one, with few calls of any kind received. Although police on their beat were on the lookout to curb any unseemly boisterousness or activity, they were not called upon to exercise their authority in the matter.

Shop keepers reported the sale of fireworks slow, but toward the late afternoon a sudden spurt on the part of shoppers boosted the total number of sales to a good average. By nightfall most of the surplus stock had been disposed of and to avoid the necessity of storing his stock, one well known store owner put on a display, selling all that were left himself.

Hundreds View Races

On Victoria Park and at the government dock hundreds of citizens gathered to view the sailing punt races held in the Bay of Quinte. Favored by a stiff breeze the punts hosted over before it to add a thrill of excitement to both crews and spectators. The races were close and enjoyable. The steady pure of power boats lent noise and action to the scene.

Other hundreds trooped into Agricultural Park where a baseball game was played during afternoon. With the grandstand crowded, it was only with difficulty that the ball diamond itself was kept clear.

An army took possession of Foxboro during the day. But the army was a peaceful one, bent only upon the enjoyment of the day. During the morning varied attractions and events had been arranged by the committee in charge. A parade of prize winning floats was one of the chief features of the day, and in the afternoon was devoted to the numerous ball games, and other social activities. Hundreds thronged the banner-decorated village from throughout the surrounding district. Not until late at evening was the day closed by a dance and all together for young and old.

At Chisholm's Rapids, at Frankford locks, and as far as Hastings, and other remote points, Belleville anglers were found in large numbers. But even if the fish weren't biting, and the catch of pickerel were small, the day was not wasted well spent. The "Scuttle Hole" had its quota of pelmicken, Massasaga was another favorite location, while more campers for the day found themselves hideaways in the woods elsewhere. Over all a bright sun beamed.

And as the stream of cars, with their radiator caps pointed city-wards, wended slowly back to town from all points of the compass as dusk began to settle over the district, the first few rockets cut their way through the gloom with their trail of sparks behind them to flood the sky with their brilliant balls of color. A motor boat puttered up the bay to find its dark obscured boat house in the harbor, and discharge its cargo of passengers. In uptown dance halls orchestras tuned their respective instruments. Fire crackers popped at long intervals. It was the end of a day without incident.

SIR. A. CURRIE REMEMBERED

Memorial Cross Erected And Dedicated at Point Claire, Que.

Pointe Claire, Que., May 25 (CP) —A permanent memorial to the leader of Canada's overseas forces in the years of the great war became of the high esteem in which the Canadian people hold the memory of General Sir Arthur Currie.

A memorial cross in memory of the great leader, later principal of McGill University, who died last November after a valiant fight against illness that held him in its grasp for weeks, was unveiled here yesterday—on the exact spot in the field from where he drove for the last year to deliver an address during the recruiting campaigns of the monies.

The grey stone cross was unveiled by Lieut.-General Sir Archibald Cameron Macdonell, former commandant of the Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont. who succeeded Sir Arthur as Commander of the First Canadian Division. Leading military officers and army chaplains formed their respective instruments. Fire crackers popped at long intervals. It was the end of a day without incident.

ROOFING NAILS CAUSE MOTORISTS TROUBLE

Cars Held Up For Punctures on Frankford-City Highway

Irate motorists, one of whom was a Belleville car owner, would have given a handsome tip to learn the identity of the man who scattered the roofing nails over the Frankford-Trenton Road, on Tuesday. Gaily proceeding, laden with holiday baggage to points north, a number of cars were halted on their trip by flat tires, attributed to the nail-bed roofing tacks which were picked up by rubber. It is believed that the nails were spread over a long stretch of road. Six cars were noted strung out for a distance of over one mile, with owners busy changing tires, during the forenoon at one time, while during the afternoon, perspiring holidayers were still at work at less frequent intervals. One theory is that some trucker jolted the nails loose from their package, scattering them as it bumped along.

ENGLISH GIRL PRODUCES FILM

"Young Ambassador" Wins Fame With Picture 'London Town'

London, England, May 25—One of the "Young Ambassadors," that cherry party of young people who went to Canada in 1928 from Great Britain and Northern Ireland as the winners in an Empire Scholarship Examination sponsored by the Canadian National Railways, the Canard Steamship Company and Allied Newspapers has distinguished herself as the producer of a film entitled "London Town". The young director is Miss Marion Grierson, who, at the end of the Young Ambassadors' Canadian tour joined the editorial staff of the Regina Daily Star. The film was produced under the auspices of the Travel and Industrial Association of Great Britain and Ireland. "London Town," which may be shown in Canada and the United States, portrays the great metropolis in her many aspects, her many streets contrasted with her noble ones, her peasantry with the activities of such humble institutions as Berwick Market where the bargain hunter may buy almost anything from cats' meat to luxurious furs. Experts have praised the film highly for its material and its technique. Miss Grierson is now meditating a film on Edinburgh.

Two Brilliant New Verbenas

Dannebrog. Another Sparkler for the Verbena Family.

Two verbenas of unusual brilliance were the subject of much comment during the All-American trials and the final selection for awards. They are Dannebrog and Spectrum Red.

The former comes to us from Denmark, and was given an award of merit. Its intense scarlet coloring makes it a characteristic member of the striking verbena family and its contrasting large white eyes, coupled with a compactness of growth which opens up new uses in the garden make it one of the most valuable new flowers of the coming season. It runs true to type and is an excellent bedding plant.

Spectrum red, as the name suggests, is a dazzling scarlet, living up to the verbena reputation for showiness and sparkling color. It is a free flowering bloom, with a spreading growth, that holds its place in the summer picture from warm weather to killing frost.

Although hardy in the lower South, both of the new verbenas could be treated as half hardy plants in most parts of the United States. Sow seed early in the spring in flats or the hot bed, giving them a moderate amount of moisture.

Germination takes place in from three to four weeks and they may be transplanted to the garden only after all danger from late spring frosts is past.

Where showy flowers are not demanded; seeds may be sown in the open when the ground warms up and flowers may be had by late July or early August. To obtain the best flowers do not crowd the plants. At least 1 foot each way should be allowed between plants; a strong plant will often spread over 3 feet. The habit of growth is trailing, the flower stems rising only a foot or so. It is an excellent ground cover under gladioli. Lilies and other tall plants are in the margins of shrubbery plantations. It also makes an excellent window box subject.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER PRESENTED

A pleasing event took place in the Orange Hall, Point Anne on Monday night when the neighbours and friends of the Point Anne Road community gathered to spend a social evening with Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Everetts (nee Ruby Bradshaw), who were quietly married on September 7th, 1933.

The evening was spent in playing cards and dancing. Just before lunch the bride and groom were asked to take seats at the front of the hall and an address was read by Miss Leota Bell, and Messrs. E. Brown, Percy Bradshaw, Reid, O. Greentz and Joe McWilliams came forward with large clothes baskets daintily decorated for the occasion and well laden with gifts and presented them. In a most gracious manner Ruby and Merrill expressed their appreciation for the lovely gifts and invited all to visit them. Dancing was continued till the very small hours of morn, when all departed for home wishing Ruby and Merrill "Bon Voyage." The address:

Dear Ruby and Merrill:

Your friends and neighbors having learned of your marriage have assembled tonight to spend a pleasant evening with you and to offer our best wishes for your future happiness.

This is a very important step in your life and our sincere hope is that God's blessings will rest upon you in your new home.

We ask you to accept these gifts as a slight remembrance of our love and esteem, and we hope that as time passes and ties are broken it may serve to keep fresh and green the friendship of your friends and neighbors of this community.

Trusting that you both may be spared to be blessed by the comforts of life.

Signed by friends of Front Road Community. Earl Brown, Leota Bell and Roy Snider.

EMPIRE DAY CELEBRATED

Throughout Empire Memories of Queen Victoria Are Revived

By the Canadian Press

Holidaying Canadians were back at their work today after a day of church services, parades and sports events that marked the birthday of Queen Victoria. May 24, was celebrated in other parts of the British Empire as Empire Day with every section of the Commonwealth joining in honoring the memory of the late Queen.

In Montreal services were held in honor of those who fell in wars to defend the Empire while in Toronto the Governor General officially opened Fort York where Canadians and United States troops and officials of the two governments will join July 4 in unveiling a memorial to General Zebulon Pike who fell as American troops stormed Fort York in the War of 1812.

Throughout Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia picnickers journeyed to the outdoors, the west enjoying sunny weather while Ontario felt chill winds in many sections. Regattas, drills and parades received the Empire's greatness as flags flew from buildings and homes.

Golfers in the Maritimes stepped along the fairways as official openings of clubs in Halifax, Charlottetown, and Saint John were held.

Sir Dorsey Wood, British Postmaster-General, followed the Prime Minister, South Africa's allegiance to the Empire was declared in Cape Town, when General Jan Christian Smuts declared the secession idea was "as dead as a dodo."

FUTURE PREMIER

Prince Fuminaro Konoye, president of the Japanese house of peers, and believed destined to become premier in the event of a change in the cabinet, has sailed from Tokio for the United States on a visit that is ostensibly unofficial. Considerable importance, however, is attached to the visit in both Japan and the United States, because of indications that the prince may broach the subject to American statesmen of dividing the Pacific Ocean into two zones, with the American navy patrolling the eastern portion, and the Japanese navy the western section.

Miss Murray, who asks a sum of $300,000 in the suit, testified that in 1924 she signed a release for $12,000 in the belief that was all the producer due her, but later learned the profits had exceeded $1,000,000.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma is still teaching me Money Management by the budget system out of Professor Jeanbrs book, not getting $ cents a day budget and being forced to save some and spend some and give some, the hardest part being the saving, and this morning ma said, Now here's your 5 cents for your lunch today, but I declare if the saving collum doesn't start to show something more than a blank space I declare if dont know what I'll do.

But G wunickers, ma, gosh how can I save enuch out of 5 cents with everything? I said, and ma said, I dont ask you to save much, jest if you only saved a cent a week just so you saved it, you would be observing the principle of saving, and that's what I been trying patiently to instil into you, the principle of saving, and then in later years when the real test comes you wont fail by the wayside with empty pockets because the principle of saving will be a habit with you, so for land sakes when are you going to start? she said.

Rite away, ma, O ma, I got a idee how to save, I said, and she said, Well that's splendid, that sounds like making a little order out of hash. What's the idee? she said.

Well I tell you, I said. Every day I put one cent for my budget till I have 5, and then I'll buy a 5 cent package of cheekits cigarettes and start again till I have 5 more cents for another package and so on like that, I said, and ma said, I dont see any saving visible to the naked eye so far.

Well well till I tell you, ma, I said. Every package has a cigarette with a free picture of a movie star in it, and that's the part I'm going to save, and it's a picture of the movie stars and you often get the same one twice, so you can imagine how long it'll have to save before I have the whole set, and by that time I certainly awt to understand the principle of saving, what I mean? I said, and she said O hush, such a boy.

Meening me.

The ROMANTIC RUNAWAY

By KATHARINE HAVILAND-TAYLOR

CHAPTER XLII

Field chose his words slowly. "I know that he's wealthy," he said. "I suppose that's what's made it so hard for Marcia. She's never had much money, and I guess the boy pretty badly. I'm not sure that she's not in love with him, you know. I wouldn't turn him over to the police now—not if I could.

"If you'll forgive me for saying it, Marcia. Ted Jeffries wasn't much good, and Marcia was in there and, as I said, I hurt the boy. At least I heard so—and I'm glad of it."

But Marcia interrupted tensely. "I can free him! I can get him out of there, too. That's what I wanted to tell you, Jim. I went to Theresa Jeffries' rooms this morning to get the masquerade party. I followed Ted there. I had seen Theresa on the water with that naval man we called 'Stoo'. I thought it was safe and Ted had been avoiding me all evening. I wanted to see him and have a reckoning with him. He had hurt me terribly. I went to his room and Ted had been avoiding me all evening. I wanted to see him and have a reckoning with him. He had hurt me terribly. I went to his room and he used everything to bar me. I was trying to persuade him to come with me to the police when Stoo came. There was a short, stocky black-haired man leading Stoo. Ted, it was not Pabillo! He didn't do it. Jim! He didn't murder her! I'm not asking you to tell about it now—about being there. It's been terrible knowing—Pabillo," and Field slowly, "is in Cuba. He goes by the name of Juanito now. He's the horse."

A moment later Marcia was beside Field again. "I'm going with you!" Marcia sang out. Her cheeks were blazing and her eyes bright. "I'm going with you!"

Leaning unsteadily she went up the long plank with them. "I shall buy a bookrack and lie down," draped in a sheet, but I'm not going with you!"

She found that there was a state room available, good one. A gentleman from St. Louis had failed to claim his reservation.

"Marcia," Estelle asked, "what does all this mean?"

She stood in the doorway of Marcia's room. The boat was already moving.

"Sit down, darling, and I'll tell you. Do you remember the boy who used to work at your father's?" asked. She called Pabillo? Well, said he killed Ted Jeffries. Well he didn't do it!"

Estelle accepted Marcia's invitation to sit down and did so rather suddenly.

"Good heavens, child, you're pale!" Marcia placed herself. "Shall I get you a drink?"

"Oh, Cis can!" she urged. "Tell me about Pabillo."

Norris Noyes sat in a New York law office. He was freshly arrayed, his beard trimmed to a point and his gray hair glistening. Across the desk from him sat his attorney, tilted back in his chair, fingertips touching as he looked at Noyes.

"And now," said the attorney, "since the conditions have altered, we say?—of gossip has cleared away you will be able to take up once more the life to which you were born. You can have all the comforts that you so richly merit by your aspect and station, take up your old interests again."

"I want to find the boy I've told you about," Noyes answered flatly. "That's the only thing I'm interested in."

"You have unlimited funds to aid you in your search for him, Mr. Noyes."

Noyes arose, nodding. He said, "You won't forget that remittance I asked in have sent to the old woman who has my shack in Key West?"

"That will be attended to."

"Thank you. I suppose that is all."

"Drop in when you can, Mr. Noyes. We'll be delighted to see you. Shall I—got your name for the Lotos Club?"

"No. Thank you quite as much."

Noyes walked away, realizing that he did not want either praise or sympathy. The thing that he had suffered for had been his own doing. He had married a very young girl whose beauty had later lost its appeal. Then he found his own life more sustenance than there is in the prosperous business acted as a friend Josie Martell who was not beautiful but who was very much with wit and understanding and who saw something of interest in very dull surface. She had fed his mind and given him the companionship he craved.

Evening after evening he had spent with her in her modest home she learned that he was married. Then she had him come once a month or even less frequently to talk with her as he always could of nothing and yet of everything.

As Noyes turned down Madison avenue he felt the first whiff of spring, heralded from the florist shops by the pale scent of violets. And as Noyes continued on his way toward the club the late afternoon air grew sharp. Cuban day, walked a dirt road in Key West with Josie Martell and wouldn't hurt me and it would seem everything to her.

He was trying to persuade himself that Josie was merely Josie. Lottie who had loved him always and who had been the only one to guess by the thought of his tightening arms.

"I might help me," he thought next, being a little human. The attachment that thought doubted him. He would find Lottie and ask her pardon. Just as soon as he could get back to the apartment. He turned, hesitating, urged by the fear that he would not fulfill his intention. Then he shrugged the toy of the stairs he found her reading, slowly and determinedly. He did not succeed that the room Lottie had left was because she had seen him so often with the book.

"Want to come walking with me?" he invited in a voice that was louder than he had intended it should be.

She rose instantly, eagerly. "Sure. Wha'a matter, you old Pabillo?"

"Something nice," he answered and the pound of his heart so confused that she did not notice the hollow of his cheeks.

In the open they walked toward the country lies spread warm and green and beautiful before them.

"I like walking with you," Lottie confided. "Our steps fit, even if you are so tall are take long steps. Two of mine are the same as one of yours—me!"

He chose to regard this as a good omen but did not make it the opening for which he had hoped. Even though he knew she would have welcomed a speech, Pabillo reminded himself that he must think of Lottie's ways now and not his. For a moment his heart grew cold. Then, after a deep breath which stiffened his resolve, he spoke.

"Lottie," he said slowly, "I've been wondering whether you would do me a great honor."

"Sure, I would. I'd do anything for you. You know that. Pabillo. Whatcha want me to do?"

"I wondered would like—you to marry me," he said.

She stopped and so did he. "Oh, my God!" she whispered. Then she was crying, clinging to his arms, clinging to him. For a moment he could not bring himself to kiss her. Then he did, gently, and she clung to him more fiercely, sobbing harder, moving her short, thick hands over his arms and shoulders, whimpering the shaken and passionate tale of her love for him.

CHAPTER XLIV.

At last, thought Marcia, she was on her way to tell the story that, kept secret, had been such a terrific burden. For a moment she closed her eyes. Opening them, she saw above a flower-laden window sill one of the few lights that burns always below a flame in so many Cuban homes. The shrine, together with the lights and the landscape, impressed her and brought a softening of mood. Marcia, on her way to confession, thought of Cuba as she never had before—a land that kneels to the forgiving, gentle Virgin; that feels the sunlight and sings often. A warm land. A happy land.

The taxicab lurched, avoiding a goat and her kid. A moment later it almost touched a group of barefoot babies, playing in the dust.

Soon they left behind the crowded houses and narrow, twisting streets touched here by ebon shadows and there by the sun. They were following a road of red soil that wound past the thinning dwellings to reach the country beyond—a country of palms and thatched huts.

"It is here that he lives," the taxicab driver told Marcia, as he halted the cab before a grocery store. "Upstairs."

She got out and looked about. The grocer's force came hurrying out to see the excitement. Being thus inspected Marcia rang the front bell.

Lottie peered down the stairs through the grilled gate at the new-comer. "Who you want?" she inquired sullenly.

"I want to see Senor Juanito."

"What for?"

"That, my child, is hardly your affair," Marcia answered, smiling. "Is he in?" Subduing this amazing creature would have been simple enough for Marcia if they had been on the same level. Looking up made it more difficult.

Lottie appraised the visitor as haughtily as had the grocer and his clerks. "He ain't here," she said too loudly, for Pablo heard her answer and appeared behind her.

"No?" Marcia answered, smiling. She drew back the grilled gate which Lottie had clicked open from above at the touch of the bell. Marcia stepped from the glare of the sunlight and began to mount the stairs.

Pabillo recognized her and lost color. Lottie's lips set in the sneer she always summoned as a cover for fright. She did not like this. She had a definite feeling that something was wrong.

Marcia, now on the level with Lottie and Pabillo, spoke quickly. "You may not remember me, Pablo—they also began, "but—"

"I remember you very well, Miss Treadway," he answered honestly. "Will you sit down?"

"Thank you. I want to speak to you alone, please."

"I think you'll find it more comfortable by the doorway," Pabillo answered, and always had that courteous manner. Marcia remembered. She saw down, She also saw glance appealingly at the girl who stood, sullen and obstinate, her arms narrowed and her head a little dropped.

"Lottie, if you don't mind—" he began gently.

"I don't. Ain't dirt!" Lottie answered, in a shrill voice. "She can't come here and tell you—her fool me!"

He shook his head and suddenly the girl was scarlet and silent.

"If you don't mind, Lottie," he said quietly and more gently.

"Oh, all right!" she said, moving forward a doorway with opalescent glass panes. A moment later the door was closed and as she slammed the door loudly.

Pablito faced Marcia Treadway. then. He settled in a chair that was sufficiently close to hers for a low-voiced talk, and waited. As he waited he saw that something was making it difficult for her to speak.

"If you don't mind I'll smoke," she murmured. "Odd, isn't it, how much it clears the mind as it clogs one's lungs?"

"Will you have one of these?" Pabillo asked. He spoke and brought a small humidor which he held open before her.

AS SLIM AS WHEN SHE MARRIED

Woman Gets Back to Normal Weight

AFTER 16 YEARS

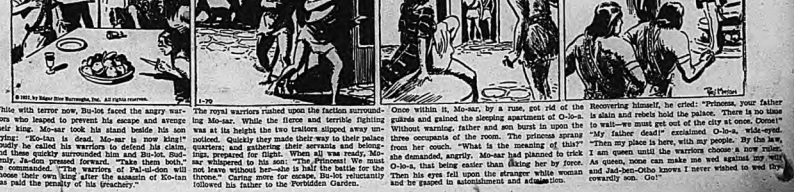
Do you know what was your weight on your wedding day? And do the scales show the same record to-day? Why not get back to your old normal weight and girlish figure—just as this woman did?

"About 16 months ago," she writes, "I started to put on weight below and that in spite of living half-way up a hill and having to walk up and down very frequently. I tried many things, and at last started on Kruschen. I have been taking it consistently since, and now I am down to my old weight—124 lbs., just as I was when I married 16 years ago. I feel very much better in myself, too."

Only two or three days ago I met a lady who had been away on a trip, and she remarked how much younger and slimmer she looked. Another, last Saturday, said I had quite a girlish figure now. I think that good for my age—I am 40."—(Mrs.) A. H.

Kruschen combats the cause of fat by assisting the internal organs to perform their functions properly—to throw off each day those waste products and poisons which, if allowed to accumulate, will be converted by the body's chemistry into fatty tissue.

You can hasten the healing action of Kruschen by cutting out fatty meats and pastries and going light on butter, cream and potatoes.



Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 45c. and 75c. per bottle.

Empire Day Celebration Held by Trenton Pupils

Jess Goodsell of School Board Presides as Chairman

Trenton, May 26 (Special)—Victoria Day May 24th was fittingly celebrated several different ways by Trentonians.

Wednesday afternoon over one thousand school children gathered in Governor Simcoe Park for their annual Empire Day celebration.

Mr. Jess Goodsell of the Trenton School Board acted as chairman in the absence of Mr. Harry Sager the chairman of the Board. Pupils from College Street, Dufferin St., North Trenton and St. Peter's schools, assembled in their teachers marched in the park in one compact body to the Dufferin school in uniform. After the singing of O Canada, and the opening number,

Mr. Goodsell in his brief opening remarks told of the reason Empire Day was celebrated throughout all the British domains.

"Land of Hope and Glory" sung by the entire gathering preceded the presentation of the beautiful Wreddell Cup by Mr. W. McClung to W. V. Carswell, principal of College Street school, who have been the holders of the cup for the past year. The cup is competed for annually by the rival sport teams of College and Dufferin schools. Children sang "Queen Alexandra's Birthday Song."

Mr. Jess Goodsell in his brief address pertained to the part the British Empire has played throughout all the British domains.

"Land of Hope and Glory" sung by the entire gathering preceded the presentation of the beautiful Wreddell Cup by Mr. W. McClung to W. V. Carswell, principal of College Street school, who have been the holders of the cup for the past year. The cup is competed for annually by the rival sport teams of College and Dufferin schools. Children sang "Queen Alexandra's Birthday Song."

Rev. F. Arthur Smith, rector of St. George's Anglican Church spoke on Empire Day. He told of good Queen Victoria who reigned for over sixty years. He stressed how great it was to be a British subject and especially a Canadian, the U. V. C. carnival, cardinal of Ontario counties and added "National character is greater than national wealth."

The most impressive and patriotic part was the raising of the flag as the children stood at the salute and recited "Our Flag". The ceremony closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Later in the day College Street and Dufferin Street schools played a friendly game of softball with the latter winning.

Yesterday the citizens spent the holiday in many different manners. Motor trips and drives satisfied some. Many took in the excursion to Rochester from Cobourg while many of the younger set, enjoyed hikes to the country. Bicycles were seen on all highways and many boats dotted the bay. To those who stay around the house, several naps and a workout in the garden was sufficient. The baseball fans journeyed to Belleville to see the Nationals take two victories from Oshawa. The golf fans saw the finals of a business and lucky business is an uncertain factor holidays passed into history.

Mrs. Jas. F. Harry Bryant

After an illness of one month's duration, Teresa Rosinda Ponds, beloved wife of J. Harry Bryant, passed away suddenly on Wednesday morning at her residence on Murray Street.

The late Mrs. Bryant was born in Albury, Prince Edward County 58 years ago, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William A. Ponds. For the past twelve years she has resided in Trenton, where she was mostly highly respected. Her sudden demise came as a great shock to her many friends. She was a member of Wellington Street United Church and held offices in several of the ladies' organizations of the church.

Besides her sorrowing husband, one sister, Mrs. John G. Wood, is left to mourn her passing.

The funeral was held this (Friday) afternoon from her late residence with Rev. A. E. Edmison of King Street United Church officiating. Interment took place in Glenwood Cemetery. Messrs D. H. Purdy, J. Rathbun, P. W. Fairman, E. L. Dafoe, C. Foster and A. C. Tweddr acted as bearers.

No teams from the Airport will be seen in action in Trenton this year as they have a five-teamed league at the air station, two from the R.C.A.F. and three from the Project.

The schedule has not been completed but the first four games will be played as follows: May 28, C.P.R. vs. Mic Mac Grads; May 29, Benedict-Proctor vs. Mic-Macs; May 31, C.P.R. vs. Mic-Macs and June 1, College Grads vs. Benedict-Proctor. TARZAN THE TERRIBLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Mo-sar saw that now every precious moment counted. He looked again at the beautiful woman who stood beside O-lo-a, and knew from palace gossip that she could be no other than the godlike stranger whom Ko-tan had planned to make his queen. "But," he cried to his son, "Taka, your own woman and I will take mine!" With that he sprang suddenly forward, seized Jane by the waist and lifted her in his arms, before either O-lo-a or Pan-at-lee could guess his purpose.

He disappeared through the hangings and was gone with the stranger woman struggling and fighting in his grasp. Then Bu-lot sought to seize the princess, but Pan-at-lee grabbed him fiercely around the legs and strove to drag him down. Viciously he kicked at her, but soon found that he stood in danger of losing the princess unless he rid himself of this clawing, scratching she-ape. Hurling O-lo-a to the floor, he seized Pan-at-lee by the hair and drew his knife.

And then the curtain behind him suddenly parted. In two swift bounds, a lithe figure crossed the room. Before Bu-lot's knife reached its goal, his wrist was seized from behind and a terrific blow dropped him lifeless to the floor. . . . When the waters closed over Tarzan in the pool of the gryf, he had gambled his chance for life upon one slim hope. His had seen a tiny moonlit patch of water glimmering through a small aperture in the cliff on the opposite side.

With swift, bold strokes he swam for speed along. Tarzan heard the great splash of the huge gryf and the churning waters as it forged rapidly onward in the sea-man's wake. Nearing the opening, he saw that the portion above the water was not large enough to permit his body going through. His life depended, then, upon how big was the submerged portion. Gathering his great strength for the last few strokes, Tarzan extended his hands before him and shot forward toward the hole.

Herbert Marshall and Claudette Colbert in Thrilling Romance

The superb showmanship of Cecil B. DeMille is once more manifest in his latest Paramount picture, "Four Frightened People," which starts at the Belle tomorrow (Saturday) matinee daily.

This picture, which repeats the success of his memorable "Male and Female" of several years ago, is one of the most colorful pieces of screen entertainment that it has been our pleasure to see for many a long month.

Against a background of the most amazing jungle scenery ever brought to the screen, the story details the adventures of four highly cultured people, two women and two men, who are forced to escape from a Dutch steamer when bubonic plague breaks out. Lost for months in a Malay jungle, they burn to primitive manners and lay bits. The transformation of a prim little school teacher into a beautiful jungle creature over whom the men fight provides some highly novel situations.

This latter role played by Claudette Colbert is the most outstanding achievement of her career and more than justifies her elevation to stardom. Herbert Marshall and William Gargan, in contrasting roles enhance the story with finely drawn portrayals.

No funnier situation was ever devised for the screen than the placing of the dignified Mary Boland in primitive surroundings. This splendid comedienne makes a tremendous hit with the spectator. Leo Carrillo, in the role of a half-caste guide, proves his versatility with this newest characterization in his long screen repertoire.

Dekkillia's always reliable direction has gone a few points beyond what is usually expected of him. It marks a high point in his long screen career. Added by the photography of Karl Struss, this picture is something unusual in screen entertainment.

New Low Ayres Film

What to do with an extravagant wife is explained in detail in "Let's Be Ritzy," the William Anthony McGuire play, with Lew Ayres and Patricia Ellis in the leading roles, and is announced as the second feature on the same program. The story is one of modern love of a young married couple and abounds with comedy and romance.

Beauty and the Beast, a dainty tid-bit of 1938's hurricane of love, laughter and song, "We're Not Dressing," all-star comedy, Screen Oddities, and the Adventures of the News Daredevils precede the feature offering.

AT THE CAPITOL

"AGGIE APPLEBY" AND "HOLD THE PRESS"

The screen's newest dramatic heroine is the slightly burnt toast of New York's lower East Side, Aggie Appleby.

Aggie, who is no angelic comedienne, makes men over through sex appeal, jibes and feminine thrusts peculiar to her own psychology.

RKO-Radio has made the stage hit, "Aggie Appleby, Maker of Men" into a vigorous laugh comedy enacted by such celebrities as Charles Farrell, Wynne Gibson, William Gargan and Zasu Pitts.

Set in the shadow of the East Riders elevated, where life is no bed of roses, the story concerns the lives of Aggie, a country boy with an inferiority complex who wanders into this district, and of the fighting fool of the community, Red Branahan, who could lick his weight in wild-cats.

Aggie is always in command in the strange triangle and how she gets and loses her man and makes a sucker out of a sap and a sap from a sucker provides entertainment, it is said, of a variety not seldom flashed across the screen.

Aggie is enacted by Wynne Gibson, while Charles Farrell and William Gargan round out the triangle with Zasu Pitts in a screaming role of a boarding house chambermaid, Betty Furness, as Evangeline, the village sweetheart of Farrell, and Blanche Friderici, the aunt whose family tree was her greatest pride.

"Hold the Press"

In a plot based on actual happenings in a newspaper man's career, Tim McCoy will be seen as a daring reporter in "Hold the Press," second feature which takes the high-lights of the story and woven them into a screen story, "Hold the Press," in which Colonel Tim McCoy is starred as the daring reporter who gets on the trail of the racketeers and exposes them at infinite risk.

The plot furnishes the actor with plenty of fast and exciting adventure before he finally rounds up the crooks. Machine gun chatter and bullets whine, and a half-dozen exciting personal encounters keep the excitement at high pitch throughout the story. Romance is provided by Evelyn Brent.

A number of the characters in the story are drawn from real-life acquaintances in the newspaper profession, according to McCoy, the author.

Both these entertaining and consistent features are to be seen on the Capitol screen until Saturday.

A Mickey Mat cartoon, "Spooky Spooks," with the popular Capitol Record Revue, termed "a programme that is hard to beat."

MISSING MAN NEAR JUNGLE AT ONE TIME

TRAIL FROM MARSH

All Night Vigil Fails to "Land" Fugitive From Automobile

An all-night vigil during which police only once saw a man said to be Walter Wilson, escaped alleged automobile thief who led the police of this community a chase through the marshes and underbrush east of the city all day yesterday and last night. The man, tired and foot-sore, was seen stumbling across the C.N.R. tracks late last night by railway employes and headed northward. Further police searching failed to locate their man, however.

Two men and two stolen automobiles are in the possession of the police as a result of events in the forest of one man early yesterday morning. The first man arrested gave his name as Matthew Baker, Toronto and is being held on a nominal charge of vagrancy by local authorities. He will face a charge of theft of a motor car in the Niagara Falls, Ont., police court. Later in the day police posse arrested two men, one James Campbell, was held in custody, while the other, a Swede, Carl Johnson, was released when he rode to Belleville in company with Wilson and Baker yesterday afternoon to tell their story.

Johnson's story, as told and found in possession of a second automobile that had, it is reported, been stolen at Niagara Falls, Ont., last week ago. Campbell, however, stuck to the police last night, he had found the car abandoned on highway 2 a mile east of Belleville, and to a farm east of Belleville where he abandoned it, picking it up yesterday afternoon. Wilson and Baker will be turned over to Niagara Falls authorities today and will face charges of car theft.

Following the arrest in the city, provincial and R.C.M.P. police have been diligently searching the countryside immediately east of the city for the man who escaped the night before the Niagara Falls men. "He must be hungry and will soon come out from cover," stated Chief Kidd this morning. The police believe Wilson the man responsible for setting fire to all an opportunity to catch a freight in the afternoon. All incoming and outgoing trains are being searched.

Getting Rid of Skunk Under Barn Not Duty of Many Societies Called

BUFFALO, N.Y. May 26.—(AP), If there is a skunk under the barn in the Joseph Tobin backyard, and what they want to know is whether there is such a thing as a skunk-dog. There are coon dogs, rabbit dogs, bird dogs, but did you ever hear of a skunk dog?

The Tobins want to know if you did, because a skunk dog seems to be their last hope. Tues Mrs. Tobin's word for it. She called on the city police, the Humane Society and the conservation department, all said getting skunks out from under barns was not one of their duties.

She told them how to do it, too. It seems they asked how she would have them go about it, and she said the hole under the barn was big enough for a man to crawl under to shoot the skunk.

Practical enough, but they said it was not part of their duties.

Something will have to be done. One neighbors are complaining among other things.

GOLF CROWN TO L. LITTLE

U.S. Golfer Shoots Record and Game To Defeat Wallace 14 and 13

Prestwick, Scotland, May 26, (CP)—W. Lawson Little, 23-year-old San Francisco golfer, won the British Amateur Championship today, defeating James Wallace, Scottish Carpenter, 14 and 13 in the 36-hole final.

After gaining a 12-hole lead in the morning round by shooting a sensational 66 to break all records for this strenuous seaside course, Little put an end to the one-sided match at the 29th hole with another display of sub-par golf. He was three under par for the five holes of the afternoon round and eight under par for the match.

In becoming the third native American to win the title—Jess Sweetser won in 1924 and Bobby Jones in 1930—the 23-year-old California husky set up four records.

His margin of victory was the most one-sided ever registered, his lead of 12 holes far after the first 18 holes was the largest any finalist ever enjoyed; and his first round 66 shattered the professional record of 69 held by MacDonald Smith as well as the amateur standard of 71 set by F. Beckwell.

In the face of this sort of golf Wallace, the "dark horse" sensation never really had a chance. Wallace failed to display the same steady skillful game that he showed in eliminating George T. Dunlap Jr., yesterday and four other Walker Cup Players on previous rounds.

"Sorry old man," Little said as they left the course and the American golfer hurried to pack his bags and leave for Liverpool to board the Manhattan tonight.

"It was a grand experience to pay against such a great golfer," the 20-year-old Soc replied.

"BREAKING OLD MILL"

Yesterday Col. C. R. McCullough, Wentworth County historian, said he believed the breaking old mill mentioned in the song was the old mill at Ancaster.

Mr. Clark, however, disagrees. He says the "breaking old Mill" was an old sawmill near what is now the village Clark, known by the locality of Twenty-Mile Creek a short distance from the village of Jordan.

Along the banks of this creek the mill was used to stand. The site of the mill is now occupied by maple trees. "Very little of the mill remains," Mr. Clark said, "except a small portion of the brick foundation, which I believe is now dried up."

After the death of his wife Johnson returned to Canada and resumed teaching as Professor of Languages at the University of Toronto. Mr. Clark says the words of the famous song were written in 1864 in a book of verse by Johnson entitled "Maple Leaves" and were set to music in 1866 by J. A. Butterfield of Detroit.

PARLIAMENT HILL HEARS

By WILFRID EGGLESTON

Curious curiosities on Parliament Hill ..... are we going to have an election this year? ..... how many seats can Hepburn win against Henry? ..... will Gladwell or Campbell defeat Anderson in Saskatchewan ..... how much royal crop will there be left on the prairies by the time the Prince Edward special gets there? ..... suppose we get through with it ..... is there something in this Dionne baby business? ..... why didn't Premier Bennett succeed in the commander conferred on Walter M. Stewart's evidence about collection of campaign funds in 1930 ..... what kind of legislation can the government frame against the stopping such exploitation of the primary producers as came out in the tobacco and other probes .....

A steer, as Joe Harris, M.P., was allowed to be named in the House without challenge from that famous cattleman, Col. Harry Mullins, is anywhere from twenty to nine feet long, depending on whether the tail is down, or dragging, and from that interesting fragment of boring information it is gathered that a herd of 1,000 cattle has been assembled at Swift Current, Sask., for shipment to Scarborough preceded to calculate that if all the additional steers shipped to England last year (as "temporary aid") and previous years were tied head to tail they would reach from Ottawa to Montreal and that California could have told him that if all those steers had been tied head to tail they would make the Calgary stampede look like a tie party.

Joe Harris, in that reverberating voice which makes the Speaker's chair vibrate, was the life and soul of the chamber, added, a bit unfair if all the wee, extra bags were corralled together in one pen, of members on the west corridor of the House could not possibly make as much noise as they would, if all the members on the east side of the House could not possibly contribute how valuable the Imperial trade pacts have been to Canada.

A western member vouches for the following story:

He was standing in one of the halls of the Parliament Buildings when a prominent senator came out of the House. He was in the buildings, greeted the member, and began to sing the praises of the Premier. "Why," said he, recently made an address in the House, "he sets into the open on Sunday and tells the highways with family cars.

Unknown Hand Places Poppy on Church War Memorial

Flower in Its Loneliness is Symbol of Lives and Sacrifices of Members of Tabernacle Church During Great War

The light that streams down into the vestibule of Tabernacle Church is softened by the beauty of the stained glass overhead, lending an air of sanctity and peace to that spiritual home of so many generations.

Ascending the stairs on the right one is greeted by a window in memory of "Samuel A. Burgess of Trenton," by his daughter, Sarah A. Clarke." Upon entering the auditorium, one is impressed by the grandeur in which all the pews converge and slope gently down towards the pulpit as though they were still rapt with attention long after their occupants had departed.

As one walks down the church beside the south wall, one comes to a window that perpetuates the memory of "Daniel Robbins" erected by his daughter Maria Lewaus," and as little further on stands a window "In Memory of Hobert and Mary Fuller, Belleville," erected by their daughter, E. Robbins.

One is impressed by the fact that although they travelled far from their native land, they were steadfast in the faith as shown by a religion that transcends the barriers of time and space.

The next window bears the inscription "This window was erected by the Sunday School of This Church, 1917," and stands as evidence as to the desire that filled the hearts of that year as they sought by the church they loved so well. They are children no longer but the window will stand as a lasting memorial when they have passed away, as a mute but eloquent witness of their love and devotion. Another window is dedicated to the devotion that friendship can inspire. It is inscribed, "Erected by the Rev. Bidwell Lane, M.A. LL.B." In a little further on stands a tablet. It is found. The window must have been erected by some devoted friend who left no record of his name, in order that it might not detract one's attention from that of his friend. The last window gives a touching example of filial devotion for it bears the inscription, "In Memoriam Samuel Bleasdell, by her son James A. Clark."

The next wall contains a window, "In Memoriam, Mrs. W. J. Mayhew, a member of this Church. Died April 16, 1878, W.J.M." Another window was erected "In Memory of Robert Orr, of this City in Memory of his Parents, John and Elizabeth Orr." Also in memory of members of the Congregational Church, Maidenhead, England, but now will endear bears the inscription "Presented by Maud Hannah Simpson, Sidney, Bridge."

Peace Be Within Thy Walls.

At the rear of the church stands the wall is perhaps its most beautiful and impressive window, and which is in memory of "Thomas Simpson of Sydney by his son; Lawrence Johnson". Directly below it hangs a beautifully polished bronze tablet in honor of those who laid down their lives during the Great War. Below the list of names is the inscription "Ashes to Flanders", in one corner a poppy symbolic of the blood shed by the Canadian troops overseas has been placed by some one who had the thoughtfulness to remember. On a table below the memorial stands a brass vase, "presented to the Tabernacle Church by Mr. and Mrs. G. H. French in memory of their son, Lieut. Ernest Clifford French, killed August 30th, 1918". This vase contains flowers in honor of the memory of their son, and his companions.

Below the memorial there is also a tablet. "Secured to the memory of Mrs. Malcolm Mackenzie who fell in the Great War, August 30th, 1918, Aged 37 Years. Her Faithful Greater love hath no man".

Also there is a handsome Presentation to the Tabernacle Church by E. B. Bell and family in memory of "Mary Ann Bell" whose word of service is contained in a hymn-ary given by the Belleville United Church parlor for the use of the Women's Missionary Society from Mrs. Missionary Society from Mrs. Bell, Belleville, November 1, 1887."

As we leave the auditorium with its memorials of past years and devotion one is greeted by one last vase which is in the form of a lamp on the wall of the stairs bears the inscription "In Memoriam James Whalsley, Died 1st Jan., 1918, Aged 74 years. Certain Life 61 years". No more elaborate memorial could be erected to this record of sixty-one years of service, to the devotion that the Tabernacle Church inspires in its adherents.

English Claimant to Estate Represented by Belleville Man

Mr. Gordon Robertson is Solicitor in Interesting Action

An interesting story is being told in the Belleville courts at Lindsay, Ontario, which has so echo across the sea in this city. For nearly half a century a man named George T. Emery lived in Belleville, where he was respected and successful business man. He died October 4, 1931, leaving a widow, two children and an estate valued at $15,400.85.

Now, only a few days past, comes the shadow of another life in Mrs. Ellen Emery, of Tenterden, County England, and her two daughter. Mrs. Ellen Emery is the widow of the late George T. Emery and that the estate should be left to her and her daughters. Consequently an action has been started in the Supreme Court against the Belleville widow claiming the entire estate.

Local interest in the case is supplied by the fact that the English widow's case is being presented by E. Belleville Ivy, Gordon Robertson, for the legal firm of Cronyn and Betts. Gordon Robertson is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Robertson, Queen Street.

The petition was issued on behalf of the English claimant temporarily tying up the entire estate, which will be followed by an application asking for a permanent injunction until the case comes to trial.

Mrs. Emily Emery in her affidavit said she was married to the late George Emery at Temple Church in Bristol, England, on September 26, 1878. Two daughters were born of the union. Her husband was known as George Tyley Emery, and he came to Canada about 1883, and as far as they knew, sailed from Liverpool. They received letters received from Canada, then correspondence ceased, according to the affidavit, for a number of years.

Photographs and affidavits from Belleville identify the man as George Tyley Emery, will be submitted in evidence when the case comes to trial.

With this honour they will receive lovely gifts as souvenirs.

"The Queen will be presented with a beautiful jewelled brooch and a large silver trophy. She will also be presented with a cheque which will enable her to take a two week's holiday with all expenses paid.

"In appreciation of her supporters some lucky individual will receive a cheque for fifty dollars at the close of the Queen Contest. Ticket holders on any of these five princesses, Miss Margaret Bell, Miss Margaret Calcutt, Miss Mary Drummond, Miss Myra Reid, or Miss Dorothy Wood, are eligible to win the fifty dollar cash prize. TWO NATIONS WAGE WAR ON GRASSHOPPERS

Canada's Expenditure Will Run Close to $700,000

PUT OUT POISON

Translation Bill is Passed Through The Committee Stage

Ottawa, May 26 (CP)—An international onslaught on the grasshoppers which have ravished the wheat fields of Southern Manitoba and Saskatchewan in increasing numbers during the past few years is under way. This year the humble hoppers, hundreds of millions strong, will have to fight the concentrated might of two nations, Canada and the United States.

A few details of the war which is now getting under way were revealed in House of Commons last night when the agriculture department estimates came up. The United States during the past year has already provided $2,000,000 to secure men and poison to put an end to the grasshoppers. And Canada's executives will run to $700,000.

The plan of campaign was mapped out last winter at an international conference of entomologists at Fargo, N.D., and prairie province officials are now co-operating with United States officials in putting it into operation.

In Canada the grasshopper fight is the primary business of the province but the Dominion government is providing them with all the money they need.

Last year, Mr. Weir, said, the United States did not do much although it was in that country the war waged in Canada. The result was the destruction of millions and the thrived south of the international border and then crossed in great clouds on the Canadian side to devour the crops.

May Save All Crop

Through concerted effort this year it is hoped almost completely to save the crop from the ravages. On a normal crop of 15 bushels to the acre Hon. Mr. Minister thought 14 bushels would be saved.

When the agriculture estimated were last before the House, Hon. W. R. Motherwell, former Minister of Agriculture, charged the government with inactivity in the grasshopper war. Last night he attributed an Order-in-Council providing $500,000 for grasshopper control, which had already been added to his earlier effort.

This was denied by Prime Minister R. B. Bennett who said the $500,000 had been spent long before Mr. Motherwell's speech. The Saskatchewan government had obtained the money from the banks with assurance of help from the Dominion, had spent it on poison and the Order-in-Council merely indicated the sending of the money to enable this province to repay the banks.

After a long struggle with three of four French-speaking members providing the only opposition the House last night passed the translation bill through the committee stage. E. R. E. Chevrier (Lib. Ottawa) and J. F. Poulot (Lib. Terrebonne) between them managed to hold the Bill in committee for two days. They fought every clause and were joined at times by George Boivard (Lib. Kamouraska) and Hon. Peter Veniot (Lib. Gloucester).

Archbishop Neil McNeil Catholic Prelate, Toronto Dies after Long Illness

Native of Cape Breton Noted Churchman and Scholar

BELIEVED IN AMITY

Took Firm Stand For Separate School Rights

Toronto, May 26 (CP)—Archbishop Neil McNeil who rose from his father's blacksmith forge to a high post in the Roman Catholic Church, was mourned today by Roman Catholics throughout the Dominion as one who had staunch faith and a kindly philosophy. He died in St. Michael's Hospital here after a two weeks' fight for life and his funeral will be held Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock at St. Michael's Cathedral.

Born 63 years ago in Hillsborough, Inverness, Nova Scotia, one of a family of 11, Archbishop McNeil at his death was head of the Toronto Archdiocese of the Roman Catholic Church. At midnight last night the aged prelate was claimed by pneumonia that followed an operation May 15, five days after he had entered hospital.

When he entered the institution doctors found he was suffering from shingles, complications of the bladder and kidney disorders. Five days after the operation pneumonia attacked and his great age could not withstand its ravages. His wonderful vitality, however, kept him alive until last night.

Son of Malcolm McNeil, descendant of the McNeils of Barra, Island in the Hebrides, Archbishop McNeil's rise in the Roman Catholic Church was rapid. He took a great interest in education on which he wrote several booklets. At 22 years as head of the Toronto Archdiocese was marked by advances in the church activities.

Highly Educated

When a young boy he left the blacksmith forge to lose himself in school books and to become a priest which he was for more than 50 years. He obtained his education at St. Francis Xavier's at Antigonish, N.S., at the College of Propaganda in Rome and at the University of Marseilles, and was ordained 1879 and a year later became a teacher at St. Francis Xavier's College of which he became rector. His 55 years as Bishop of Nigadis and Vicar Apostolic of Newfoundland with making several journeys by boat, and sail boat up the rugged storm-swept coast to visit his flock. He also journeyed over the rough trails of the Canadian Rockies when he was Bishop of Vancouver, a post he held for two years during which he built schools and increased the educational facilities.

Archbishop McNeil left Vancouver for Toronto Archdiocese in 1912 and his 22 years in the Canadian capital found him still active and although the years took their toll he worked diligently to erect 30 new churches, a number of schools and other institutions.

AMELIASBURG CONSERVATIVES

Mr. Collver the money was obtained. And this lady went away. You may be sure she will vote for Mr. Collver in the next election. Some time ago Mr. Wadsworth introduced a bill to wipe out Section 98 of the Criminal Code, which says as long as you advocate a change of government by peaceful means, you are in perfect order, but when you advocate a change of government by armed force, it is a criminal offence. In the Dominion House it has always been Wadsworth trying to get that section wiped out. It is the very root of all you depend upon for peace and tranquility. Mr. Ward emphasized the fact that Mr. Wadsworth tried for that section to be wiped out and said "what impression of Mr. Hepburn does that leave on your mind? You can place all your trust in your candidate? I have known him indirectly for the last ten years and I am quite satisfied in telling you that Horace Collver succeeded in obtaining more for the County of Prince Edward than any other member for the last ten years.

Candidate Asks Support

The candidate, Mr. Collver, spoke next. He said "I think we have every reason to support the present government." During the last eleven years, while the Conservatives have been in power, there has not been a breath of scandal against the present government, and the Opposition cannot prove, that there has been any graft dishonestly in that time. The Toronto Daily Star, a very Liberal paper, has referred to Mr. Hepburn as a wild cat. If that had come from the Conservative press we could not say anything about it, but when it comes from the most Liberal press, we consider it and think it is true. We should say, that a wild cat is not one to whom we would trust the country." Mr. Collver promised that if he were elected for the coming term, he would endeavor to serve the people as he has in the past.

No Implication

Mr. John A. Wrese, M.P., spoke next saying, "Hepburn stated in the Globe, that in the interests of economy, he would transfer the Ontario Department of Agriculture to Ottawa because of the duplication of services by both the Ontario and Federal Departments. There is no duplication, but the functions of the two are differently and clearly defined. The Federal is to conduct experiments on farms, research and international marketing. The Ontario Department educates the young people on the farm. Take for example the Junior Farmers' work on seed and stock-judging competitions, calf and swine clubs for the boys. The Department maintains the upkeep of an Agricultural Representative in each county to help the farmer with his problems, to raise the standard of livestock and flocks, to make surveys, to encourage Rural School Fairs and to develop children in agriculture. In Col. T. L. Kennedy, we have a Minister of Agriculture who is constantly on the job, putting forth every effort on behalf of the Farmers and Fruit Growers' Association, and at the same time, in co-operating with his Federal Department, with regards to the Natural Products Marketing Bill, which is now before the House at Ottawa.

This marketing bill has three principal features. It has power to control the marketing product. It has power to stabilize the price, and not the price for a week ahead at least. It has power to control and regulate the trade of producer and consumer. It will prevent exploitation of consumers and producers' products, in order that the producer will get his larger share of the consumer's dollar. Marketing King objected to the bill on the grounds that he was against compulsion or control, but for orderly marketing. How can you have orderly marketing without control and control is compulsion.

Makes Conditions Better

Brigadier General R. B. Hepburn was the next speaker. He believes that Mr. Collver has done everything that was humanly possible to make the condition better for the people of Prince Edward, and he cannot conceive why the constituency should not send Mr. Collver back into office.

The mayor, Mr. Robert Zufelt, said "Mr. Bowerman has been making some quite irresponsible statements about the municipal taxes. He said he reduced the taxes fifty per cent." According to Mr. Zufelt the credit for the lowering of the taxes goes to the highways of the Ontario government.

The meeting was closed with "God Save the King".

KIWANIS CLUB TO PRESENT STAGE AND SCREEN SHOW

Next week (the date, to be exact, is May 31st, the evening (Thursday) Belleville will be treated to one of the outstanding musical events of the season when Canada's Favorite Four Entertainers visit the Belle Theatre in conjunction with the special entertainment to be presented by the Kiwanis Club in aid of their drive for funds.

"Kiwanis needs money for Kiwanis Ideals" has always been the slogan of Kiwanis International and the Belleville organization is living up to this ideal indeed. With this end in view the local Kiwanis Club has secured the services of Canada's Favorite Four Entertainers, an organization of outstanding musical merit, which will appear on the Belle stage on the evening of May 31st, after the regular show has been finished.

Famous Players Canadian Corporation, always anxious to assist in any worthy cause, has donated the use of the theatre free on this occasion, and co-operating with Manager J. Perran, local manager, have contrived to present a most attractive bill for the Kiwanis drive for funds. The Four Entertainers, the Masqueraders, featuring Ronald Coleman, eminent English actor, and Elissa Landi has been brought back to Belleville especially for this special show, which will begin at 11:15 p.m. on Thursday night, May 31st. A special showing of "shorts", travel, comedy, etc., will also be included.

The "Boys de resistance" of course, will be the presentation of a concert organization of unusual merit, Canada's Favorite Four Entertainers. It is seldom that Belleville-ites have a chance to see and hear on the stage just such a troupe as this. Consisting of Misses Gladys Topping Cornell, contralto; Pauline Teeter Wilson, 'cellist and reader; Myrtle M. Armstrong, violinist, and Maybelle A. Smith, pianist, these girls, who are appearing at the Chateau Laurier, Canadian Pacific Hotel in Ottawa, the night previous to coming here, will undoubtedly prove to be one of the greatest stellar attractions to appear in Belleville in some years. They will present a varied programme, including old-time numbers, novelty entertainment and more serious presentations.

The Kiwanis Club has always done good work. Now it is asking the co-operation of the general public to support its drive for funds. The price and the affidavit are always with us, in good times and, bad times, but especially in these trying days an extra effort is needed to be put forward.

Naturally, there will be no advance in prices, despite the fact that an excellent stage show is going to be included in the bill.

In Napanee the service station of A. Smith was robbed of gasoline and that of J. H. Davis was robbed of two watches, valued at $0.00, when the plate glass window was broken and the watches taken out. Service station of S. Sedgwin, two miles east of Napanee, was entered and $25 worth of gasoline stolen, while at Odessa the barber shop of O. Babcock was entered and two razors, cigars, cigarettes and $10.00 in cash taken.

A SMOOTH, restful, gliding ride . . . a bounceless back seat . . . a new feeling of safety and relaxation in high-speed or rough-road travel. All these pleasures are yours with Knee-Action wheels. And if your car is a 1934 Master Chevrolet, you not only get this gliding ride at its best, you also get several other Knee-Action advantages not found in any other low-priced car! The reason: Chevrolet's Knee-Action is of a special kind. The rights to it are held exclusively by General Motors. In this construction, the coil spring, which is the heart of the mechanism, is safely and solidly enclosed in a heavy steel housing. This keeps out dirt and flying stones, protects the spring from wear, tear, and exposure. What's more, this design results in shock-proof steering—the elimination of shake, shudder and shimmy when the front wheels meet a bump.

Showing cut away to show enclosed Knee-Action construction.

Come to our showrooms. See and drive the new Chevrolet. You'll find that everything about this big, economical automobile reflects Chevrolet's well-known policy: to build the most cars, by building the best cars of low price!

ROBINSON CRUSOE'S CREATOR

Robinson Crusoe's creator, Daniel DeFoe saw centuries ahead of time, not by magic but by exercise of one of the rarest of human gifts and by an observation unique in the world's history. Besides he gave the world the first modern novel.

DeFoe wrote in 1697 of the science of banking, his "Essay on Projects" seeming to be the germ, not only of branch banks of today but of the corporation stock so much in favor in this age. He saw two hundred years ahead the formation of highway commissions to build roads, seeing in the ancient Roman highways the proper dimensions of roads, drainage, paving and materials. Higher education for women was also seen as a possibility, he had notions of insurance, on the law of bankruptcy, and on national pensions.

So DeFoe was one of the first economic and sociological geniuses. Besides he had an imagination which made fictitious histories to be believed as truth.

VICTORIA DAY OBSERVANCE

A very sane Victoria Day was celebrated on Thursday. Commonsense and the observance of precautions of ordinary life manifested themselves. It was happier for everybody and there was not the usual total of injury and damage wrought.

A national holiday ought to possess a national type of entertainment and observance. That is, the Dominion ought to celebrate in a characteristic manner worthy of the people.

Britain as the seat of the Empire, held high festival on this day with the first Empire Day air meet and with messages to and from various far-flung parts of the Commonwealth.

Sanity in the national observance reigned this year.

At one time it would almost seem as if Victoria Day might lose its character, the association with the late Queen's victories and the day as Empire Day, but the occasion has proven itself more favored than ever.

The British observance of Empire Day, the call for which went out from Sir Jellicoe was all that patriots could have asked and the Canadian observance was a credit to Canada.

Set in the springtime when the weather is not too warm, Victoria Day or Empire Day as it is called in England is one of the most favored of national occasions.

MACHINES AND CIVILIZATION

Professor Whitelaw of McGill University, Montreal, points out that civilization and culture are not the same things, and that the assumption that culture necessarily advances with civilization is an illusion. From an article in the Montreal Gazette he would gather that what is known as that culture does not necessarily result from mechanical progress. That is true. But neither does civilization in the narrower sense of the word, result from that cause. Mechanical progress has done a great deal for mankind. Men were more civilized, more civilized when they developed agriculture than when they lived by hunting and fishing, and when writing and letters were invented, when they lived in houses instead of tents, built churches and school houses and structures intended to serve the ends of manufacturing, commerce and charity. But it is true that mechanical progress alone does not advance either civilization or culture. Mechanical progress is merely a means to an end which is the development of the intellect and spirit of men. The pagan Roman Empire at its strongest was an imposing structure, but its civilization was top-sided, as is shown by the existence of slavery, the slums of Rome, the cruel punishment of crucifixion, and amusements as barbarous as those of the most savage tribe.

In our own day mechanical progress has come with a rush. "What we need," says The Gazette, "is a deft and a more rational management of the capacities whereof we boast and of the forces brought within our reach." To take a familiar illustration, it is a wonderful invention that enables us in Canada to hear words spoken in Europe. But the vital question is whether the message so conveyed widens the range of our thought, promotes the intellectual and spiritual growth of man. Real progress is in human welfare. In that respect the world is better off than in imagined Golden Ages in the past. The so-called simple life before the machine age was by no means an ideal state of existence. The great poets and philosophers of the past were exceptional rather than typical of their age, and it is doubtful if at any time the love of nature was any greater than to-day. But there are grave defects in our civilization, and the gravest is the hardening back to frenzied nationalism, with its menace of war. International relations are still in the barbaric tribal stage. That is where the greatest defect in our civilization lies.—London Advertiser.

THE WIND

The wind is my love,
The wind is my friend;
It comes to me
Through the night from world's end
It hastes to me
From a strange, dim place,
It blows the breath
Of the sea on my face!

A hint of incense
From dancer or priest;
Tell me, O wind,
What of the east?
A pink rose petal
Has brushed my mouth;
Tell me, O wind,
What of the south?

O, whisper, wind,
Of north and west,
Of forest deeps
And snow-crowned crest!
The wind is my love,
From strange seas out there
It blows the spray
And the mist through my hair!

ALL KINDS OF BOTTLES feature the liquor business, and now United States authorities, ever on the breaking bottoms, are disposed to revolutionize the liquor containers in which their liquor is served up. Hitherto there has been a certain sanctity about bottles with fancy pinched sides and other deceptions as to quantity are frowned upon and an effort will be made to have standard sized bottles which hold just as much as they seem to. Foreign liquor exports are making strenuous objections to any change in bottles.

SIR WIFRID LAURIER, returning from a visit to England, was in Montreal this week en route to his beloved Labrador. He stated that the work of his mission in Labrador is progressing favorably, and he commented upon the fact that volunteer workers, especially young medical men and nurses, actually pay to be of service on the Labrador, instead of seeking to get upon a payroll. All of which is a compliment to Sir Wilfrid, who as a salesman of missionary work in Labrador, has set a new high in constructive effort and ability to reproduce a drab picture in attractive colors.

"SILLY AS A GOOSE", is an old expression, but is a goose silly? and how silly? Sidelight Ben in Dallas, Texas, sends us the following goose story which proves that the goose is a pretty smart bird after all! Down Texas way the cotton farmers use geese to rid the cotton patches of Bermuda, Johnson and crab grasses, and here's the story:

There are probably 25,000 web-footed "farm hands" in Van Zandt county alone.

It was explained that the geese have a yen for the succulent green roots of the grasses, while refusing to touch the tough fibrous roots of the cotton plant. The farmer turns loose his flock at the top of the rows and they waddle down, eating every shoot of grass as they go.

The honor of first utilizing geese as farm workers is commonly accorded to Farmer Jones of Myrtle Springs. The grass had all but smothered his cotton so he built a goose-proof fence around his cotton and turned his flock inside. He wasn't sure the geese would not eat the cotton and didn't much care, the case looked hopeless.

That was years ago, and farmers in this section have been using geese ever since. One farmer alone uses 1,200 birds a year in his fields.

It was explained that the cost of farm hands to clean a patch and keep it clean is around $150 for 100 acres, while the geese will do the same job for a cost of about $15.

FOODS THAT MAY BE CAUSE OF POISONING

Healthy Animals May Feed Upon Plants Infected With Poisonous Fungi

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

To most people "ptomaine poisoning" means poisoning from fish and shell-fish. As a matter of fact poisoning of the system from any kind of food is called "ptomaine poisoning." The word "ptomaine" itself signifies a chemical substance produced when food "spoils" and putrifies.

We may become poisoned, not because the food has deteriorated and therefore has become decomposed within itself which are dangerous for human consumption, but because the food may actually carry disease germs. Examples of the latter are: lettuce or celery contaminated by the germ of typhoid fever; milk by Bacterium bacillus, etc.

An otherwise healthy animal may feed upon plants which are infected with poisonous fungi and these in turn may become dangerous to the human being although the meat or the animal may itself be wholesome. Furthermore, certain meats like the poisonous varieties of mushrooms, become dangerous only of danger to persons eating them, Bacillus Botulinus, for instance, may be exposed to flies and insects and thus carry the germs of pneumonia.

Although certain varieties of fish are poisonous to human beings, and cause of unusual glands which they contain—these kinds are never sold in the markets. Fish which usually causes ptomaine is the fact that the fish has been exposed to heat, or it has been kept too long, and in consequence the germs have had a flourishment.

And, of course, lobsters and crabs oysters and clams, may cause severe poisoning when they are not fresh—dangerous of all being the mussel. Besides the danger of these articles of diet, is essential.

Milk that is not pure, is old, and has not been kept cool, is deadly during summer months. Particularly are the bacteria responsible for this poisoning. And what is true of milk applies also to puddings and other products made from milk.

Cream, despite the fact that it is cold, may quickly become bacteria-laden, even within a few hours after making, since such high quantity of this dessert are consumed in the United States, one should be careful to ascertain where his ice cream comes from, how it was made, or at least, he should assure himself that the manufacturer is reliable.

Pork is not an uncommon source of poisoning, especially when in the form of sausages, frankfurters, etc. Less frequently is poisoning from ham and bacon encountered. Mutton seems to be an especially safe food in this respect.

Home dishes may cause poisoning due to a substance called "solanin," which is present in old potatoes in small amounts, but which, when in the old potatoes are concentrated. Then grains may be contaminated by the fungus known as "ergot."

The symptoms of food poisoning are upset stomach, pain, vomiting and general prostration. They may be mild and they may be most severe, so much so that death may ensue.

In all cases a copious dose of salts is indicated. In serious cases the stomach pump may have to be used. And, if the patient seems very ill a physician should be called and promptly.

DR. BISCH'S DAILY DIET HINT

When a baby or young child suddenly has a vomiting attack it does not follow of necessity that baby's or child's digestion is to blame. It must be remembered that many of the infectious diseases begin with vomiting. The safe thing to do always is to put the child on a liquid diet—milk or orange juice—promote intestinal elimination and watch for other symptoms such as temperature, rash, and the like.

MAPLE TREE PRODUCTS UNKNOWN TO DUTCH

Toronto, May 26.—Another country has been added to the list of those that do not know the delights of maple syrup and maple sugar for which includes Scandinavian countries and Germany, namely, the Netherlands. To the Dutch people stated the Agricultural Department of the Canadian National Railways, maple syrup and maple sugar are practically unknown. In "cosepense-loving" Dutch have never tasted the chewing gum habit although chewing gum is made locally, so that while they are not familiar with the exquisite flavor of maple products, they are said to be acquainted with the great American habit of chewing the product of the chicle tree.

Invents Novel Way Preventing Fires

The internationally known Rocky Mountain guide, Major Noel Wallace of Jasper National Park, has invented a novel device for preventing the starting of forest fires by smokers. It consists of a cleverly designed ash tray which can be attached to the saddle, and contains in such a position as to permit the riders to deposit in it the ashes, used matches and cigarette stubs instead of allowing them to drop to the ground.

CRUSOE'S ISLE KNOWN IN 1683

Today Island of Tobago is Reached by Boat Service

Writing of Tobago, the reputed site of Robinson Crusoe's sojourn and where his cave is shown, Captain John Poyntz, in 1683, said:

"Thou art here presented with the Fresh Prospect of the Fine Island of Tobago, about forty Leagues distand from Barbadoes; And I am persuaded that there is no Island in America, that can afford us more ample Subjects to contemplate the Bounty and Goodness of our Great Creator in than this of Tobago; And this, I speak not as a bearsay, or as one that has lived here but a Month or two, but as one that has had Experience of the Air and Soyl, in the greatest part of the Caribbee Islands, and most parts of the Continent of America, and under all His Majesties Foreign Plantations; And after having layd down a Model of them, this Island of Tobago to take up my Quillion at."

The Canadian National Steamships sail from Toronto three times from Montreal, Halifax and Boston, call at several islands en route, including Trinidad, from which port a local boat runs to Tobago, connecting to the adjacent island of Tobago.

18 CARCASSES OF DEER SEEN

Minute Evidence of Slaughter by Wolves in Soo Area

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 26 (CP)—A tale of vicious slaughter of deer by wolves and hamedons experience on Kilburn Island was told today by Eric Maitland, one of Watchman Cedarloo's trappers, who is establishing a farm home for himself in Devil's Township, north of Blind River.

Eric, while following his trap lines and hunting wolves during March to boost his income on his little farm, counted 18 deer carcasses, the result of eight 1500 pound slaughtering wolves. The bodies were not touched by the wolves. He reported finding 45 deer killed by wolves, during the winter months.

One of the four wolves he begged, hounded and shot was his, the wolf, shot about 300 feet from the shore of Gulf Island Channel by crossing the thin December ice. Lashing the dead beast to his life preserver, he lay on them and used his ski as a paddle. The wolf's hide drag himself towards the carcass. It took the settler two hours to get the carcass.

INDIANS BURY RED SOX 18-3

Eight American League Teams Bunched Within Six Games

By Hugh A. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer

When they're all hitting, as they frequently have been lately, those Cleveland Indians can be a set of exceedingly tough customers for any of their American League rivals.

By way of impressing that fact upon any remaining doubters the Indians slapped out yesterday and last night six second-highest score the major leagues season, burying the Boston Red Sox under an 18-3 count. The Indians went on the short end of the only league tally the Bostons have forged this year, 10 on April 20.

The attack started by assistant Gordon (Dusty) Rhodes for five runs and a single in Cleveland's immediate honors, and five runs in the third inning. Then they pounded Herb Pennock a while and when Johnny Marcum took the hill in the fifth they met him with a seven run outbreak. By that time Manager Bucky Harris of Boston, who had pitched himself to victory, let Johnson say in while Cleveland went on to pile up 36 hits, including the largest total of 43 bases. On the other side Monte Pearson was limited to seven blows for his fifth round victory.

While all this was going on, the Chicago White Sox caught the ferry, loaded on George Uhle for six runs in the third when Manager Jimmy Dykes hit his fourth homer in eight games and lasted to defeat the Yankees 7-5.

Winning Streak Choked

At the same time Washington choked St. Louis winning streak at eight by battering out a 9-4 victory. Philadelphia's Athletics smashed out a 6-3 decision over Detroit. The Senatorial attack featured homers by Manager Joe Cronin, Johnny Stone and Buddy Myer to help Earl Whitehill fire his 3rd filogging. The A's made good use of a handful of walks and five Detroit errors to win out with a late spurt.

The combined effect of these four games was to bunch up the standing in a way which must have bewildered a few National Leaguers who thought they were having a close race. The Yankees, defeated in seven out of nine games in the west, found their lead reduced to a single game while the stellar developing White Sox were only six games off the pace. Washington, Detroit and St. Louis again lobbed in a triple deck for third with .500 averages while Boston sank into a sixth place deadlock with the Athletics.

The native National League programme yesterday was rained out.

REDWINGS WIN FROM TORONTO

Three Run Lead Secured by Leafs Blown in Seventh Innings

By The Associated Press

Rochester Redwings are off on another impressive winning streak and one more win ceasing will be in front of the best of the International League pack.

The erratic Redwings' recent 13-game winning splurge was followed by a slump during which they dropped five decisions in a row, but they came back in winning stride now. They spilled Toronto Maple Leafs for the fourth successive time yesterday and increased their lead over the second place Newark Bears to three full games. Toronto remained in third place 1-2 games further back.

The Leafs gave Walter Hilcher a three-run lead to work with in the first three innings but Rochester batted in the late innings to win handily 8-4.

Norbert Kleiber, young Redwing pitcher, was taken out of the box with one down in the seventh and Dykes Foster stepped the Leafs cold the rest of the way.

The only other game that escaped the rain was Montreal Royals, a chance to earn an 11-4 decision over Buffalo in a heavy hitting duel. Buffalo sent Orrin Grabowski to the showers inside of two innings and held a 5-1 lead at that time but the Royals won out with the aid of four-run rallies in both the third and eighth innings.

BEARCATS WIN WALL ST. LOOP

Defeat Grills For Second Time by Score of 19 to 9

After leading the league all season the Grills Garage nine fell before the Delaney Bearcats in successive games in the play-offs in the Wall Street loop. The Bearcats proved too powerful at the bat and are worthy repeaters as league champions as they downed the Grills' nine by the score of 19 to 9 in the final league playoff at Central Park last evening after having put the Grills to the mat by a larger margin in the first play-off game last Wednesday.

The step-by-step system followed by a slump during which they dropped five decisions in a row, but they came back in winning stride now. They spilled Toronto Maple Leafs for the fourth successive time yesterday and increased their lead over the second place Newarks Bears to three full games. Toronto remained in third place 1-2 games further back.

The Leafs gave Walter Hilcher a three-run lead to work with in the first three innings but Rochester batted in the late innings to win handily 8-4.

Norbert Kleiber, young Redwing pitcher, was taken out of the box with one down in the seventh and Dykes Foster stopped the Leafs cold the rest of the way.

The only other game that escaped the rain was Montreal Royals, a chance to earn an 11-4 decision over Buffalo in a heavy hitting duel. CURRENT SPORT

(Day By Day)

Freddie Parry, local boxer, was recently signed by Matchmaker Gillie Chen, of Kingston, to meet Tommy Bland, Ontario, lightweight champion. Parry made bond of a card to be presented in the Limestone City next Friday night. Art Magill, another Parry sparring artist, was also signed for this show. Parry, as the other Parry, is a Warner-Alemite A.C. boxer, are also training regularly at the Y.M.C.A. these days under the watchful eye of Trainer Ben Nelson. He is conditioning the "East End" boxers. Bill Cheverton, the ex-Aberdeen high weight scrapper, has been added to Glen Allen's stable and we understand that this new fight recruit's station is making plans to stage an all star card along the latter part of September. Glen Allen, in the meantime, is piloting his stable of his fighters, but it looks as though Freddie Parry has been given a tough assignment in Bland, as the Toronto scrapper recently won the provincial title. Parry claims to be in the pink and expects to beat the title holder, his handlers say.

Repeaters-champions and all that stuff, but when speaking of the Delaney Bearcats one has to doff his cap as they are just about the cream of local ball talent locally. The Bearcats showed their superiority when, after trailing the Grills nine during the regular schedule in the Wall Street loop, they came back in the play-offs to win two straight games by decisive scores. The first to 11 on the count of 19 to 9 last night, 19 to 9. Grant Ashley's charges are to be congratulated on the winning of the league title for the second time in three years. Success, it looks as though Manager Frank Cheverton and Coach Orrin Lucas organized the Bearcats and took over the club and its franchise in the local senior softball loop, picked material that should go places. The Bearcats will be known as the Canada Dry Club from now on.

Out in Peterboro Knotty Lee's charges split a twin bill with the powerful Riverdale Grads on the holiday, losing the morning game and winning the afternoon till "Spook" Sterling won the verdict back to Hastings by the Petes last season, to the tune of 5 to 4. Then the Petes won. In reality it might be said that each of the clubs that play the powerful Grad team a tie in one day is not to be overlooked. Today the Kingston Ponies open the O.H.A. season in Peterboro and it will be interesting to watch the results. The Ponies may start Jamieson and save their new left hander, "Speedy" St. Louis, ex-Cardinal hurler, for the Belleville at Kingston game next Wednesday. Incidentally we understand that Big Russ Elchen, the Peter' fire-ball hurler of past years, will not be seen with the Hitlock city seniors this season. Kitchen, it seems, cannot get away from business for the out-of-town game and will devote his time to hurling intermediate ball in Peterboro. By the way, the Petes as well as the league are losing a fine boy and a real leader.

Striking while the iron is hot Manager Mills had the Nationals out for a practice last evening and what a sore-armed, sore-legged aggregation they turned up. After a little work in the infield and outfield practice the locals soon shook that wearied feeling and really follows a double header. The Nationals go on the road against the home crowd until June 5, while in the meantime they visit both Peterboro and Kingston. One win on their first road trip would not only assure the success of the team, but the win in a position of importance. Vaughan Jack, who was playing his first game in a local uniform on Thursday afternoon, made a decided hit with the fans. "Murph" as he's known to his personal friends came through with timely hits, but the feature of the game was the fine fielding of Murph's second baseman. "Murph" is a seasoned veteran and with a beautiful line of chatter had the local inner works on their toes throughout. This should prove a desired lesson to the younger players and gives Manager Mills reason for optimism. A club that won't be beat, can't be beaten.

Mayor Invites Cooperation

The visit of the members of the British "Maple Leaf Tour" who are coming to Canada during the summer has prompted Mayor Tice to seek the co-operation of the mayors of Picton, Deseronto, Napanee and Belleville in the matter of the meeting of the Britishers on the occasion of their arrival here to look over industries, creameries and orchards in the Bay of Quinte section.

The suggestion of the Crusaders made by Mr. R. Reynolds at the party visit this section has brought a reply from Mr. T. L. Burgess, private secretary to the Minister of Agriculture, the Hon. R. Weir, to the effect that the request will be brought to the attention of all possible the Britishers may have an opportunity of seeing their Canadian industries, especially in this section.

Beauty .... By Helen Jameson

PELTING THE REBELLIOUS COMPLEXION

Like spoiled children and stormy prima donnas, there are complexions that fly into tantrums for apparently no reason at all. They flare up, often, that is worth a friend's while. Except that women rather like to be fussed about a sensitive skin, there is nothing to be said for them. Nor is there much comfort in trying to deal with them. When one would look for one's best, the rebellious complexion is the height of temperamental.

The old beauty rule is that if a skin won't accept soap and water, give it cream. Yet it happens all too often that it won't be friends even with either soapsuds or the fragrant ointment. There may be a slumbering eczema at the root of the trouble or some digestive eccentricity like that which produces hives. The cure may be found in dietetic reform. Sometimes the defect the disturbing factor is a tough customer.

Since some cleansing agent must be used if the owner of the discontented complexion is to appear in polite society, it is best to try out every kind of mess—almost is nearly always capable of beating the wild skin; calmest is soothing. Sometimes, it is advisable to combine a small quantity of soapsuds with the cream.

Another workable method is to lubricate the face before using either soap or cream.

Soothing and comforting are certain hand lotions, those semi-liquid preparations made with a base of rosewater and glycerine, thickened by the addition of tragacanth. They work miracles on chapped hands; do fast as well by the human skin. Ointments of one oride is sometimes effective. So is borated talcum. The conditioner, by the bye, sometimes amazing epidermis must go on exactly right, or it will do more than smother, until she hits upon the soothing agent that puts her beauty back in line.

If the inflamation comes and goes, there is likely to be something in the source of the trouble is in the good things of the table. Shellfish and strawberries are under suspicion. If conditions never change, continue all the year round, day after day, the difficulty is a local one, subject to local treatment.

Sometimes a change of soap is effective. Oilmens exposure to sunlight will give the cuticle more resistance, cause it to build up a more substantial structure. Begin with a five minute sun bath, maybe but five minutes at first. Cover the eyes, let the Mister Sun do his cleansing and bronzing act.

Before washing the face, use tepid water. Hot and cold are too stimulating to the blood streams.

All skins are thirsty, so lap up six glasses of water a day. Look after the various avenues of elimination. Keep the intestinal tract active. Air wash the face by drooling at least a half hour each day to outdoor exercise. Then boldly cutaneous surface has a sympathetic nature: if anything is wrong any place, it sulks and looks unhappy.

Correct Manners
By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

FORMAL DANCE ATTIRE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it correct to wear a long-sleeved evening with a high front and a low back to a strictly formal dance?

2. If a corsage is worn, on what side should it be pinned? I always thought the left side was proper but I think the corsage will be crushed while dancing.

3. If dance programs are distributed, should you ask your escort's permission before reserving a dance with another young man? If so, how should it be done?

W.

1. If this is a really formal dress, it will be more or less appropriate, but even more appropriate for a dance, and more comfortable for dancing, would be a sleeveless dress of a formal dancing type.

2. You may wear a corsage on either side you wish.....there is no rule about this.

3. So that there will be no confusion as to the filling in of the program, you should inform your partner at once when you give a dance to another partner. It isn't necessary to ask his permission, but it is necessary to inform him.

ACCEPTING AND REFUSING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a young man asks you to go out with him, and you wish to accept, what is the correct thing to say? If you wish to refuse, how should you go about it?

P.

If you wish to accept the invitation, simply say, "Thank you very much, Bob, I'd love to go to the dance with you." If you wish to refuse, say, "Thank you so much for asking me, but I have an engagement for Tuesday evening," or "I'm sorry I have to work on Wednesday evening, but you were very kind to ask me."

ACKNOWLEDGING SYMPATHY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. In the case of the death of a husband, when sending out acknowledgments of sympathy, which form is correct, (a) Mrs. Blankbell Jones and daughter Marion acknowledges (or acknowledged?) with deepest gratitude, etc.....or (b) Mrs. John Jones and daughter Marion, etc.

2. To the case of the death of a mother, which form is correct in acknowledging sympathy..... (a) The family of the late Mrs. Margaret Jones acknowledge, (or acknowledged) etc. or (b) The family of the late Mrs. John Jones, etc.

The husband has been dead for over twenty years and the family is one of prestige, so the use the mother's own name of Margaret, is quite proper, or was this form could be used?

S.

1. If this phrasing is to be used, the form is: Mrs. John Jones and daughter Marion acknowledge with deepest gratitude.

Or the form may be:

(Italics) Mrs. John Jones

and

Miss Marion Jones

Or this form:

(Italics) The family of the late Mr. John Jay Jones

acknowledges with deepest etc.

This is the correct form:

(Italics) The family of the late Mrs. John Jones

acknowledges with deepest etc.

May I add one more suggestion? It is always in best form, when making these acknowledgments, (unless the person has died after a long illness) to include in public life or in some other kind of prominence when the acknowledgments will necessarily be very many, to write personal notes of thanks for expressions of condolence, letters, flowers, and so forth. This suggestion may be of especial importance to you in solve your difficulty in the second question, for it avoids the use of a form. These notes are so much more gracious than the engraved form of acknowledgment, and certainly more gracious than the printed acknowledgment. They register the personal element which is a kind acknowledgment of the personal element in the expression that "have been sent. One or two sentences may be written. This is more than something like this:

Dear Mrs. Alexander,

You were so very kind to send us such a beautiful message of sympathy and understanding and yet are deeply appreciative of your good words. Thank you too for the lovely roses which you sent, and they too brought to us a deep message of comfort.

Very sincerely yours,
Jane Wills Graham.

LIBRARY CORNER

The obligations of women in modern life are touched on by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in her book "It's Up to the Women." Mrs. Roosevelt has entered into the whirl of activity, which her position as First Lady of the United States demands, with the same spirit of endeavour as that of her energetic husband. In her book, she faces the crisis of social and economic depression that confronts the women of today. Among the topics she discusses are budgets, family health, economic need for women, recreation, working conditions, social and citizenship work; in fact every branch of activity in which women take part. Mrs. Roosevelt contends that "it is important that women think beyond the mere mention thereof." What we are passing and acquaint themselves with all phases of the conditions in our own country."

In contrast to women's place in modern life is the story of Louisa M. Alcott told in Cornelia Meigs in her book "Invincible Louisa." The story of the author of "Little Women" is also the story of another kind of life. Bronson Alcott, father of Louisa, was a philosopher among her friends. The continued poverty of the family through the years may be attributed to the combination of the character based on scenes and incidents in their life. In the person of "Amy" is Abba May Alcott and Anna Bronson Alcott is portrayed by "Meg." the gentle character of her daughter Louisa, Beth" and the enthusiastic quick tempered "Jo" herself.

Miss Meigs has presented a vivid picture of home life of this famous family which is now installed in "Little Women."

Professor McDougall has outlined an introduction to the study of some of the problems of the mind. "It is only by means of this study," he hope to find the answer to the great question—"What is man that thou art mindful of him." In this study end, the author has in this volume considered the effect of the native endowment of man and how that endowment goes to become a many-sided personality.

Robert S. Woodworth, professor of psychology at Columbia University, concerns himself with the various psychological schools of thought which have established during the last thirty years. He explains the term and each school as an impartial observer, stating that "the supreme test of the truth or falsity of the teaching of these several schools, the time is not yet ripe."

Advice to the Lovelorn
By Beatrice Fairfax

What is the technique of disengaging oneself?

How break off relations with a girl you've made love to, asked to marry you, gone about with for a year or more—then suddenly have lost interest?

Is it possible, in such a case, to be both honest and honorable?

There are many ways of looking at this question. Normally, when the older ones know, the ends was simple enough. If you were not engaged to a girl, you married her, whatever change of feeling you might have undergone. Otherwise, you had to reckon with all her male relatives, possibly armed with shotguns.

"Breach of promise" used to be a pretty menacing phrase, and there's still, of course, a grim legal meaning attached to it.

Then to what degree have things changed?

I have been thinking this matter over since receiving a letter from Morris Jr. who, as you will admit, is a tight box.

"A year ago" Morris writes, "I became to go with a girl who seemed just about right to me. We had swell times during that year and how we thought we might as well be engaged, even those of us not far from eight. I was in love with this girl, in a way, even though she was not inclined to be too affectionate in public. Then I went home, and I expected to be married next fall.

"Now I've changed my mind. I do not happen on a blonde baby who drives me nearly wild. I can't think of another girl for a minute. She lets me see her every few days, and she won't permit me to call up till I have spoken my engagement to the other girl.

"For God's sake, how do I do this? Shall I write her that I've changed? I just simply fade out? I don't want to hurt her, for I am very fond of her; but I just can't live without this new kid of mine. She is as much as well face the facts. I miss have your answer."

I understand the delirium that Morris is in, but he must somehow master himself and be fair to the girl who expects to be a bride in a few months. However much he is in consideration from the boy who has changed his mind, he is the only way easiest for himself.

Merely to "fade out" in such a case would be an outrage.

It might be better to break the news by letter, if it were the right kind of letter. But the sanest and most straightforward course is to talk the matter over with the girl herself and ask her forgiveness.

Perfect frankness is absolutely necessary. She is to know that you girl, she will consent to a rupture of your engagement, however much her heart and her pride may suffer. If she is not reasonable—but why borrow trouble?

In any case, don't resist pointing out that this story shows how dangerous it is to become engaged unless there is real love on both sides. Nobody has a right to marry a girl merely like, and it is almost certain that a siren will come along, the mere sight of whom will reduce Morris to her, humdrum plans to nothingness.

From that moment on this shifting creature will be the centre of interest—and Morris will be the most ungracious and altogether detestable person. He will break his promises in order, with all possible speed, to make new ones.

This can be done, and it is by all means the best way for a man to do than to marry a girl you don't love, for the sake of whom you may even nowadays may be criticized, but be won't be considered altogether reprehensible, and you can no injury from enraged relatives. But I hope that no boy I'm interested in will ever have to inflict such a wound on a girl as he has once or even mistakenly, believed he loved.

He Offers to Teach Her to Play Piano

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Having met the pianist of a very popular orchestra, I asked him if he would teach me. He answered that but nevertheless offered to teach me all the basic chords and was willing, but we have no piano at home. I am willing to practice to make use of this chance, because I love the music and would like to do it, inheritance, since my mother plays beautifully. She has not played for five years, however, and says she would not like to resume now.

My girl friend has a piano, which she said I might use for practice, and that she has been taking lessons in a place outside of my home?

I can see no objection, having had your permission, to taking up your taking lessons from this gifted pianist. But I would not do so under any circumstances without making it known to your girl friend of your intentions. The point is that you cannot introduce this gentleman into her home without permission.

I hope that your income will soon permit of your buying or renting a piano of your own. Very often, there are pianos which may be had for storage, and without further charge. Inquire about getting one of these.

Tired of Playing Second Fiddle

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a girl who works in the same place with me. She went with another fellow. One day this boy went back to his old girl, to whom he was engaged for a couple of years. While I love this girl very much, I am not sure that she loves me, though she says she likes me. When I asked her to become engaged, she said no for a well.

Another thing that troubles me is this. She admits that she misses the other man, and then again, in the presence of other people she isn't as nice to me as she might be. When I complain of this, she gives me an unsatisfactory answer. Would you advise me to drop her, or shall I go on waiting—as she asks me to do?

"Anxious"

The position of "second fiddle" in a matter of this kind is not only humiliating, but it can lead only to unhappiness. It seems to me that you had better ask this young woman to decide between you and the other man. Otherwise, you are at all—and in the meantime, be less attentive.

I suspect that you are partly to blame for her lack of kindness and response. She cannot seem to care of you. Perhaps if you withdrew entirely, she would come to you. But it's risky to play a game of that sort without taking a chance of losing her altogether.

Ronald Colman is to be married to "The Masquerader" to be presented with a delightful stage show by the Kiwanis Club next Thursday evening at 11.15 p.m.

FAMILY SKELETON RATTLES NEW WENDEL SENSATION

Thomas Morris, penniless house-painter, failed as a pretender for his claim to $100,000,000 fortune of the late Mrs. von Wendel, eccentric New Yorker, was really incestuous child of John G. Wendel and Mary Ellen Wendel, brother and sister, it is alleged in affidavit made by Mrs. Herbert Miller, of Camp Hill, Pa. Mrs. Miller declares her father, Lewis Ellis, herb doctor and second cousin of John Wendel, was present at birth of Morris, who was turned over to Scotch family to raise in ignorance of his real parentage. If court accepts this and other new evidence presented by Morris' attorneys, he stands to inherit part or all of the fortune bequeathe by Miss Wendel to charities and institutions. Photos show Morris alongside bust of John Wendel; Ella von Wendel and dog who was only companion in last years of the Wendel home (above) on Fifth Ave.; and Mrs. Miller.

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, May 26—A demonstration of Trimaco was given by the mining section of the Toronto Stock Exchange in the closing session of the week. Some of the senior and base metal shares edged forward a little while the silver shares held their ground.

Advances of 5 to 25 cents were registered in the big gold group for Hollinger, Teck Hughes and Wright Hargreaves and Lake Shore was up 50 cents. The others held unchanged. Noranda was the strongest of the base metals, closing at 43.50 for a net gain of 70 cents.

Activity was slow in the silver group with the shares holding fast although the best trade. Both Coniagas and Wettlaufer Kerr finished a cent up at 32.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, May 26—Stock market continued its creeping progress today, the list closing with small recorded relatively substantial gains in substantial activity.

Although sentiment was noticeably improved, traders were still cautious and public participation was at a minimum. The close was steady, and the turnover approximated only 360,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Close

Toronto, May 26—Improved buying accompanied by a stiffening of prices continued in the distillery shares in today's short session of the Toronto Stock Exchange, industrial section.

The closing tone in the group encouraged the rest of the board and the result was a generally firm tone.

Walker's common was the leader with a gain of more than a point to 35 on heavy turnover. Fractional advances were also registered for Distillers Seagrams and Canadian Industrial Alcohol.

Interlisted issues reflected only partly the show of buoyancy on the New York Board. International Nickel added about 3 cents, Ford A ¼; closing at 21 and C.P.R. at ¼, but Brazilian continued its decline, touching 9¼, and closing at 9⅝ for a loss of an ¼.

HANDBOOK OF MINES

Minerals and mineral products ranging from gold to coal, the majority being actively developed, others only partially developed, and still others awaiting development—some only in all—form the basis of Canada's mineral industry, according to a handbook lately issued by the Dominion Department of Mines.

Of the sixty minerals listed in the table of contents, thirty-four are actively producing more than forty, and is interesting if producer of most of the others. She leads the world in production of silver, nickel and asbestos, is second in gold, radium, platinum, zinc, cobalt, and aluminum, third in silver and copper, and fourth in lead. The Dominion is listed in the handbook among the chief producers of aluminum, feldspar, gypsum, mica, talc, natural sodium, sulphate, magnesium sulphate and selenium.

Few countries possess a greater abundance of partially developed or wholly undeveloped mineral resources, some of which are enormous in extent. In northern Alberta occur hundreds of billions of tons of bituminous sand deposits, which the department has estimated, contain sufficient oil content to meet the requirements of Canada and the United States for more than 100 years. In Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick chiefly, and elsewhere, are found large deposits of oil shale which may be regarded as potential sources of petroleum and its products.

Barite deposits are widely distributed throughout the Dominion, chiefly in Nova Scotia, Quebec, and Ontario. Bentonite, with a variety of industrial uses, is of widespread occurrence in Alberta. Graphite, flake and Retfalf Columbia. Large deposits of volcanic dust are found in British Columbia and Saskatchewan. The chromite is found in several localities throughout Canada, important quantities having been mined during and prior to the war.

Canada possesses large deposits of clay of many types and of high quality, and has supplies of nearly every kind of stone for structural, monumental, industrial or decorative purposes.

Other minerals which occur more or less extensively, and which have been only partially developed include dolomite, diamonds, garnet, graphite, moulding sands, talc and soapstone.

The handbook contains a wealth of information in respect to the Dominion's mineral resources and the industries founded thereon. Essentially educational in nature and especially designed to be helpful to the staffs of high schools and colleges, it contains 113 pages and 17 which are devoted to a presentation of facts in respect to the coal, oil and mineral products. Five pages are given to an outline of the history and of the growth of the industry. Tables of statistics that are given; the extent of the distribution; prices; uses; and markets; exports; imports; Canada's position in relation to other producing countries; and the principal producing countries.

The handbook carries thirty-four representative illustrations of mining operations throughout Canada, and is accompanied by a mineral map of the Dominion. Copies of "Mineral Industries of Canada" may be obtained from the Director, Mines Branch, Department of Mines, Ottawa.

Rain in Ukraine

"Private cables received from Montreal contain formal reports of dryness and rain badly needed in Ukraine districts. Fields in South Russia reported full of weeds. Good rain has been received in the Ukraine but the important section of Canada, Asia, drought is severe.

Grain Outlook

Continued drought over American and Canadian northwest and especially Ukraine districts necessitate relief operations in dry areas would result of feed grains and the market may make up yesterday to the highest level in four months. Neither government nor other relief interests would confirm or deny reports widely circulated Thursday that large purchases of corn by Farmers' National Grain Corporation had been a reflection of relief operations but those who should be in a position to know claimed there was little doubt as to the authenticity of the reports.—Chicago Tribune.

Moisture

Canada up to April 1 was in favorable position as far as subsoil moisture was concerned but since that date there has been generally dry. Manitoba's precipitation during April was below normal, inches compared with 2.44 last year and 3.2 for ten year average.

Cold Storage Plants Promised if Liberals Returned to Power

Farmers Could Hold Produce Until Good Price Received

WALTER KIEHN.

Toronto, May 26.—If the Liberal party forms the next government at Ontario elections, June 19, the farmer will have cheaper funds to hold his produce until he obtains what he considers a reasonable price, Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader, has promised the farmer his party will establish such plants.

Before 1,000 persons at Barrie last night the Liberal leader said creameries had been studying the project. He said three small cold storage plants, established throughout the province, would not only use "excess Hydro power" but help the farmer obtain a better price for his produce. Negotiable receipts would be given the farmer for his products and he would be able to exchange them at once for cash.

Mr. Hepburn entered delivering two addresses a day until the election arrives and with Premier Geo. S. Henry and his cabinet ministers guarding the campaign issues, the political orgiory will increase throughout Ontario until the citizens march to the polls.

Provincial Campaign Week

Monday night Premier Henry will speak in Hamilton; Attorney-General Price, Minister of Highways, will address a meeting in Galt the same night and Hon. T. Kennedy, Minister of Health, will appear at Bracebridge. Thomas A. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, is scheduled to deliver an address at Port Hope at 8.30 and at Essex June 4. Hon. Chas. McCrea, Minister of Mines, is expected to Collingwood for a Conservative rally on May 31.

Election enumerators will complete their work tonight, according to Dr. F. A. Mackenzie, K.C., chief election officer. In a statement yesterday Mr. Mackenzie said he had fears of the municipalities that they might have to assume a share of the cost of the enumerators' tasks. He declared the entire cost would be carried by the province.

Mrs. George Henry intends to take the platform in her husband's behalf. She will speak at St. Thomas May 31 with a plea for support of the present government.

The premiers of the Liberal election campaign in the riding of Mitchell has supporters on the Liberal election manifesto. No decision was reached at Hepburn's residence but it is expected a statement of policy will be forthcoming today or Sunday night.

Two candidates at Orpington last night, Liberal, were nominated last night. Fred V. Laughton, member in the last Legislature, was chosen unanimously at London as Conservative candidate for North Middlesex, and George Belfume was the unanimous choice at Hamilton as Liberal candidate for South Wentworth.

The standings of candidates at present follows:

Conservatives	81
Liberals	34
C. C. F.	21
Independent	4
Communist	3
U. F. O.	2

Hon. W. G. Martin, Minister of Public Welfare, spoke at the London Conservative convention and challenged the opposition to point to one incident of mal-administration on the government's part. He declared the administration had a clean record during its career.

Premier Henry, Labor minister in the Liberal government of Sir Wm. W. L. Mackenzie King, charged at Iroquois Falls that the Hepburn government had displayed "incompetence and indifference" in connection with unemployment problems in the north. He described as "preposterous" the Hepburn action in having provincial police investigate labor strikes where the men asked better wages and improved working conditions.

OFFICERS SLAIN NOW BELIEVED

Evidence Found That Vicious Struggle Took Place

Merritt, B.C., May 26 (CP)—Victorious of the struggle, which resulted in the premature ending of two police officers at Canford on Wednesday or early Thursday was further confirmed today as new evidence came to light.

A piece of scalp and hair was found near the gate of the Canford Indian Reserve and was intuitively identified as having come from the head of British Columbia Provincial Police Constable Percy Carr.

Carr and Dominion Indian Department Constable Frank H. Glendenning have been missing since they went to the Indian Reserve Wednesday night to investigate the wounding by stabbing of an Indian woman.

A thick yoke about four feet long, carried by Indians over their shoulders to convey buckets of water, was also found, thickly stained with blood. Police express the belief this was used to club the officers to death.

Wide and zig-zagging tracks of the police automobile led for some hundreds of yards from the Police Reserve to a point where Police Inspector John Shirras believes the struggle began. Elaborately driving the car fought virtually to his death Police believe. Birds spot large pools of blood on the sagebrush and the automobile had been overturned by a felled tree.

Bloody exhibits are being gathered in the provincial court house here—photographed with the permission of the police from the Indian Reserve, Indian houses, and from where the car was found. They include shirts, trousers, sections of trees and sundry other articles.

Four Indians are held in jail here for investigation. Two of these have been laid in the case. One Indian is a suffering from serious wound and bruises.

A thorough search is being made for the bodies of the two officers, believed to have been thrown into Nicola River.

Unemployed from relief camps are patrolling the rapid waters of the river on both sides, throwing wire nets across it, and bridges at other strategic points.

AT THE CAPITOL

Elissa Landi in "Sisters Under The Skin"

Depicting the search of a lovely young girl for happiness, "Sisters Under the Skin," brilliant Columbia production, opens a 3 day run at the Capitol Theatre Monday next.

Elissa Landi, who has presented glowing portrayals in "The Constant Husband," "By Candlelight," and "Sign of the Cross," is cast as the young actress, Blossom Bailey, who is forced to choose between luxury and love.

Based on an original story by S. K. Lauren, adapted to the screen by Jo Swerling, "Sisters Under the Skin" moves swiftly from Park Avenue mansions to bare Parisian garrets, from great industrial centres to theatres and concert halls, from shabby hall-bedrooms to country-lanes boudoirs.

Co-featured with Miss Landi are Frank Morgan and Joseph Schildkraut. Morgan, who ranks with Lionel Barrymore, Walter Connolly and Wallace Beery as one of the great character actors of the screen, enacts the role of the multimillionaire industrialist and the weakness of his tremendous responsibilities and seeks to recapture some of the romance of his youth. Miss Landi is the epitome of his dream.

Schildkraut returns to the screen after an absence of nearly four years as the suave young conqueror who believes the world well lost for love. He first appears as the downtrodden artist pest to trade Monsieur Morgan's bric-a-brac donatas, but soon becomes a dominant factor in the life of his patron and of Miss Landi.

Enacting the important support ing parts Dorothy Peterson and Clara Blandick, cast respectively as Monsieur's secretary and maid, give his thoroughly efficient private secretary and lady companion a vivid touch in the development of the fascinating plot.

One great love that made two women! A hey Hilashore comedy with Ben Blue; "Hot from Petrograd"; a melody master, and Travels with Medbury in the Philippines are to be seen on this fine bill.

Royal Princess Wilhelmina in "Cream Pitchers" to be given away Monday and Tuesday.

Leaving tonight, Charlie Farrell, Wynne Gibson, Phillips and Ben Ham Gargan in "Aggie Appleby"—it's a riot of fun and whimsicality funster. Tim McCoy enacts the role of a daredevil news reporter who always gets his "scoop." It's a real thriller and he finally exposes the grafters and gangsters he sets out to get. Last complete show at 8.35 pm. Matinee Sat.

AT THE BELLE

Cecil B. Demille's Thrilling Romance "4 Frightened People"

Noted for providing the ultimate in screen entertainment, Cecil B. DeMille scores another big hit with his latest Paramount picture, "Four Frightened People" which is now playing at the Belle Theatre.

Story, acting, settings and direction blend to create a spellbound with one eye-filling surprise after another.

Claudette Colbert is outstanding with one of the most colorful roles of her career—that of a glamorous school teacher whom the two men consider in their way. When a wild jungle causes her to blossom into a perfect beautiful creature, the men start fighting over her.

Herbert Marshall and William Gargan give splendid performances as the marooned English chemist and the American correspondent who fight over Claudette's charms, while Mary Boland, in a deft comedy characterization, walks away with many of the honors of the picture. Leo Carillo displayed splendid ability in the role of the half-caste native.

There were no Hollywood "sets" for the lovely jungle scenes. Instead, and the real jungles in which the picture was filmed are, themselves, sure for interest and amusement.

Lew Ayres

When "Let's Be Bitzy" is presented on the same program today you will have a great opportunity to get the lowdown on the love of a beautiful girl dancer for a playboy wife trying to live on a small salary.

"Let's be Bitzy" is a story of a modern married couple who are trying to make both ends meet, the action takes place in a one room apartment in which they eat, sleep and entertain. What happens to Lew Ayres, who is starred in the picture, and Patricia Ellis, his wife, they must decide to take the advice of a friend and go "ritzy" supplies plenty of laughs and something to think about, too.

Producer Edward Gross and Universal have assembled a cast of players that will serve to make the picture highly entertaining. Frank Mottush, the man with the funny laugh, helps to support the stars, assisted with his fantastic belief. Robert McWade, as the crusty boss, has never been better. Other members of the cast are Berton Churchill, Hedda Hopper, Edward Gargan, Adrian Morris, Addison Richards, Clay Clement and a host of others. The producer Belle News, and "Beauty and the Bitzy" is a dainty screen offering in Technicolor will also be exhibited on the same program.

The Romantic Runaway

by KATHARINE HAVILAND-TAYLOR

Falteringly but bravely she told her story. Half way through the narrative he broke in to say, "But the old man was beating the child——?"

"He testified that you were not alone. He said there were two other people with you; a man and a girl——"

"He testified?" Pablito echoed stupidly.

"Yes, yes! You didn't think——?"

"I thought he was dead," he answered and for a moment closed his eyes.

Before Marcia left Lottie sought Beau. She said excitedly, "I've been listenin'——"

"Watcha talkin' about?" Beau demanded shortly.

She told him. "She's still in there," Lottie finished with a backward nod of her head. "Says she wants to tell the whole thing!"

He was on his feet instantly and after one hunted looked about the room began throwing clothing into a yawning traveling bag. Lottie sank to the edge of the bed.

"What about Lou?" she asked.

"Don't you tell her until I'm on my way!" Beau said emphatically. "Understand?" For an instant he turned to glare at her.

"There's a boat outa Santiago tomorrow mornin'," she suggested.

"That's too late."

"There's nothing else but what sails for Key West and New York."

"Oh, shut up! I don't need a nurse."

"There's a little boat sailing for the Isle of Pines. If you wasn't afraid of walkin' around there a week you might try that."

"Listen, kid, you book your own reservations. I'll make mine. Wonder if I got everything?" He looked around quickly.

"I'd hate to see you sent up, Beau."

"Say—they'll never get me!" He picked up the bag, his hat and a light coat. "So long, kid," he said. "Maybe we'll meet in hell if not before."

"We've been together a long while, Beau."

"Sure have!" he agreed. With a little emotion that made his voice rought he added, "Well, kiss me."

She raised her face.

He descended the rear stairway and stepped into the taxicab that was waiting for Marcia, smiling as he did so. The lady, he told the driver, had decided to remain indefinitel.y. "Ah!" murmured the driver. He looked over his shoulder slyly and he and Beau exchanged a fraternal, understanding wink.

But Beau's self-confidence dwindled as they neared Havana. The get-away was not going to be so easy. "Damn it," he muttered half-aloud. "This is what comes of neglectin' business. I'm as scared as when I quit Sing Sing."

The memory of Lottie's goodby clung to him, too. Lottie was a good kid, "an awful good kid." Beau reflected mournfully. "If I'd married her it would have saved me a lotta trouble." He was thinking of Lou.

CAPTER XLV

Marcia left Pablito in a mood that was a mixture of relief and loneliness and hopelessness and the he had been suffering for a crime he had not committed. Suffering she demanded caressingly. loss of the one girl in the world he loved. All these years—

Lottie came into the room. "What's the matter, honey boy?"

"I wasn't going to give Beau

"Nothing."

"You look it Beau's gone—"

Pablito looked up quickly at that.

"Decided he needed a change of air," Lottie added lightly.

"Did you listen to what we were saying?" he demanded. She answered with a nonchalant, easy, "Sure."

"Oh, he knew that," she answered, "but that woman who was here might any time. See?"

"Yes I see—"

He pulled himself up wearily and moved toward the doorway open- they're doin' on the house this his life had come too late. If Marcia Treadway had told the truth a few years earlier nothing in the world could have kept him from marrying Estelle. Now—

"Let's go over and see what they're doin' on the house this afternoon," Lottie suggested. afternoon," Lottie sugested.

"If you like," he agreed.

"Say if you don't wanta go, just say so. Nobody's going to make you do it."

"I want to all right. I'm just a little tired, I guess."

"Do you love me, Pablito? Love me a little bit, uh?"

"I've asked you to marry me, Lottie."

Her face clouded.

"I know I'm not very demonstrative," he admitted. "I'm sorry."

"You ain't much good at pretendin'," she said harshly. But he thought he was a little better at pretending than she knew.

"Be a little patient with me, will you, Lottie?" he asked, not quite steadily.

But even her love for him could not teach her patience. Soon Lottie was crying and he was obliged to comfort her and pretend some more.

"You do love me, don't you?" she said mopping her eyes and choking back the last of her sobs.

"Of course I do, Lottie," he said dully. "I'm a lucky chap and I know it."

"You'll never know how I love you, Pablo. Never!"

"You're awfully good to me, Lottie."

"Good? Kiss me, honey. Oh—not like that!"

What if he should drop his arms and say, "I can't go through with it, Lottie! I can't!" What would happen then? He had not known she would be so demanding for demonstrations of affection. He had not known that pretense could be so hard.

Estelle wrote Pablito that evening. She had to send the letter by post, because there was no chauffeur now to carry messages. She wrote:

"Dear Pablito:— It is good to write your real name without fear. Marcia has told my father and me what she has told you, too. I am so glad for you. I have not for a long while been so glad about anything.

"I want to see you and wonder whether you will want to come to see me. It has been a long time since we have met, but, remembering our hours together as I have so keenly since being here, I feel that—oh, I don't know. I can't express it.

"I hurt you horribly, I know. Perhaps if I had been stronger I would have seen some way to avoid doing that. But I want to tell you now that I love you as much as I can ever love anyone and I will marry you if you still want me to—Estelle."

Pablito reread the note slowly, his eyes blurred by the dizziness that had swept over him as he read it the first time. Then the servant appeared at the top of the stairs and behind her Pablito saw—Norris Noyes!

For a moment Noyes paused; then he moved forward with a weak groping "Pablito!"

Pablito clung to Noyes' hands. The two made the small meaningless comments people make if emotions are to great to be expressed by words. At length Pablito said, "I have never needed you so much as now—"

And even Noyes, in his humbleness could believe that. Pablito was thin. His eyes were tired and his lips were set to that grim line which tells of a vast determination and an equally vast hopelessness.

"What's wrong?" the older man asked.

"It's nothing that can be changed," Pablito assured him. "I would not even bother you about it but you know I've always told you everything—" For a moment he pressed the letter in his pocket, then abruptly his hand dropped. He had no right to press that etter for feel a shaken and ecstatic warmth as he touched it. He must write Estelle and tell her he was engaged to be married. To write her that after she had told him she loved him as much as she could love anyone!

"A man named Billings sent a note to you," Noyes said, "but I forgot it. I left it on the bureau propped before the glass but I was so excited"

"We'll get it when we get your things," Pablito said. He put an arm around Noyes' stooped shoulders and for a short moment forgot that things had a way of coming to him too late.

Lottie was assembling her trousseau —gaudy frocks and fragile underthings of orchid, peach and sapphire chiffon. Collecting this finery, she came as close to happiness as she ha dben since Pablito had asked her to marry him. Sometimes in the nights Lottie woke with tears on her cheeks. Pablito was not happy, she knew. Well, she vowed in her bravest mood, she'd make him so. But at other times she realized she did not know how to make him happy.

She went to La Merced a good deal those days. The church appealed to her and warmed her a little as she struggled to be near that embracing, comforting Someone who was spoken of so easily and often as "God".

And here among the women who knelt with devout eyes on the altar Lottie would sometimes pray ardently in her own manner: "God, I haven't gone so very straight but, honest, I promise you if you'll just give me this chance—"

She liked Noyes and called him a "good old scout," but his eyes, as they rested on her, were too frankly appraising for her comfort. She affected little mannerisms when with him. An airy "My dear," was one of her favorites. It sounded odd as she leaned forward to say, "Honest to God, my dear—"

Noyes pitied the girl deeply but was distracted at the thought of her becoming Pablito's wife.

He said one morning after Lottie had lost her temper and thrown a cup of tea at the fast disappearing servant, "Pablito, you can't marry that girl!"

"But I'm going to," Pablito said grimly. "I owe her a lot," he added more gently, 'and she cares for me. Besides, I've already asked her. The thing's done.'

"Things can be undone."

There was no answer to that. Presently Noyes went on, "I've heard that you cared for Jim Field's daughter."

"I still do," Pablito let himself say.

"Then you're not being fair to her—to Lottie."

'I'm sorry,' Pablito shook his head. "I can't talk about it. Besides, it's all settled.' '

TARZAN THE TERRIBLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Frothing with rage was the baffled high priest when he realized how neatly the stranger had turned his own tables upon him. Feeling his way across the floor to avoid the open trap, he climbed to the same window through which Tarzan had entered an hour before and which now was Ludon's only exit. Outside, he decided to bide his time until treachery should accomplish his design. "The she-devil," he muttered, "dearly she shall pay for defying Jad-ben-Otho's high priest."

Later, in his own quarters there came to him the startling news that the king was murdered and fighting against Mo-sar, the pretender, was raging throughout A-lur's streets, led by Ja-don. "Ja-don!" muttered the high priest, "The fools will make him king if we do not act quickly." Soon messengers were speeding from Lu-don to raise the lie that Ja-don sought not only to wrest the throne from the dead king's daughter but that Ja-don, blasphemer that he was, would destroy the priests and hurl down the altars.

He called his trusted underpriest. "Saw or heard you anything of the white she we had imprisoned in the Temple of the Gryf?" he asked. "Only that Ja-don took her to the palace," answered the man, "after threatening the priests that hindered him. Where she is now, I know not." Lu-don thought a moment, and then said: "Ko-tan ordered her to the Forbidden Garden. Go there, Pan-sat, and bring me news." Behind the curtained aperture a hideously masked priest hid, listening to every word.

As Pan-sat moved across the chamber to obey, the hidden figure withdrew into the shadows of a nearby passage. The former went his way in ignorance of the silent creature following him as he hurried toward the secret passage from the temple of Jad-ben-Otho to the city beyond. The way led along the corridor which ran parallel with the face of the cliff for some distance, and then Pan-sat, taking a lighted cresset from a niche, turned abruptly into a small apartment.

50 YEARS A MARTYR TO CONSTIPATION

But Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Brought Welcome Relief

Read this splendid letter from Mrs. Haynes:

"For 50 years I have been a martyr to constipation. Have tried every remedy under the sun.

"One day I read an account of some one who had been relieved by ALL-BRAN. I thought 'What was the use of me trying anything more when all else had failed?'

"A while after I read it again. That time I thought I would try it. It would do no harm anyway.

"I broke with a small dish of your ALL-BRAN for breakfast, and wonderful to say, I never need to take any physic at all now. How I wish other sufferers from constipation could be persuaded to try ALL-BRAN. Mrs. Haynes (address furnished upon request).

Tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN relieves 'Spring fever' and 'fall fatigue' as well as regular habits. Also iron for the blood.

This "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. It's so much safer than taking patent medicines! Two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's daily are usually sufficient. Severe cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Get this delicious ready-to-eat cereal from your grocer. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

The Umbrella Bearers

Two Members of the Large Umbrella Family.

One of the most interesting as well as important, of the botanical orders is that of the umbelliferae or umbrella carriers. The name comes from the way in which blossoms are borne on stems that radiate like a tube top of the flower stalk in umbrella-like form. It is usually a flat-topped cluster formed by stems radiating from a point at the top corresponding at the stalk to give the spreading effect of an open umbrella.

Carrots, parsnips, parsley and celery are the chief garden vegetables belonging to this family. Among the flavoring dill and anise of this way are represented, and in the flower garden the blue lace flower, sidicous corallas, and the popular wild flower, Queen Anne's Lace are the common. The last mentioned is valued for its beauty for cutting for its airiness. In the well-regulated garden, because of its spreading properties.

The vegetable "umbrellas" are grown for the roots, the leaves and the parsnip are both biennials which, the first year, bloom while the roots are formed. Occasionally, however you will find a parsnip which was not dug up in the spring, in bloom and displaying its yellow umbrella; the carrot is not hardy enough to stand the winter cold, and consequently grows only as an annual.

The caraway and the queen Anne's lace are characterized by the umbelliferae bloom. Among those that are not so distinctive in the way of umbrella, are fennel, a coarse member of the family, which, when allowed to mature, is a resemble a thistle rather than an umbrella.

The old-fashioned myrrh or sweet cicely of the old-time garden, grown for its pleasantly scented foliage, is another member of the family. Roots which furnish drugs, and the poison ester of the tropical varieties. It is thought that Socrates committed suicide by means drunk in another species.

Coriander, cumin, and the lacelike beliferae family are interesting not practically unknown to some of the flavoring oil and extracts. The carrot is a dance, the parsnip a pastiness, caraway, cumin and parsley a petroselinum.

Animal Almost Exhausted by Twice Swimming River

Gananoque, Ont., May 26 (CP)—A doe was on the farm of Clifford Cheetam today recovering from the effects of a wild chase by cogs and exhaustion after swimming the St. Lawrence twice.

Dogs bounded the doe and a book into town yesterday where the buck shook them off and escaped but the doe was forced into the river where it swam to Island Tremont Park. It was forced back into the water by boys who tried to catch it. It swam to the town again where men had to assist it ashore.

The dog suffered a cut foreleg and was taken to a pet in Cheetam's farm until it recovers.

Business entirely regarding the building of a new road have been handled through the commercial for weeks, and when it was told recently that work would begin on Tuesday of this week few paid much attention. However, a party of the surveying men surveyors made their appearance and it prophesied by many that the work of staking again a course for the road. Several acre of stakes have been placed in a line for the new road ran almost in a line from the canal to the A. Wannamaker property and from there to the Sidney Rosebush and another ran from the canal across the Hine property to meet the present road in front of the Dennis Home. Only a few days it would be possible to announce the most recently-proposed course.

Carrying Place has a new attack of lagrippe and a cold which develops and into pleurisy. Mrs. Lawrence Johnny Buchanan its dangerously ill at the home of her son-in-law Mrs. and Mrs. John Buchanan Mrs. Buchanan is a daughter of the late Mr. Dr. C. A replay of the Cardenville-Longmore game will be played next week of the Thursday evening. Cardenville has an array of splendid shorts and sweaters and with the accumulation of stick which is more evening ladies of the community are looking forward to the time when they can form a ladies' softball team and to hold an initial game. Several have suggested a girls' team has been suggested, but until the present no one has taken the steps needed to organize. Playing against a team of boys who delight to see the fun, the ladies were defeated on the evening's play, but the players were by no means dampened, and their determination to win again is as strong as ever. After a few weeks of practice it is thought the ladies will have this girls hope to be able to give an account of themselves against the boys' team in the vicinity. Without any male representation the Ladies' Aid Mission League this year. Carrying Place should support the team on their part of the girls.

The work began a week ago the cleaning began when a number of workmen with the congregation met at the church and after the cleaning had been done placed a row of shrubs along the front of the church and the church school, set up a rustic bench at the front, pulled down and cleaned the sheds, put up a new coat of overhauling, washed seats and windows, and in fact did everything required and beat the large rug from the floor. Most of the work during that time Messrs. Walter and Bill Miller of Consecon, painters and decorators have been at work with the high ceiling and walls of the interior. Formerly painted green, the new colour is to be cream with cream, with the idea that such a change may make the lighting better. What You Should Know About Houses

A Weekly Feature Service Supplied to the Canadian Press by Home Builders' Service Bureau, 177 Jarvis St., Toronto 2

Perhaps Some Panelling

In libraries, dining-rooms and living-rooms, panel work is very appropriate. If a walnut finish is required, but found to be too expensive, red figured gumwood is an excellent substitute, as when stained and finished it is almost identical. To avoid shrinkage, it should be purchased in three-ply woods.

Oak For Flooring

Oak is the accepted wood for finished flooring. The various grades are classed as first, second and third. Widths vary from two inches to one and one-half inches to three and one-quarter inches, with thicknesses from three-eighths to one and one-quarter inch.

Wide oak board flooring demands a greater momentary outlay but its attractiveness is an asset, especially in hallways and living-rooms of high type homes. The effect of a pegged floor is achieved with these boards by countersinking the sinking the screws and driving wooden pegs over them to cover the heads. Pegs are carried somewhere reduces sound, the process, as a rule, is unnecessary.

Painted Floors are Distinctive

The various types of patented hard floors on the market are all composed of short lengths, pegged, tongued and grooved, with a groove valve against dampness; laid in mastic material 1-4" thick, a bond is formed between the sub and finished floor. In a herringbone or basket pattern they are very attractive and will resist the additional cost.

If a floor other than wood is required, the owner would be well advised to confer with the architect or builder regarding the merits of the various compositions on the market.

Plenty of Cupboard Space

Outboards in the serving pantry and kitchen are usually of pine, with either glass or wood panel doors.

With careful management a comfortable amount of cupboard space in the construction of cupboards generally; built-in bedroom wardrobes requiring special doors to be waived in favor of ordinary doors and shelves with pole. Aromatic red cedar closets are a splendid feature of the perfectly equipped home and if lined at the time the house is built the cost is little more than for the usual kath and plaster finish.

When You Choose Your Windows

The architectural style of a house governs, of course, the type of window. If casement windows are the choice they should swing outward to ensure weatherproofness, and if used in conjunction with roll-top screens the difficulty of opening screen before unfastening the window will be overcome.

Where leaded glass windows are called for, the frames may be of wood or steel, and care should be exercised that the leaded cams are sufficiently reinforced. With steel casements an important detail is to make certain the frames fit snugly into the walls and are well caulked. Usually, during the early stages of construction, and before the interior trim is installed, these steel frames are built into a house. The cost is higher than for wood casements.

West Stockbridge, Mass., May 28—(CP)—John Powell has found and how to keep the neighbors' chickens out of his garden.

Almost Unbelievable

S. J. Manchester, Registrar of Vital Statistics for Ontario, found the Quintuple birth unusual he could scarcely believe the news report.

"Dr. W. A. Dafoe, demonstrator in obstetrics at the medical department of University of Toronto, said it was the first time in his experience he had heard of such a birth. Dr. S. L. Boyd, Dr. Dafoe's colleague at the birth, is his brother.

"It is a world record," said the Toronto physician, "and as far as I know there has never been a quarter counted here.

It was believed Mrs. Dionne could not have more children under the will of Charles A. Millar. The estate, valued at $1,000,000 and at $630,000 to the woman bearing the most children in the years after his death in 1936, as this bequest was considered eligible only for Toronto mothers. Executors of the will could not be reached immediately for comment.

King's Beauty

Ottawa, May 28 (CP) — The mother of five children born to a North Bay woman may be eligible for the "King's Beauty" at 200 pounds, it was learned at the Department of Secretary of State today.

Qualifying provisions for the beauty specify number of triplets. If these regulations are fully met, the North Bay mother, who is estimated they saw no reason why the five quintuplets should not be eligible also.

Another certificate of the parents must be received by the Secretary of State, together with a certificate of medical attendant, it was stated, a declaration the mother is in need of assistance and a birth certificate the children were alive. The latter must be signed by the head of the Secretary of State and forwarded to London, Ontario, through the Department of External Affairs within three months of the birth of the children.

Toronto, May 28—O. S. Sprague, an executor of the will of the late Charles A. Millar, who bequeathed an estate valued at $630,000 to the woman bearing the most children in the next 20 years, said today that in 1926, said Mrs. Dionne was not eligible, since she was not a Toronto and that it applied only to Toronto mothers.

The babies had not yet been weighed, but Dr. Dafoe said they produced and each of the crying quintuplets passed the five pound weighed. Their total was 13 pounds, six ounces with the first born baby 2 pounds, two ounces.

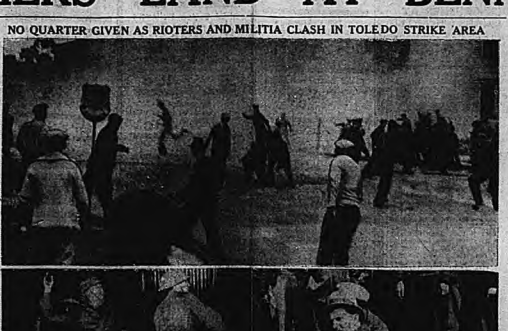
While a newspaper photographer clicked his camera, the two tiniest registered two ounds four ounces.

While a newspaper photographer clicked his camera, the two tiniest registered two ounds four ounces.

Millar Will Allows Only Toronto Mothers Eligible

North Bay, Ont., May 28 — Mrs. Oliva Dionne was waiting within a few miles of Callander, Ontario mine—south of here gave birth to five girls this morning. All were healthy and chirping, said Dr. A. R. Dafoe, Callander attending physician. Mrs. Dionne is 25 years of age and had previously given birth to four children.

Toronto, May 28—Birth of 5 daughters to Mrs. Olivia Dionne near Callander, Ont., is the first quintuple birth in Canada, so far as he knows, Dr. F. C. Koser, General Secretary of the Canadian Medical Association said today.



"If it is not a world record, it is a Canadian record, so far as it can recall," said Dr. Koser today. "At any rate I would say 'congratulations' to the mother and father."

NO QUARTER GIVEN AS RIOTERS AND MILITIA CLASH IN TOLEDO STRIKE AREA

Top photo shows part of the crowd of 7,000 strikers and sympathizers at the Electric Auto-Lite company's plant in Toledo, O., running for cover after Ohio national guardsmen had tossed a barrage of tear-gas bombs into the mob. Several were killed and many injured when the militia tossed bombs and opened fire after the crowd had pelted them with bricks. Lower left shows a guardsman tossing back a brick bomb into the mob of strikers and sympathizers; lower right, George Stuhey, striker, is down just after he had been shot in the battle with the guardsmen. He later died of the bullet wounds and loss of blood.

SIMPLE RITE FOR JURIST

Late Justice Garrow is Laid to Rest at Goderich

Goderich, Ont., May 28 (CP) — Extreme simplicity marks the preparations for the funeral of Mr. Charles Garrow, Justice of the Supreme Court of Ontario, whose remains arrived here at noon.

Six of his eldest friends acted as pallbearers, Mayor C. C. Lee, ex-Sheriff R. C. Reynolds, Geo. Williams, John Gall, R. G. Hays, Jr., and Dr. Harold Taylor.

Maitland Lodge A. F. and A.M., another lodge of the deceased, met the remains at the station and accompanied them to Maitland cemetery, where the interment will take place. Wor. Bro. H. C. Dunlop, Past Master of the lodge, read the burial service, while the religious service was in charge of Rev. J. H. S. Mills, Rector of St. George's Anglican Church of which Hon. Mr. Garrow was a member for many years.

Scores of old friends met the train and accompanied the cortege to the cemetery, although nothing in the nature of a public ceremony was planned.

Five of his immediate family accompanied the remains from Toronto, his son, James Garrow; his brother, Alan Garrow, his son-in-law, Dr. Ferguson, and Justice Young, all of Toronto, and his nephew, James Stardart of Detroit.

The lack of ostentation is in accordance with what is believed "Charlie" Garrow would have preferred. His innate simplicity is what his old friends like to think of as marking him as one equipped, mentally, for more than ordinary distinction among his fellow men.

Hopping Atlantic Ocean Fliers Land at New York

Rossi And Codos Make Successful Voyage

POUR OUT GAS

Brooklyn, N.Y., May 28 (AP) — The French flyers, Rossi and Codos, brought their tran-Atlantic plane Maurice Le Brix in a safe landing at Floyd Bennett field at 1.38 p.m. E.S.T., today.

They appeared over the field from the northeast at 1.22 p.m. and circled the airport three times, drawing gasoline in preparation for landing.

They came down in a long graceful glide and rolled their big plane to a considerable distance before bringing it to a stop.

The flyers, Paul Codos and Maurice Rossi, left Le Bourget Field in Paris Saturday. They had planned a 6,100 mile flight to San Diego, to break the world's non-stop distance record.

The message to the navy said that a radio communication from the French plane had been intercepted at 6.55 a.m. E.S.T., informing the "New York" that the plane had landed.

The intercepted message was in French.

Paris, May 28 (AP)—Madame Maurice Rossi cried with joy today when she was informed that her husband's plane was reported over Eastern Canada.

With tears in her eyes, she said:

"Naturally we are greatly relieved that they are safely over the Atlantic. It had been a long night and terrible for we have been kept in close touch with the news and today has brought happiness that the worst part of the trip is over."

"Nelson of Japan" Dying From Cancer And Other Diseases

Tokyo, May 28 (AP)—A nation's sadness was centred today upon a simple wooden home in the heart of Tokyo where Admiral Count Heihachiro Togo, Japan's hero of Tsushima, battled for his life against cancer and other diseases.

The 86-year-old "Nelson of Japan," who commanded the annihilation of the Russian Grand Fleet in 1905, was fully conscious but physicians admitted his condition was not critical.

By George Hambleton

Geneva, May 28 (CP Cable) — France wants the Disarmament Conference to continue, regardless as the situation looks, Louis Barthou, French Foreign Minister, at the Steering Committee meeting this afternoon declared France was prepared to use every effort to bring the work to a successful conclusion.

Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary, is here with similar ideas hoping to bring about some sort of compromise averting actual breakdown. But the British hold no definitive plans, and neither have the French.

Church's Tribute to Late R. J. Graham

At the service in John St. Church yesterday morning a tribute was paid to the memory of late Mr. R. J. Graham who had been for many years one of most devoted church members. The Rev. Robert Hall paid sentimental reminiscences of many friends of Mr. Graham when he said that Mr. Graham's passing meant a great loss both to the congregation of John St. Church and to the community, and announced that the responsive reading "For the Souls of the Righteous" from Proverbs would be read at the funeral.

Miss Leona Riggs sang a delightful solo "With Verdure Clad" from the creation by Joseph Haydn.

SISCOE PLANT IS DESTROYED

Bush Fires Threatened Destruction of Village in Quebec

By the Canadian Press

Bush fires fanned by high winds threatened destruction of a village in Northern Quebec and caused considerable damage in Northern Ontario timber limits over the week end in a series of outbreaks which spread terror in the light-ning-like rapidity with which they spread.

With no rain for over a fortnight in Northern Quebec the bush was a veritable mass of tinder. The Stanley-Siscoe extension plant in the Siscoe Gold Mine area was destroyed by flames and the village of Provencher, 15 mile west of Rouyn-Noranda was evacuated by scores of its 300 residents who moved their effects to Rouyn. A small sawmill was gutted in no time.

Flames raging in the Campbell's Mills and Meteor Lake district were fought by 150 men who lent aid of Ontario Forestry Department gas cars. Sniffaway from as far as Sudbury was rushed in. Ole and Hornepayne fought fires in the Timmins area there also fires along the trans-Canada Highway on the north shore of Lake Superior close to the Pancake River work camp.

The annual parade will be held at Belleville next year.

TRIPLE MOVE

R. E. Newman, Chesterville, Becomes Pastor at Holloway St.

Rev. Harold R. Neal, minister of Holloway Street United Church for the past four years, has accepted a call to St. John's United Church at Campbellford, succeeding Rev. R. C. Tait, resigned. The Rev. Mr. Neal in Belleville will be the Rev. R. E. Newman of Chesterville, Ont., who has filled that charge for seven years past. In an additional move Rev. R. C. Tait, Campbellford, was tendered the call to Chesterville and has accepted.

News of the three moves was announced here today. Mr. Newman comes to Holloway Street from the Ottawa-Montreal Conference and Mr. Tait replaces him in the Montreal Conference. The triple change is the result.

Effective July 1st

Changes are effective on the first of July.

Rev. Mr. Neal's departure from Belleville will be a matter of regret for he has been a faithful worker in the church and in the community. Born in Holloway Street fulfilled the ministry of that church in other pastorates. In this work, among his people he was helped by Mrs. Neal, who has been indefatigable in the interests of the development of the work of the church among the members and among the younger people and the children. Rev. Mr. Neal was fortunate in his student days at Toronto College in being brought into connection with Rev. Dr. Peter Bryce, with whom he served as student and after graduation for a term of five years at Owen Sound.

Mercy Dash to Save Writer's Life Won by United States Navy Plane

Baltoa, C.Z., May 28 (AP)—The United States Navy apparently was the winner today in its dramatic mercy dash by air and sea to save William Albert Robinson, writer and explorer stricken by appendicitis.

Brought here by the U.S. Destroyer Hale from the lonely Galapagos Islands, 1,000 miles away, Robinson lay today in the army hospital. Physicians believe he will recover.

His bride, the former Florence Crane, Chicago heiress, who dispatched wireless appeals for aid when Robinson was taken ill, said he suffered "tortures of the damned" before two naval planes arrived with surgeons.

The Robinsons were on a honeymoon cruise in a small vessel when the attack came a week ago, with no medical aid at hand.

Three Inch Gash on Right Temple Pool of Blood in Cart Baffle Police

Mystery surrounds a severe injury sustained by Harve Adam, Amelasburg, this morning, who was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital suffering from a blow on the right side of the head that had rendered him unconscious. Adam, who is a farmer residing in Amelasburg, was found lying in a democrat in his feed house about 7.30 a.m. today by his four year old son, his head being soaked over in a pool of blood and a gash fully three inches long above the right temple.

Fortunately Dr. VanDerven of Consecon was in the nearby vicinity and immediately rushed to the scene of the accident. After rendering first aid the injured man was brought to the hospital in the city ambulance. Adam was still unconscious at noon today and was suffering from a slight concussion, although no information relating as to whether he had sustained a fractured skull or not was available.

What actually happened prior to the time the boy found his father sustained the severe blow on the head completely puzzles the police. Mr. Adam rose at his usual early hour of 5.30 a.m. and went to do his morning chores. What attracted his attention to the fact that the feed house could not be revealed by his four year old son, who stated that his four year old son, his head being soaked over in a pool of blood and a gash fully three inches long above the right temple.

HARD TO PROTECT NEWLY LAID WALKS

Men on the city concrete crew engaged at present on the work of repairing and replacing sections of worn and broken sidewalk throughout the city are finding their troubles many and varied this year in keeping the new work protected until thoroughly set in. Swarms of children following up the new work have been in their element of late in tramping in and running their fingers through soft concrete. Mischief and nerve have also been unwashed and dug into the work. Residents, however, have been admitted that action may follow repeated warnings.

RAIN IS NEEDED IN THIS DISTRICT

Although field crops throughout the district have shown considerable gain during the past few weeks following the refreshing rains and warmth, a fresh supply of moisture is needed by Mr. G. W. Mickel, federal seed inspector of the local Dominion office, according to an unofficial survey made by him through the area. Rain is needed badly at the present time to counteract the heat of the sun. And to hasten the natural growth of all crops. Although well known farmers believed last winter that a surplus of moisture would be left in the ground owing to the heavy frosts and deep snow, the view was not shared by Mr. Mickel.

"The frost really helped dry the land. In the spring, with the ground still frozen to a considerable depth, surface moisture was unable to penetrate, and ran off quickly, leaving the ground dry underneath. It is still very dry," he added.

ROCK CRUSHER AT QUARRY STARTED

Pouring out the graded sizes of crushed stone at the rate of 60 or more yards per day, the rock crusher at the city quarry had commenced work in earnest this week, with a full staff of quarry workers on hand. It is expected by city engineer Chas. A. Most that a total of 5,000 yards, and often thousand yards of the stone will be needed to complete the necessary work this year when throughout the city this season. A quantity of the rock will also be needed for the stock pile to use as required.

LAY SILLS IN RECORD TIME

Mr. Herb Carter, contractor in charge of the work connected with the rebuilding of the executive offices of the city treasurer, tax collector and the department of assessment in the lower section of the city hall demonstrated today that there is more than one way to skin a cat or lay a heavy window sill. Faced with the task of placing the stone sills which weighed too much for men to attempt to lift into position, Mr. Carter called a stone service truck into play. Lifted by the winch of the truck into place, the sills were laid in record time.

BUSH IN NORTH TINDER DRY

With the woods and bush of the back sections of Hastings County tinder dry at the present time, the ever present summer threat of fire in the wooded sections has now assumed serious proportions, according to a Maxo Township resident. Mr. Ernest Clare, who visited the city today, declared that in his section is considerably drier than has been noted in previous years. Only a spark is needed to start a disastrous fire. Campers and pedestrians are being warned, regarding the throwing of lighted cigarette stubs along the road sides. Fire warnings are also being tacked up by departmental officials. Several minor fires have been started but were quickly extinguished by vigilant residents.

CANDIDATES WILL ADDRESS WORKERS

At chief speaker of the evening, Mr. W. H. Ireland, ex-M.P.P. for West Hastings will address members of the Co-operative Workers' Association at the regular meeting being held in the Y.M.C.A. rooms on Tuesday May 29. The meeting will be called at eight o'clock and will be open to all interested citizens. Mr. W. E. Newman and Mr. Art Young of this city will also address those present. Interment was made in St. James Cemetery.

On the platform with Adjutant and Mrs. Martin, were Major Frances Brown of London, England, and Mr. and Mrs. Heinz, of Sechr.-Judge, of the Chamber of Commerce, who so ably presided over the musical part of the programme.

The gathering opened with the majestic hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" followed by prayer and Bible reading, led by the Corps Commanding Officer.

During the specially arranged interval, Major Frances Brown, who has served for many years on the Indian Field, Miss Pickle was called upon to address the audience on the subject of the missionary, social and slum work of the Army.

Very vividly Major Brown told of the phases of Army work which are maintained by the Army. Social Departments, and sketches were drawn of the leper colonies in India and Africa, the homes embankment, the slum work in East London, and the work of the Army in all parts of the world-wide social work.

Such similar work is carried on extensively by the Army in Canada, it was stated. Enormous offering was given for the assisting of the local campaign. Mention might be made that the Belleville Tag Day on Saturday last, realised 113.00, a slight advance over last year. Took Place in Community

His removal from Belleville means his resignation from the Board of Education of which he had been a member for four years. During the past five months and also his dropping of his post on the unemployed relief board, on which he has been very active.

Holloway Street Board passed a resolution at the last meeting regretting the impending departure of Mr. Neal from Belleville and urging him to reconsider as the various organizations of the church are now in full swing. However, Mr. Neal announced his decision to accept the Campbellford charge which was

HORSE THEFT IS REPORTED

Six Youths Apprehended After Chase By Officer

Shades of Jesse James, and the wild and woolly west of days gone by when horse-thieving predominated and was a most crime that was punishable, was brought to mind in Belleville yesterday morning, when the first case of the theft of a horse was reported to local police in many years.

Early Saturday morning, Constable Hamilton, Cannifton, drove into town with his horse and buggy, driving on to Bridge street behind the Belle Theatre. Some time later the animal and buggy were seen driving northward on Station Street by Roy Cooke, Foxboro, who recognized the outfit and hailed the driver. Immediately the boys became frightened and jumping from the buggy and on a nearby retreat, that is all except one, who was caught by Mr. Cooke, who in turn informed the police of his findings.

After bringing the horse and buggy to the police station and questioning the lone rider caught in the buggy, the police ascertained the names of the remaining five boys and soon had them in custody in the station house. Upon questioning the lads at length the police discovered that the boys had untied the horse at the rear of the local livery barn and set out for a ride. Sergeant Scott apprehended the five youths and the boy who had been finally rounded up Chief Kidd took charge of, made a severe reprimand before allowing them to return to their respective homes. Two of the lads at present being out on local parole, parole, Chief Kidd assured the press this morning that the youthful horse thieves would later be arraigned in the local juvenile court and thus the matter in this morning that the youthful horse thieves would later be arraigned in the local juvenile court and thus the matter

Police News

A rather quiet week end was enjoyed by local police circles since Friday night only two small accidents and a couple of inebriates disturbing the peace.

On Saturday evening two small motor accidents were reported in the city, one of which while proceeding east on Victoria Ave. a car driven by Mr. M. Moorman, 8 Maple St. collided with a parked truck, damaging the glass in a door of the Moorman automobile. Slight fender damage only resulted when an automobile driven by Mrs. R. J. E. Graham, Trent Road collided with another car at the corner of Bridge and Front Sts. Both accidents were very trivial and amicably settled.

Mr. W. Mackie, 52 Chatham St., complained to the police that a large dog attacked him near his home early Saturday evening. The canine tore Mr. Mackie's trousers and inflicted a slight wound in his leg. The wound was dressed by Dr. J. J. Robertson. The owner of the canine was warned by the authorities to keep his dog confined to his property.

Rector Believes Heaven Will Unite All Beings

Canon Shatford Tells of His Beliefs on Happiness to be Found in After-Life

Montreal. — Expressing his strong belief that every human being would eventually be gathered into Heaven, and that the whole world would be re-united in God's happy family, Canon Allan P. Shatford preaching to a congregation that crowded every part of St James the Apostle Church, discussed the reasoning that convinced him that there would be a re-union with the departed. He asserted that when death changed the human form, that personality, memories and associations and love would bridge the gulf, that those feelings would continue to exist in the spiritual world, and all would be re-united with their loved ones no matter how long they had preceded them into the other world or what spiritual advancement they had made in the intervening years.

NO PHYSICAL FORM

Canon Shatford discussed several of the problems that troubled people, such as involved marital relations, pointing out that all physical feelings would give place to spiritual things, and there would be no embarrassment, finally pointing out how it was possible on earth to have spiritual communion with those who had gone before.

Basing his address on the text "God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect" he pointed out that the Easter season drew aside the veil which separated this life from the life to come and bade them consider the life of those who had passed out of this existence.

PECULIAR IDEAS

He commented that some people had peculiar ideas about the Hereafter, and mentioned that he had, after Easter, received two very violent letters, one exceedingly abusive, which said he had better spend his time thinking about things on earth rather than in thinking about things in the Hereafter, that all talk about the Resurrection and future life were mere speculation, mere guesswork.

Canon Shatford said this was absurd because man had always been seeking after the unknown, for that was the secret of all progress. If they thought only of what they knew, their thoughts would have a very limited range, because there was so much unknown and so little known, and it was only by seeking to find out about the unknown and the future that man made any advance forward

"I bid you to think for a little while about that other world, about the people who have gone there and what our relationships with them are," he said. "No matter how impracticable some people may think it, you cannot stop the question of the human heart and I dare to say that there is no question in the world so urgent, so persistent, so universal as the question: "Where are our loved ones and what are they doing; and what is the hope of our meeting them and recognizing them hereafter." Every aching heart is asking that question and where is there a heart without that ache. If we can find out anything that will bring comfort and assurance to those sorrowing hearts it is our bounden duty to do it. I am not idly speculating. I want to present to you what I think is a very reasonable outlook upon the whole matter. I shall not dream idle dreams, but tell you only what has convinced me, and what has come to me out of that unseen world which makes me so doubly sure of reunion with our loved ones in the Hereafter. All life is immortal, there is no such thing as death. It is only a change of form—death in the sense of complete stoppage does not exist anywhere in the universe. Nothing is destroyed, every bit of energy in the universe lasts for ever, it is indestructible, it cannot possibly be destroyed.

PERSONALITY SURVIVES

"And so if all life is immortal does it not seem absurd to suppose that human personality does not survive the shock of death? And then there is that great longing that we all have to meet our loved ones in the Hereafter. That very longing is a proof of the possibility of its happening. We are immortal, we do survive, and the only question that may be in doubt is in what shape or form or manifestation we survive. We shall go on but how shall we go on? Shall I be myself in the future life or will there be such a change in me that nobody will be able to recognize me and will there be such a change in the people I love and knew on earth that I shall not be able to recognize them. That is one of the problems that troubles the human heart, so let us think reasonably and sensibly about the matter.

"Personality is the greatest thing in the universe—it is greater than energy, greater than matter, greater than any cosmic force that there is—everybody recognizes that personality is the supreme creation, the supreme achievement of God—will He then preserve matter and energy and not preserve personality? Personality must survive, it would be contrary to reason to say anything else.

ASSOCIATIONS SURVIVE

"If personality survives its associations must also survive, for personality is made up of memories, of associations, of love, of all the things that pass between human beings. If I survive and appear in the other world without memory, without my loves, without my associations, with nothing of those things that made my life here it will not be me that is there, it will be somebody else. I will be so changed that my individuality will be completely destroyed. No, every bit of reason seems to suggest that your personality with all that goes to make it must survive. If you strip away from your life all the influences which come from contact with your fellowmen what a poor thing it would be. The richest thing in life here is association and contact with others, and do you mean to say all that rich association which piles up from my experiences with others here is not to be carried over the gulf of death? Why it is the only thing that can be carried over. You cannot carry over material things, no stocks or bonds or wealth or anything of that kind—the only things are the things that are spiritual—your memories, your associations, your loves, all the experiences of a spiritual kind you have with your fellow men, they go over with you because they are part of you. And when you arrive therefore you must arrive with those things that make your personality, and others also arrive there with the same accumulation of memories and associations and is it not therefore more than probable that we shall immediately recognize and reunite and reform our associations and is it not therefore more than probable that we shall immediately recognize and reunite and reform our associations and come together in bonds of closer and sweeter love than we ever knew here upon earth? All that I know about personality here in the world convinces me that that must survive, and that therefore relationship with others must be part of the life Hereafter."

RE-UNIONS AFTER

Discussing problems with regard to re-union in the other world Canon Shatford then went on to deal with the fear that some people had that those who had preceded them many years before would have made so much spiritual advancement, stripped of their physical being, that they might be clean out of sight. "Differences in spiritual conditions do not hinder our associations together," declared the preacher. "If that is true here on earth why should it not be true in the other life.

"I am perfectly sure my daughter is going ahead spiritually in the other life, but you could not convince me in a thousand years that any advancement or spiritual development will put her so far ahead of me that there will be no recognition. I am certain that all her spiritual improvement will only make her the more eager to find me when I arrive. So these changes and advancement do not necessarily put a barrier between loved ones in that other world.

MARRIED RELATIONS

"There is still another problem that bothers people, the problem of married relations here on earth. Supposing a man or a woman is married twice, they say, what is going to be the condition in the other world, are they going to be re-united, is there going to be recognition, won't it be embarrassing for them in the other world? They asked Jesus the same question, and he told them that in Heaven there is no marriage or giving in marriage. Everything is spiritual, and whatever is spiritual in the relation between that woman and her two husbands will survive—all the physical drops away and to be perfectly contented and unembarrassed.

"And so when we meet on the other side, whatever has been spiritual in your relationship with others will immediately claim its place in your soul. Whatever was coarse, or low, or mean, or physical will have dropped away you will look at these persons with different eyes, so there will be no embarrassment."

Turning finally to the problem that he said bothered some people about reunion, that if they went there they might miss some people who might not go there, Canon Shatford said that many a mother's heart had been tortured about that—how could she possibly be happy in Heaven if any child of hers was not there, how could she enjoy the other world if someone whose company she enjoyed failed to get there?

ALL TO GET TO HEAVEN

"Personally I do not believe that anybody will fail to get there," declared Canon Shatford with emphasis. "I think that in the final consummation all will be there, that God will be All in All. In His own good time He will bring us all there.

"Always remember that God loves with greater love than ourselves and if God misses one out of His kingdom He is unhappy until He gets him there. His love is unwearying and He goes seeking on through the years until He finds him and brings him home. Cannot you trust these things to God? Do you not think that God wants all His family there more than you do. I have confidence, I do no worry about these things—that unwearying, unfailing love of His will at last bring them all home, and God shall be All in All, my text brings us this message 'that they without us shall not be made perfect.' How could the Hereafter life be perfect without our loved ones. We cannot be made perfect without them. Of course not. Our loves, our memories, our associations, our happiness, depend upon them, we shall be made perfect together.

"And in the meantime it is possible for us to have reunion with them now. It is possible to enter into spiritual communion with your loved ones now. If you cultivate the spiritual instead of thinking so much of the body and the flesh, if you think more of the soul and of the mind, cultivate the spiritual eye, you will some day see them spiritually. You can enter into communion with them now just as you can have fellowship with Jesus, and so by the strengthening of those bonds of unity between them and us which exist now we shall come to a lasting union in that great Day of Unveiling.

"I know beyond the peradventure of a doubt that she is close to me and that often we have spiritual unity and association, and therefore I look forward to the day when all imperfections will drop away and we shall know as we are known. Now we know in part, then we shall know perfectly. All the difficulties will be finished, all petty jealousies will have gone, and the irritations dropped away and we shall come into a bond of fellowship and union, one great happy family in God with Jesus as our elder brother."

Baxter Has Three Leading Ladies in "Such Women Are Dangerous"

If you're a man and want to learn how to fight off the advances of three lovely damsels, by all means see Warner Baxter in "Such Women Are Dangerous", starting at the Belle Tuesday, matinee daily. And if you're a woman you'll certainly want to see it to learn how best to make advances on a charming novelist.

Not that Baxter is altogether successful. But his suave sophistication, and who can play such a role better, serves him well in most dilemmas. It isn't until he gets into serious trouble that his usual defenses desert him. That leads to an unexpected climax that introduces some excellent serious drama into the picture. But we wont go into that too deeply lest we detract from your enjoyment of a delightful picture.

Baxter is at his romantic best in this, his first starring vehicle. Surrounding him more or less are three lovely leading ladies: Rosemary Ames, Rochelle Hudson and Mona Barrie. Miss Ames is his faithful secretary who tries with scant success to protect him from the others. Rochelle is the infatuated debutante who tries to storm the citadel of the novelist's by the sheer impetuosity of her attack. It is she, incidentally, who gets Baxter into serious trouble—a murder trial, no less. And Mona Barrie exercises her more mature charms with studied sophistication.

All three come through with splendid characterizations. If Rosemary Ames tops the others, it is only because her part is the most sympathetic. Henrietta Crossman contributes her usual polished characterization as Baxter's aunt. Herbert Mundin gives things a comic twist as Baxter's butler.

In the secondary roles we must mention the excellent work of Lily D. Stuart, Irving Pichel, Jane Barnes, Matt Moore, Richard Carle, Murray Kinnell, Frank Conroy, Fred Santley John Sheehan, Addison Richards and James Burke. Such an enumeraton suggests that the supporting cast is excellent. It is. And the picture is well worth seeing. Don't miss it.

NOVEL FILM PARADE

J. Stuart Blackton's glorious spectacle "Film Parade", is a special screen vehicle prepared to celebrate the screen silver anniversary introducing a procession of favorite screen stars of the last twenty-five years including John Bunny, Wally Reid, Charlie Chaplin and many others in a novel and original screen vehicle consuming thirty minutes of time in its presentation. The Belle latest News Flashes will be exhibited on the same program.

TWO FEATURES TONIGHT

Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall, Mary Boland and Wiliam Gargan are appearing at the Belle tonight for the last times in Cecil B. DeMille's "Four Frightened People." Lew Ayres, Patricia Ellis, and Frank McHugh are featured in "Let's Be Ritzy."

AT THE CAPITOL

Elissa Landi in "Sisters Under the Skin"

Coming to the Capitol Theatre today, "Sisters Under the Skin", brings together three of the screen's outstanding players —Elissa Landi, Frank Morgan and Joseph Schildkraut— in a modern romance of a woman who seeks happiness in a penthouse but finds it in an attic. Her loyalty holds her to the man who can give her everything, but her heart asks for the other who can offer her only love.

Elissa Landi plays Blossom Bailey an actress, the woman who figures in the triangle. This is another in the series of important roles which have been responsible for Miss Landi's recent rise to popularity. After a brief interlude during which she was mishandled and miscast, she staged a remarkable comeback, in "The Warrior's Husband", "I Loved You Wednesday", "By Candlelight" and "The Masquerader". In "Sisters Under the Skin", Miss Landi is again given a colorful, dramatic role in line with the upward trend of her recent vehicles. Two leading men support the glamorous Elissa.

The sauve Frank Morgan is one of them. He is cast as the millionaire Yates, who tries to find romance at the age of fifty in an affair with Miss Landi. Morgan belongs in that category of actors who always turns in a "top" performance very often eclipsing that of the star. Some of Morgan's recent appearances include "Cat and the Fiddle", "Secrets of the French Police," "Luxury Liner" and "Half Naked Truth".

The romantic lead is played by the dashing, debonair Joseph Schildkraut. Schildkraut is a colorful screen personality. He is the perfect, dark-haired, foreign type of romantic screen leading man. In "Sisters Under the Skin", he plays a composer, Zukowski, a temperamental, vivid character with whom Miss Landi falls in love. Famed for years on the screen and stage, Schildkraut was greatly missed by movie audiences during a too-long interval when he remained out of pictures. A prominent role in the forthcoming "Viva Villa" and his part in "Sisters Under the Skin" promise him greater screen popularity than ever before.

A big Vitaphone Comedy with Ben Blue and several selected short subjects together with this excellent feature will afford a program of unusual merit.

Cream pitchers will be the special gift for Monday and Tuesday.

FRENCH MUSSOLINI?

COLONEL DE LA ROCQUE

A French political figure who is reputedly gaining in power is Colonel de la Rocque, head of the Croix du Feu, an association of war veterans decorated for courage under fire, which flared into prominence by staging a demonstration before the French chamber of deputies after the Stavisky scandal, bringing about the bloody Paris riots of February 6. Political observers believe that should France ever have a dictator of the type of Mussolini, it will be Colonel de la Rocque, shown at the head of a column of his followers at the Joan of Arc day celebration in Paris.

RUMANIAN COUP

Marshal Alexander Averescu, a former premier, who is said to have agreed to form a military cabinet which will rule Roumania, if the purported plan of King Carol goes through. Carol's plan was to place his country under a military government similar to that imposed upon Bulgaria by King Boris, last week. In preparation for the coup, it is reported that Mme. Magda Lupescu has already left the country. Her departure was said to have been one of the conditions under which the veteran diplomat and soldier would attempt to form the new cabinet. The Tatarescu ministry, now in power, is expected to resign shortly. If plans materialize, Roumania will become the 11th nation in Europe to desert constitutional right and become a dictatorship. Marshal Averescu is a close friend and administer of Premier Mussolini of Italy.

Plymouth De Luxe 4-Door Sedan

"BUILT BY CHRYSLER"

The Best Engineered Car in the Lowest Priced Field!

PLYMOUTH sales are gaining by leaps and bounds. Registrations of new Plymouth cars in Canada for the month of March were over three times the sales of March last year.

There can be only one answer to this—Plymouth owners are talking to their friends. They are enthusiastic about the way Plymouth performs, proud of its appearance and satisfied that they bought the best car in the lowest priced field.

HYDRAULIC BRAKES are one of the sources of their delight in driving a Plymouth car. They stop the car quickly, smoothly and they never become unequalized — never cause swerving. Hydraulic brakes are the simplest type of brakes and require no lubrication—seldom require adjusting. They are the safest brakes made.

THE PLYMOUTH ALL-STEEL BODY is the greatest motoring protection you can give yourself and your family. It is all steel reinforced with steel . . . all the parts electrically fused into one shock-resisting whole . . . it does not rattle . . . cannot rot.

FLOATING POWER ENGINE MOUNTINGS banish engine vibration — one of the greatest sources of driving fatigue. The Plymouth motor is cradled in its two rubber mountings which are scientifically placed so that the engine absorbs its own vibration. No engine vibration can reach the passengers.

INDIVIDUAL FRONT WHEEL SPRINGING is found in even the lowest priced Plymouth. Plymouth is the only car in the lowest priced field that gives you individual front wheel springs. It is the same type of springing that is used in some of the world's highest priced cars.

INDUSTRIAL REVIVAL IS HERE

With the recovery which has so far been manifested there is of course that class of citizen who doubts and continues to doubt. But appearances would indicate that the doubter is wrong and that being wrong he is losing opportunity to help himself and others by joining in the upward swing.

Now if anyone's voice on the question of revival should impress the doubter as well as the believer in progress and recovery it is the voice of Dun and Bradstreet's, Inc., which points to a genuine and lasting recovery, nearer than at any time in the past year. Trade movements this financial review points out, are growing more strong, the volume of goods moving being much larger week by week. May sales have been from eight to twenty per cent in excess of the sales for the year 1933. Employment is expected to hold at the current level for the coming summer, the highest since 1930.

Now there is another good sign. It is well-known that the British are taking a supreme interest in the development of Canadian markets, and, in the Bay of Quinte section where the Commerce Crusaders were organized reflections of this interest are shown in shipments of produce of Quinte canning factories, cheese factories, orchards and farms to Wales with the exchange of Welsh coal for the return shipments. Now from reliable sources information has come that possibly twenty-four British factories will locate in Canada in the near future. This is of interest to Belleville for one of the leading members of the Crusaders is authority for the statement that "The Central Ontario Commerce Crusaders are in touch with the situation."

Belleville Chamber of Commerce which created an enviable record during the dull days of the depression by bringing new plants, and watching with a benevolent eye the sturdy character of the industries here which like good ships weathered the gale at the time of which the world has spoken, is optimistic for the acquisition of new plants. The Chamber is working steadily to this purpose development of Belleville on a solid industrial basis.

In a survey not all interpret alike the trend and some fail to see a trend until the trend is so marked that everyone is believing it except the doubters. The man who is of value to his community and to his own family is the man who can who can interpret the signs as they appear.

Lastly then is a local sign.

One of the best evidences of coleman is the announcement of additions for which contracts have been let to extend the American Hardware plant on Coleman Street to make it one of the largest industries in Canada. The work of construction, alone involving many thousands of dollars, is a very important item for the various trades will profit by this undertaking but there is the other value—the promise of larger staff of employees to man the largely increased plant. The American Hardware Corporation has felt the pulse of the present day and finds every sign of industrial convalescence. This is significant.

WAR LESSON IN THE SWAMPS

If the great nations of the world would take a peep into the South American jungle where two nations are drawn up like with what of men, arms and ammunition they can muster to crush one another, they could in a faint way see themselves as they might appear in a future great war.

Over all is seen the folly of warfare. Not a great nation but thinks these nations are fools to scrap over territorial rights in a jungle. Not one of the great nations could but see a way to untangle these peoples and put them on a pacific basis. But the Paraguayans and Bolivians being in it of course could not see it so.

And the great powers are right. It is a sorry silly mess, and yet in these quarrelling nations there is the undoubted talk of the development of men's spirits by blowing their bodies into atoms or riddling their vital organs with metal.

It seems strange, that to a neutral war looks like the supreme folly and yet there are possibly some powers which would precipitate their countrymen into war to settle an imagined insult or to satisfy ambition, because they would be in war.

Of course no one denies that even a lamb must try to put up defence if attacked, but when the League is working most effectively, the nations ought to see fully written all over Mars.

Surely the sentiment of peace will in time gain sway so that the agitator for war will be the one who is in danger, not the peacemaker. Of course fears are the great foe of international amity. The world wants security in order to wag on its peaceful way.

Broad roads, narrow roads—roads that wind and swing,
Winding like a ribbon through the forse and pine;
Up hill, down dale, by the lonely sea,
Little paths of heart's delight calling out to me.

Summer days, sunny rays, and freshness in the air,
Murmuring of streamlets, greenness everywhere.
Posies in the meadows—birdies in the trees,
Buttercups and daisies—woodland melodies.

Dry days, wet days—days when lambkins played
Over all the smiling land—mound and moor and glade.
Piping of the blackbird, drone of homing bees,
Wren and robin redbreast trilling on the tea.

CHICAGO CERTAINLY MAKES THE PEOPLE PAY—expensive at times, like the greatest fire since 1871 when the Widow O'Leary's cow put the light out with her left hind hoof and at the same time started an illumination which will high wiped the Chicago of that day off the map and cleared the ground for the newer and greater Chicago which was to be. Saturday Chicago opened its greatest World's Fair, after a dress rehearsal last summer which was eminently successful. Toronto manages to keep on the Front Page too, with her 'full kind hoof and at the same time started an illumination which will outshine all previous efforts. Among the biggest and brightest stars to appear on Toronto Centennial stage thus far were Lord Bessborough, Governor-General of Canada, and Mary Pickford, screen idol. Toronto Star hints that the vice-royalty was not too pleased with having to take second place to the screen star, but then it should be taken into account that Mary Pickford was born in Toronto, and if that does not entitle her to wear the purple, what does? Vice-Royalty is all right in its place but Mary Pickford, born in Toronto, is royalty itself—queen of the May is Mary.

MONTREAL, BEING A SEAPORT, sees many strange sights not possible in inland places. A steamship has just arrived from Australia, the Canadian Challenger, of the Canadian National Steamships, with a rather odd cargo. She is followed by the S.S. Canadian Constructor of the same line, with a similar cargo. In the cargo of the Challenger are 6,500 bales of wool, five hundred tons of beef hides and nearly four hundred tons of calf and sheep skins. She also has a number of rabbit skins and a consignment of catskins, the latter coming from China, and transhipped via the Panama Canal. Tea and porcelain were from China and Japan, pongee silk and toys from Japan, four hundred bags of lentils from Chile and coffee and nuts from Brazil are included in the cargo, also jam, vinegar, condensed milk, eucalyptus oil sausage casings, peas, a large quantity of fruit pulp, tinned rabbit, canned pineapples and Kauri gum. Of special interest is the fact that the cargo includes a consignment of some thousand tons of onions, part of a shipment of fifty thousand sacks from Australia and New Zealand. The onions will be distributed through Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, a satisfactory demand having been created by an experimental shipment of seven thousand sacks of Australian onions brought over last year. This is the largest shipment of onions to arrive at the port of Montreal and the largest shipment from the Antipodes. The onions enter free of duty as a result of arrangements made at the imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa, while a duty of one and one-half cents per pound is imposed on the same product of other countries such as the United States, Spain Egypt, and Chile, from which the bulk of the Dominion's requirements have been obtained in the past.

TENDERNESS OF WOMEN IS PRAISEWORTHY

Emotional Nature is a Great Asset To Woman

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

The quality of a woman that has always appealed the most is her "heart"—her emotional make-up. he women who have been most written and talked about since history began are those men could raise the best children nor bake the best loaf of bread; it is The woman who has been most ally man by great deeds whom the world has applauded.

By making such a statement I am not attempting to belittle the value nor the necessity of woman's purely domestic attributes. Nothing, for instance, is as noble as motherhood properly handled and, further, because a woman is a good mother, she should not conclude by reason why she should regularize her emotional allure and its power to a place of secondary importance.

The joys that women have given through their tenderness, understanding, kindness and the alleviation of suffering have, for centuries, been heralded as outstandingly praiseworthy. Women have been admired for their chastity and for their fidelity, and for the fact that they have their moral standards been maintained.

Intellectual pursuits as such, do not make the ultimate appeal when they appear in women as they do when they appear in men. This does not indicate that women are intellectually inferior to their opposite sex. But the world realizes that, in the last analysis, it is the emotional nature rather than purely intellectual ones that have made and will make for the most worth while.

Women usually supply better than men what the world needs most. No matter how an institution may, by odd in inventions, comforts and other material pleasures, the heart hunger suffers, all these other riches come to naught.

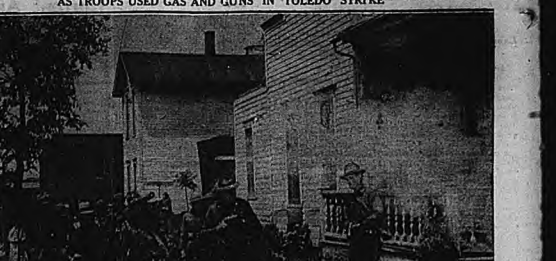
If one could possibly conceive of a world inhabited by women only, it is evident that it would be a much harsher and more ruthless place than it is today. Women tend to be a far tender nor display their deeper emotional instincts as much as the world solely made up of women. Undoubtedly, the best qualities that men possess are brought out by the presence of women, while the finest in women's character is brought to the surface through the love of men. One sex softens the other. The interplay of the two produces a tremendous balancing factor.

Yet it often seems that women have grown to a tremendous influence which they have on manhood. Men are often to their detriment they try to imitate men. Let women cultivate their femininity at all ends and that it constitutes their greatest attribute.

Even when a woman has achieved unusual success in some non-feminine field, the world still is interested in what kind of a husband or lover any many children she has and how she brings them up, whether or not she is happy with her husband and whether she has in any way been instrumental in inspiring him to great deeds.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Since wholesome dough is usually a disease that runs into a few weeks and vomiting may be frequent, most children become weak and emaciated because of insufficient retention of food. Milk, strained cereals and broths should be given, as they are highly nutritious and easily digested. If possible, eggs, poached or soft boiled, should be added to the diet and even roast chicken and tender beef can fine or scraped. Home-made ice cream is likewise desirable and, what's more, the patients find it most refreshing.



DR. T. CARSCADDEN GALT EDUCATOR DIES

Galt, Ont., May 26 (CP)—Dr. Thos. Carscadden, M.A., LL.D., veteran educator of this city and one of the grand old men of the profession in Ontario, died during the night at the hospital in his 87th year.

He had been in failing health for some time but was around as late as last Sunday. On Tuesday he was removed to the hospital. He had the remarkable record of 54 years as a teacher, 43 of which were spent in Galt, for 30 of which he was principal of the Galt Collegiate.

He resigned that post in 1914 but continued as assistant until 1924. Thousands of pupils, some of them famous men throughout Canada passed through his hands.

WHAT IS HOME WITHOUT A GARDEN?

NOT TRANSPLANTED — TRANSPLANTED ONCE — TRANSPLANTED TWICE

Tomato Plant Technique

Growing tobato planta at home is not only an economical way of securing them for transplanting later in the season, but is a very simple task, and one that will be enjoyable because it brings the garden indoors when the inclement weather makes outside work distasteful. It also gives the gardener a chance at the newer and choicer varieties that are now regularly stocked in the plant market.

The quantity of plants desired will determine the method of planting. For those who are interested in a very few, a flower pot will do, but for most a small box strongly wired or braced to withstand the bulging caused when the soil is best. It can be made at home from scrap box boards or any kind of crating material, or simply a cigar box will serve the purpose. Seed should be sowed in rows about 2 inches apart. Sow thinly, so that when it comes time to transplant the little seedlings will not interfere with each other. Crowding of any kind will cause trouble.

Regulate the temperature so that neither extremely hot or extremely cold conditions can prevail. The soil should not be allowed to dry out, although a water-logged condition will be worse. A uniform moist condition at all times is best.

Successful tomato growers know that transplanting is essential. It is a good idea to have the boxes ready for this and when the seedlings reach a height of 2 inches, or have developed two true leaves, they should be carefully moved to small paper or clay pots. A good fibrous root system is developed in this way, as well as stockier plants to withstand the wind and rain of the coming garden.

It is often a good plan to set them out in the open on warm days, as they require a lot of good clean air and sun. This procedure helps offset the spindling that might result from too mild an atmosphere. Light, sun and air is the rule for tomatoes.

About six weeks are required to bring the tomato plants to a point where they may be transplanted into the outside garden, using the date of the last killing frost as a guide. Any fairly well-drained rich soil is best. It can be made at home from scrap box boards or any kind of crating material, or simply a

If so they grow they are reported in large numbers and will develop into larger plants as the illustration shows.

BUSY WEEK IS LOOKED FOR

Parliament Has Some Interesting Legislation Before it

Ottawa, May 28—(CP)—Parliament has the prospect of a lively and varied week before it as it resumes its sessions today. The Marketing Bill is the first order of business in the House of Commons and while it was dogged with steady opposition on its previous appearances there is a belief it will make better progress today. A number of sections remain to be approved in committee of the whole.

When the Senate resumes its sittings it will receive the report of the Banking Committee on the new shipping bill, the most voluminous piece of legislation of the session.

Included in the shipping bill is a clause calling for a new Canadian Mackinaw with a large green maple leaf replacing the Canadian shield on the blue of the present flag.

Ranking with the shipping bill in importance from a legal standpoint and, like it, lacking in material for political controversy another bill is due for discussion in the Commons this week after the marketing measure. It is the new Companies Act, which provides for stricter control over the incorporation and operation of companies which sell stock to the public. Little opposition is expected for it.

French Flyers Near N. Y. on Way to West Coast after Flight from Paris

If Successful Will Be New World's Non-stop Hop

ATLANTIC BEATEN

Encountered Dangerous Fogs Off Banks of Newfoundland

Oly John Leblanc, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Halifax, May 28 (CP) — Her mighty engine roaring a song of victory, the silvery monoplane bearing Paul Codos and Maurice Rossi soward far-off California sped past Canada's Maritime Provinces early today in its race with the sun across an ocean and a continent in search of a new world's non-stop flight record.

Hurtle of the Atlantic had been met and conquered in the darkness and for had dropped behind France 3,000 miles behind— and the Joseph Lobrix was pointed now for the last stretch of the 4,100-mile journey from Paris to San Diego.

Early this morning it was nearing New York, well past the dangerous Atlantic coastline. The flyers gave their position to the east coast radio signal service station at Amherst Island at 4.30 a.m. EST as 46.00 degrees north latitude and 64 degrees west longitude, which would place them over the border between three Scotia and New Brunswick.

Only Terse Message

They sent only a terse message asking for radio bearings, and they gave no details of their condition. But it was believed they were following the shore line, cutting over New Brunswick and skirting the Maine Coast on the way down to New York.

They had crossed the Canadian Atlantic seaboard in the dawn after flying in darkness through the thick fog that blanketed the New-foundland coast all night. The leap over Newfoundland proved the most hazardous part of their long hop, and the pair found trouble in guiding the great plane past the island.

The piloting is difficult. No visibility," read one of the wireless messages intercepted at 11.00 p.m. EST last night before they headed through the fog bank then. After that there was only silence, for hours.

Then at 2.50 a.m. the Marconi station at Glace Bay, N.S., picked up signals as the aviators talked with a French station. At 4.15 the Radio Corporation Signal Service station at Canso spoke with the fliers and then they were lost until they headed down the Northumberland Strait.

Five minutes later the Amicosti land operators exchanged greetings with the aviators and obtained their position.

Only Few Remained

Up until then, apparently, the pair had encountered no difficulties except fog. Their big powerful motor was humming steadily through the long flight, and there was plenty of gasoline aboard. When the Frenchmen took off from Paris early Monday morning they carried enough fuel for around 60 hours flying.

Just for the stretch off Newfoundland, the weather had been ideal, and clear flying weather was indicated for the Canadian coast stages at least, of their journey. Bright and starry silver plane sighted as they soared past New Brunswick, and a light easterly wind helped the plane's speed.

MAN DROWNS IN BATH TUB IN OWN HOME

Eight Meet Violent Death in Week-end Accidents

ONE TAKES LIFE

A number of Bodies Found, Who Have Been Missing

By The Canadian Press

Eight persons met violent death in Ontario week-end accidents. Automobile accidents took four lives. A child died of burns. Two men were drowned, one in an overflowing bathtub, and one died from poison, believed to have been self-administered. In addition authorities found two bodies of two persons drowned previously.

In London seven-year-old Phyllis Wright was fatally injured Saturday, when she was struck by an automobile driven by Rev. William Crosby of Bloomington, Ill. Mr. Cuttip was charged with criminal negligence, Frederick H. Simms 61, a Toronto street car conductor, was injured fatally Saturday night when he stepped from a street car into the path of an automobile.

John Jacob Hopper, 21, of Toronto was fatally injured yesterday when his motorcycle collided with an automobile. Frank Kyng 45, a gardener, was fatally hurt Saturday night in a collision between his bicycle and an automobile driven by David Anderson of Milton. The accident occurred at Cooksville.

Near St. Catharines Walter Dayton of Grantham Township was drowned Saturday night, when his automobile plunged from a highway into the Welland Ship Canal. The other drowning victim was Louis A. Rodmyer, 30, of Kitchener. Members of his family found his body submerged in an overflowing bathtub at his home.

Body Found in Water

In Toronto the body of Ernest Reid 44, was found in the Don Valley. Beside it lay an empty bottle that had contained poison. In his pocket was a note reading: "I couldn't stand it any longer. My poor sister." The significance of the second sentence was not established.

Nine-year-old Jessie Johnstone of Simcoe died in hospital Monday from burns suffered Saturday night when her clothes caught fire as she watched a bon-fire.

At Sarnia, Elias James was accorded a military funeral yesterday after his body had been found from Marysville, Mich., where it was found in the St. Clair River. James and his companion, Fred Williams, had been missing since last May. It was they attempted to cross the St. Clair River in a row boat. Both were members of the Sarnia Indian Reserve.

From Hamilton Bay yesterday police recovered the body of James Mitchell 21, of Paris, Ont. He had been missing since May 16, when his clothes were found on the shore of the bay. He was said to have suffered from a nervous disorder.

NEW OFFICER NOW ON BEAT

Traffic Officer Sam Erwine to Patrol Highways 14 and 37

Due to an increased amount of motor traffic in this district another Ontario Highway Traffic Officer was detailed to patrol certain highways running out of Bellerville recently. On Saturday Motorcycle Patrol Constable Sam Erwine, late of the Barrie district, arrived in the city and will patrol Highways Nos. 14 and 37.

This officer comes to Belleville highly recommended by the department, having previously patrolled Highway No. 2 near Whitby and for the past five years has been attached to the Highways in and around Barrie. The officer will have as his beat the highways from Picton to Marmora from Belleville to Madoc and also to Tweed.

According to information given out by the Highway Traffic Department this officer will likely be stationed at Marmora and will patrol the new highway No. 7, and adjacent roads in North Hastings.

Both Constable Byles, who patrols Highway No. 2 locally and Constable Erwine reported on increased amount of traffic during the week end but few accidents occurred. With the advent of warmer weather and motoring facilities the traffic officers were kept busy over the week end.

Hepburn Says Reform Economy in All Affairs is Liberal Platform

No Minister Will be Allowed to Hold Office in Companies

DRIVE OWN CARS

Hydro Management to be Thoroughly Overhauled, is Claimed

Toronto, May 28 (CP)—Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader, promises the citizens of Ontario that Hydro system will have a new management if the Liberals are elected at the Ontario general elections, June 19. In a statement of policy, the Liberal leader declared no member of his cabinet will be permitted to hold directorships in any companies.

The statement issued Saturday and its highlights were:

A new management for the Hydro system.

No cabinet member will hold corporation directorships.

There will be no increase in the public debt or in expenditures.

Administration costs will be cut in half without affecting government efficiency or Mothers' Allowances, Old Age Pensions and other social services.

Hydro salaries, Liquor Commission costs, activities of the lands and forests and Ontario Provincial Police department will receive full publicity.

Relief will be made to inaugurate unemployment insurance and reasonable wage scales and hours of labor.

Mr. Hepburn emphasized that the Liberal party would concentrate its efforts during the campaign for the jobless, and improving living conditions through forming industrial standards and preventing "abuses."

Strive for Revival

The statement pledged the Liberal party to strive for a revival of timber activities. Mr. Hepburn charged that the province's forest resources had been "grossly mismanaged." Agriculture would be given every assistance and the Dominion Government would be urged to increase export markets by lowering trade barriers.

Under a Liberal regime there would be regulation of home markets, wholesale markets and there also would be cold storage plants, warehouses and the milk, fruit and vegetable industries would be regulated to benefit the producer and consumer.

The statement charged the Conservative government with alternately "buying the electors with their own money" by expending public money lavishly on the eve of the election. Under a Liberal government, Mr. Hepburn said, there would be "financial reforms" in the spending of public moneys.

The statement declares the government pledged highway aid last year as an "economy step but with the coming of an election it proposed to spend $20,000,000 in building roads, awarding contracts for political reasons and giving thousands employment "until after the vote."

In further reference to election expenditures, the statement forecast "the politically-minded Hydro-Electric Power Commission will be spending a million and a half on its publicity, besides the thousands wages in the government camps that have been, increased to aid in the amount paid during the winter months, and even if this has been made a little more generous."

On the provincial debt, the statement continued: "It has increased to $410,000,000. Hydro had reduced electrical rates, the assessment rates and the system generally mismanaged.

ENUMERATORS UNQUALIFIED CHARGE MADE

LEADERS TOUR

Hepburn Goes to North While Premier is in Hamilton

Toronto, May 28—(CP)—Six political meetings are scheduled for today as Ontario party heads continue their speaking tours of the province for the Ontario general elections, June 19. Premier Georges Henry will speak tonight at Hamilton while Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader, delivers addresses at Kapuskasing and Smooth Rock Falls.

Two of Mr. Henry's Cabinet Ministers will appear on the platform in appeals to the electors: Hon. W. G. Martin, Minister of Public Welfare, addresses meetings at Fenelon Falls and Robcaygeon while Hon. Dr. J. M. Robb, Minister of Health, will appeal at Galt.

Mr. Hepburn spoke at Midland and Orillia yesterday before leaving for his northern tour. While he was on his way north, Frank Regan, C.C.F. candidate in Toronto St., Davids, issued a challenge regarding, what he said was the Liberal "slush fund" from Beauharnois. Mr. Regan said if Mr. Hepburn was unable to state how the alleged $600,000 slush fund was distributed he could tell him where he could find a memo containing the "whole information."

Intimation of an injunction might be issued in connection with the activities of enumerators in Toronto. Riverdale riding came from E. A. Carroll, official agent of Robert A. Leslie, Liberal candidate. He charged that enumerators were "not qualified and are careless". Names had been left off the lists, he added, if it continued his client might seek an injunction.

Mr. Carrol said 250 names had been left off the lists in 13 subdivisions. He alleged he had information that the enumerator's lists had been drawn up on "the recommendation of the executive of ward one Conservative Association despite the fact the Returning Officer is sworn to-be-impartial." He said enumerators were relatives and children or relatives of "well paid" civic employes.

DR. W. SPANKIE DIES AT 74

Conservative Member For Frontenac-Addington Well Known

Kingston, May 28—Dr. William Spankie, Conservative member for Frontenac in the House of Commons for Frontenac-Addington died in the Kingston General Hospital at 1.15 o'clock Sunday morning. He was 74 years of age and had been ill for some time.

The funeral will be held under Masonic auspices at 2.30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, conducted by Rev. J. W. Stephen, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Interment will take place in Cataraqui Cemetery.

Dr. Spankie was born in Kingston Oct. 17, 1859, son of William Craig Spankie, of Scotch descent, and Margaret Ann Lankire, Irish descent. He was educated in Kingston private and public schools, the Kingston Collegiate Institute and Queen's University, obtaining his degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1882, and the degree of M.D. in 1885.

He settled at Wolfe Island after he graduated and he later was selected Public School Inspector for the county, a position he held for 26 years. In 1913, he was elected Reeve of Wolfe Island, and the next year was chosen Warden of the County of Frontenac.

For sixteen consecutive years he represented his township in the County Council of Frontenac, retiring from municipal politics to accept the Conservative nomination after the death of Hon. Dr. J. W. Edwards in 1926. He was successful in the by-election, and the next year at the general elections he defeated Samuel Sinclairmore, Liberal, by 2,371 majority.

Dr. Spankie was Coroner for Frontenac since 1901 and was one of the most learned of medical graduates of Queen's University. He was a member of the Medical Council of Ontario since 1901, and a Past President of both the Ontario and Dominion Medical Councils. He had one daughter, Mrs. R. M. Kennedy, and four sons, Dr. W. E. Spankie, Dr. A. T. Spankie, R. M. Spankie of Calgary and H. Spankie of High River, Alta. The sons residing in the west are in business.

Mrs. Kennedy also resides in Calgary, where the two sons who followed their father's profession also make their home. Dr. Spankie's wife died six years ago.

Dr. Spankie was one of the last of the old-time country doctors. While on Wolfe Island for forty-five years he attended families to the third generation. His practice extended over an island twenty-two miles long. He had several narrow escapes while attending the sick in winter time, while driving over ice-bound bays and rivers he was nearly drowned when his horse and cutter broke through the ice. A son was with him on the latter.

A strong and powerful man, Dr. Spankie tossed the son on to strong ice and managed to pull out of the water. He also was a noted boxer and runner in his younger days.

On one occasion he was called to attend an blinder, ill with pneumonia and he had to construct a tent from bedclothes to keep the snow out of the little shack in which the sick man lived. On his return journey he was lost in the storm and found himself on the ice of the American channel opposite Days Wharf, N.Y.

after year.

In the city house filled with scarth brought back from a trip into the country, or bought at a nominal cost from a florist, is sufficient equipment to start a child's interest in growing things. With a little encouragement he will become enthusiastically absorbed in it.

But don't force a child's interest. Just start it, garden yourself, talk about it and become obviously absorbed in it, and pretty soon the children will take an interest, and be as eager to experiment that they will demand the chance.

A Garden for the Child

By Lisa Grenelle

Few things are so propitious to the love of a child as the possession of his own garden, with full reign of planning and scope for his initiative.

The growing of things is not only fascinating—constantly varying and ever-new—but as a diversion it is distinctly constructive and creative, bringing out in the child the most desirable qualities, such as protection, forbearance, patience, application and development of initiative and taste.

It also tends to give him love and understanding for beauty and coloring, and a proper respect for the difficulties of producing and tending a living creature until it reaches full size. What is more practical, it gives him a reason to remain out of doors for many hours at a time, offering the best sort to stimulate his own growth.

It costs little to provide a few feet of brown earth, and even a window box is not to be scorned if nothing else is feasible.

Wild Flower Gardens

But let your child, either boy or girl, enjoy and suffer under the responsibility of full decision and execution. Don't direct or even advise him unless he asks for it. Let him experiment and make his own mistakes—always a sound theory and in this case particularly harmless.

If his treasured plant withers from neglect or ill-advised attempts to help, he'll be better care of the next one. Let him, if he wishes, be secretive, to prevent information about planting or care from spoiling for himself a second tragedy.

Best of all, I think, for children are the wild flower gardens. In these they must do everything from the start—find the plants and transplant them. This entails expeditions and affords a reason for long tramps that will prove very educational if you arouse the child's curiosity by the alertness of your interest.

Buy him a wild flower book. They are very cheap. Encourage him to make his own scrapbook of cuttings, leaves and pressed flowers, with his own notes and comments as to where found and how grown. He will take great pride in this when once started and will learn more than any teacher could teach him in school.

Praise His Efforts

As incentives, show your own interest and praise his efforts; offer perhaps a prize for the child who finds the greatest variety of specimens—encourage the children of the neighborhood to form a wild flower club, meeting once a week for picnic tramp.

Transplanting small shrubs and trees is very good for the older children. It is exercise and fresh air and an interesting art, not too difficult for the child to master, and how satisfying to his pride, as he sees his little trees grow larger year

Rouge Pads "Retired"

(The Beauty Box)
Maureen Sullivan
Lips and eyes carry the make-up this today.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Rouge pads are on the retired list. Haven't you noticed how many girls have lost their rosy cheeks? Or are wearing those bestowed by Mother Nature?

Along with this change of the make-up set-up there is renewed interest in complexion powder that carries a bit of flesh tint. Not pink, oh! mercy no! that would be too quaint. But that delicious, lovely blend of flesh and ochre which is the natural color of the perfect complexion. Not as yellow as the tea rose, not as pink as the bride rose, a color marriage of the two of them.

Mother note: fuschia shades of lipsticks are coming to the fore. Enchanting tones like rich Burgundy wine are used by the brunettes. Blondes look best with lip pigment that is a blend of red and gold. Look over the cosmetic counters. New waves pop up there every day.

Circulation may not appeal to one as an interesting beauty subject, but we have to get down to beauty principles now and then.

Every woman needs enough exercise to keep her blood streams on the go. If she does that the skin, the complexion is pale, texture of the skin poor. Hair does best where circulation is active; it lives on the capillaries of the scalp. Finger nails require it if they are to display good color. And as beauty depends upon digestion, get exercise for the tummy's sake.

Superfluous hair on the legs produces a strange moire like pattern when chiffon hosiery is worn. The growth should be removed, or heavier hosiery worn. Doesn't look pretty.

Depilatories dissolve the hair at that point where it emerges from the skin. There are various forms of chemical hair removers. They do the work satisfactorily. Pop's old razor isn't a good idea, goodness knows! Anyhow, there will be trouble if he catches you. Men very fussy about razors.

Weddings

MURRY—HADLEY

Stirling—A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday afternoon at five o'clock in St. Johns Anglican Church by the rector, Rev. A. H. McConnell, when Blanche Alma, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hadley of Stirling, became the bride of Eric Mumby, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Murry.

The bride, who looked charming was becomingly gowned in floor length of triple sheer crepe with a navy coat over blue and white floral dot dress, with blue picture hat and tight grey suede shoes and wore a corsage of Carolina roses. The bride was attended by Miss Mary Fraser of Belleville, who wore a coat of blue triple sheer crepe over white floral dress with white accessories and corsage of Talisman roses. Mr. Allen Hadley, brother of the bride supported the groom. Immediately following the ceremony, a wedding supper was served the immediate relatives of the contracting parties after which the bridal couple left by motor for Toronto and other western points. On their return they will take up residence in Stirling.

Fickleness a Good Sign in Child

Frequent Changes in Friends Indicates a Normal Growth

By LISA GRENELLE

Have you had occasion to be at first amused, then disturbed, and finally a little chilled by rapid changes in the personnel of your childs intimates?

In first this little girl your daughter's "best friend," then that; and in another month at most does a third little girl stand first in your child's affections, while former favorites fade out of the picture so entirely that not even their names seem to be remembered.

Does this mean that Jacie is naturally shallow: that she is not loyal, and will never be emotionally stable? That perhaps she cannot get along for any length of time with anyone? Surely that would be distressing!

But it doesn't mean that. Possibly Jacie is too shallow to "sub noose" comfortably with any one pal for any considerable period; but it is more likely that she is just a healthy, alert little girl, hungry for living and experience, growing rapidly, developing normally.

New Experiences

This is good in a child, although a bad sign in an adult. While it does not allow of adjustment, instability and shallowness if a grown person constantly changes friends, it shows nothing of the sort in a little girl. Again, it is not on speaking terms with his pal: year's buddy, this follower that he "wears a chip on his shoulder", is disloyal and difficult, but it may mean nothing of the sort: a growing boy.

While a child is still in the process of growth he should and must reach out for new experiences that will stimulate his development, and discard anything that tends to hold him back. It does not mean that a child is cruel or disloyal when he discards an intimate, but means rather that the discarded one has ceased to fit his need and therefore holds no interest for him. A child, in order to develop, must be essentially selfish. He must be absorbed by the process of his own growth alone. He has a sense only of his need.

A friendship, no matter how casual, is never really accidental. No matter how incongruous an intimacy, it always has a purpose. When this purpose is misjudged or ceases to exist, the intimacy falls apart. Children, always logical and unconsciously realistic, are never inclined to halt their progress by hauling dead weight.

Needs Change

A child changes friends often because, on account of his rapid growth, his needs change. Each new friendship supports some weakness or affords an experience necessary to further that particular phase of growth through which the child is passing.

Why can't the child make new friends with the old? How can he keep up with the old? First, because a boy is too concentrated. It is all he can do to do a growing child. Second, he is too logical. He has no further need for the old friends, so why clutter up his time and affections with them?

Local Automobile Accident at Colborne

Cobourg, Ont., May 28 (CP) — Mrs. W. Scheuel, Toronto, was taken to Cobourg General Hospital this morning suffering from injuries sustained in a motor accident west of Colborne. She is badly bruised and cut but no bones are broken. Mrs. Scheuel was riding with her son, William, who was driving. W. A. Eggleton, R.R. No. 3, Belleville, was driving west in the same direction as Scheuel but ahead of him and when Eggleton swerved out to pass another car to avoid a dog, Scheuel's car collided in passing. Eggleton and Mrs. and Mrs. James Doig were in the Belleville car. John Hughes, the 72 year old child was also in the ambulance in Toronto car. Provincial Constable Spencer investigated.

I'M GOING SHOPPING—AND WHEN I GET BACK MY WASH WILL BE READY TO HANG OUT! I'M GLAD THEY INVENTED A SOAP THAT SOAKS OUT DIRT WITHOUT ANY SCRUBBING. RINSO GETS MY CLOTHES 4 OR 5 SHADES WHITER, TOO!

Now I can take it easy on washday—for Rinso's creamy suds do most of the hard work. My clothes last longer, too, the "scrubless" Rinso way—2 or 3 times longer! I'm saving lots of money.

My neighbour says Rinso's great in her washing machine. It's wonderful for dishes, too—and for all cleaning—it's so easy on the hands. Why don't you try it?

FIRES OUT OF CONTROL

Sudbury, May 28.— Three bush fires are raging out of control in Sudbury District this morning Ontario Forestry officials report here.

Board Room Gossip

New York, May 28.—There was no volume although prices better as expected. Some stocks advanced as much as 2 1-2 light trading but the professionals were doing comparatively little in and market went up on general a small buying.

One brokerage house said that while reports of Roosevelt Washington regulations only affected about 35 per cent of the total accounts of they stood today that these included some of the most active accounts. The street believes that when as and if the proposed legislation goes into effect all accounts will be "within the law" by that time.

London bought some stocks here in the last few days but not in important volume and these included steels, rubbers and metals.

Short accounts are probably largest still in American Telephone, Steel, and some special issues. Dow Jones.

Market looks better and will be surprised if the ocks do not show new strength on Monday morning. Week of better markets seems indicated and good leaders should go right on top. It is still a buyers' market.—Outlook.

Chicago Tribune

Chicago, May 28.—World conditions appear ripe for an upturn in grain based on continued drought in North America and liberal part of Europe and on prospects of rain in both Argentine and Australia. For the first time in a great many years the world is threatened with shortage in practically all leading grain producing countries. Production in this season expected to fall below normal domestic requirements, which will necessitate heavy imports into prospective carry over of 250 to 275 millions, bushels at end of present season.

VOLUNTARY BANKRUPTCY

INDIANS LEAD IN AMERICAN LEAGUE RACE

Defeat A's While Yanks Were Being Swamped By Browns

CARDS SECOND

St. Louis Staging Grand Race in National Loop

By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr. Associated Press Sports Writer

The slump of the New York Yankees, which started as soon as they left the comfortable confines of the Yankee Stadium to tour the west, today had carried them down into second place for the first time since the end of April, while the consistent Cleveland Indians were at the head of the American League.

Leaving home with a 4 and a half game lead over the Indians, the Yanks immediately began to slip both in hitting and pitching, and despite a thorough infield shakeup a few days ago they failed to come out of it. One of their most dismal performances came yesterday when they collected 10 hits and 11 walks off Buck Newsom and still dropped a 16 to 7 decision to the St. Louis Browns.

Charley Ruffing, who won five in a row earlier, was battered out in the fourth when Bruce Campbell's homer climaxed an eight-run rally. It was the Yanks' 8th defeat in 11 games.

Cleveland, meanwhile came from behind to beat Philadelphia 7 to 6 after the A's had scored five runs in the first. Sammy Hale's homer and Hal Trosky's triple in the fifth provided the winning runs. The triumph, the Indians' seventh in 10 home games, brought a virtual tie with the Yanks. Cleveland, having played fewer games, took the lead with .600 average to New York's .588.

Two other battles for places in the standing drawn as Detroit trimmed Boston Red Sox 9-2 and Washington outslugged Chicago 9 to 6 with the aid of circuit swats by Buddy Myer and Joe Kuhel. The Tigers' victory enabled them to hold third place by a single percentage point over the Senators while Boston and Philadelphia remained tied for sixth.

St. Louis Cardinals provided another of the almost-daily changes in the National League standing, when Dizzy Dean led them to a 5 to 2 10 inning victory over the Phillies that returned the Cards to second place. Dizzy not only pitched eight-hit ball over the long route but hit a homer in the 10th to start the winning rally. Chicago's Cubs couldn't touch Huck Betts' pitching and were shut out at Boston 5-0. The Cubs got only eight hits as they took their second whitewashing of the season and dropped a full game away from the lead and a half-game behind St. Louis.

Pittsburgh's pace-setters smashed young Al Smith for four runs in the first inning, when Gus Suhr hit the first of two homers, and went on to trounce the Giants 7-3 behind the effective hurling of Red Lucas.

Completing a National League program which saw at least one good pitching performance in each game, Van Mungo, Brooklyn's ace limited the Reds to six blows to give the Dodgers a 5-0 decision.

On Saturday the Yankees and Cleveland stayed close together in the American League race, John Murphy's five hit pitching helping the New Yorkers to a 4-1 win over the Browns while the Indians were thumping Philadelphia 7-0. Willis Hudlin held the Athletics to 6 hits to score the shutout.

Only the Chicago-Boston game missed being washed out by rain in the National and the Cubs whipped the Braves 6 to 4.

CURRENT SPORT

(Day By Day)

When the Oshawa Dukes were sanctioned by the C.O.B.L. to play in the Ulster Stadium loop at Cobourg last month, it was definitely agreed that games in which the Dukes participated in, in the C.O.B.L. would definitely count in both league standings. Owing to the fact that Kingston, Belleville and Peterboro are playing only one game each in the Motor City it was later decided, that the second game of all double headers played by Oshawa in C.O.B.L. towns would be of the exhibition game nature, thus making the morning game a regular league fixture.

This point was agreed upon by all, but during Thursday's twin bill between the Dukes and the Nationals three of the Oshawa players informed us that their club had no intention of counting these inter-league games in their schedule of games played, they considering them exhibition games only. Mr. H. Brown the team's mentor and financial supporter, denied this statement, but on the Q.T. the players again said "We aint" going to count these games". If this be so, a check-up by the C.O.B.L. league should be forthcoming immediately. Of course we have since been acquainted with, the fact,. that, the Dukes are in none to good financial circumstances and may disband any day, but if that club continues to make light of their agreement at Cobourg, something relating to a mutual understanding should be made between the two parties at once. Incidentally, and for the information of those interested, we learned, that under certain stipulations Oshawa and two other clubs would. entertain. returning to the C.O.B.L. next season. Don't forget they make certain reservations, but guarantee, at least two new clubs, and that in itself is worthy of consideration.

On Wednesday afternoon the Bay of Quinte League swings into action with Belleville Victorias playing at Brighton and Napanee travelling to Picton. The Victorias have been working out regularly with the Nationals for the past few weeks and should be ready to face the firing line. Manager Fanning will be handed over all surplus material not being used by the local senior club. In all probability Bud Wilkins will get the opening day hurling assignment with Langman and Wallace ready for relief pitching duty. Long and Begin, two Trenton lads, may be added to the club's roster to bolster up the inner works. Manager Fanning has been angling for a seasoned catcher of late and feels once this position is filled the Victorias will be a power of strength in the local intermediate loop. Lionel Blaker will be back at the initial sack with "Moose" Darrah and Dusty Flagler also cavorting about in the infield. The Vics will be out to practice tonight and tomorrow with a few vacancies still to be filled in the outer garden.

On paper it looks as though Ernie Gibbard's charges from Napanee have a slight edge on the other clubs in the Bay of Quinte loop insofar as pre-season training is concerned. The Gibbard "A's" have been working out for the past month or more and have played no less than five exhibition games with other strong clubs, having defeated clubs like Port Hope and Gananoque while they took a trimming from their "B" class team mates and the Kingston Ponies. Judging from the imports seen on the Gibbard line-up they should experience little difficulty in winning the Bay of Quinte loop, but baseball games are won on the diamond and not in newspapers or by past years averages of players, so don't count Brighton, Belleville or Picton out of the picture just yet. Incidentally we understand, that Brighton has acquired a real fire ball hurler from Castleton, while a couple of other new faces will be seen with the Brighton club this season. Intermediate baseball seems to be on the upward trend throughout the province in general.

The Nationals will work out this evening in preparation for their game at Kingston on Wednesday evening, which we understand will be called at 4.30 p.m. Standard Time. Skipper Mills will take the strongest team possible to the Limestone City to endeavour shaking the jinx, so long held over the Nats, by pitcher Yammy Jamieson. If the calibre of hitting so forcibly demonstrated by the locals against Oshawa continues, the Mills-led aggregation should prove troublesome to any pitcher in senior ranks. With consistent hitters like Mills, Smith, Green, Jack, Kerr, Ford, Scarlett, Weir and Utronki available the pitchers should be able to coast in to the odd victory. Manager Mills would not announce today, who would hurl in Kingston. Smith, Casey and Williams are all being groomed for this tilt.

HOTTEST DAY OF YEAR AT 75

With temperatures hovering at over the 70 mark yesterday a brilliant sun settled down on Sunday to the serious work of bringing a return engagement of summer to the district. Roads and highways were again filled to overflowing with cars of all descriptions, with owners seeking quiet places to picnic for the day. In the Bay of Quinte scores of boats spread their sails to the wind, while Victoria Park once again took on a holiday resort air. On Monday again a steady climb of thermometers reached a high point of 75 above at noon. Temperature of the Bay of Quinte arose three points higher than the average mark of 59 last week.

ATHLETES KILLED

ST. THOMAS IN WINNING MOOD

Score Third Straight Win After Dropping First Two of Schedule

Toronto, May 28 (CP)—The claws of St. Thomas' Tomcats today seemed to maintain the same power that plucked a Senior Ontario Baseball amateur crown out of the melee last year. Tomcats have three straight wins to their credit in the Senior Intercounty circuit after a shaky start during which they dropped two.

Jack "Lefty" Gray put a real kick in the Cats during the weekend baseball programme by fanning 12 Kitchener Panthers and presenting his team with a 2-0 shutout on the home diamond. The six hits Panthers managed to acquire from the Gray curve ball artist were scattered, four of them landing in the infield and only two runners getting past first.

Another portsider tossed brilliant ball, when London Winery's march at the top of the Intercounty was blocked at London by Stratford Nationals. He was Ken Biddle, who wears a pair of glasses although he can pick the corners of the plate with the best. Biddle's assortment tripped Winery's winning splurge by a 5-1 count. Moodie Tigers, who have headed the parade in the Hamilton City Senior race fell before the onslaught of Victorias and Joe Jakafby's pitching. Victorias broke out with a four-run rally in the eighth to march away with a 5-1 win after Jakafby had settled a hurling duel with Jack Anderson.

GUELPH TRIMMED

Guelph Maple Leafs could do nothing right at Brantford and the Red Sox trimmed them 6-5 although they were outhit. Sox only obtained six hits compared to the 12 Leafs managed to collect. Leafs earned their five hits by finding the ball for clean drives but Sox squirmed through on the errors of the visitors.

Port Colborne Lakesiders nearly doubled the score on Niagara Falls merchants in a Senior Niagara circuit fixture which they won 15-8. When Crossman lost control in the first inning Lakesiders sped around the bases for five runs and then snatched the remainder in the other innings.

The Hamilton Amateur Baseball Association race took on the appearance of a real tussle, when Galt Terriers gave warning of strong contention by walloping Dundas for a 9-3 victory. Merritton clung to its lead in the Niagara district battles by slamming Niagara Falls' St. Pats into a 16-4 defeat.

St. Catharines carried off a 6-4 verdict over Niagara Falls Cataracts on St. Kitt's diamond when Jack Shannon, Cataract hurler, lost his twirling touch. He passed Coull deliberately in the fifth only to have Storin, the man he planned to fan, single to left to bring in two runs that signed Cataracts' loss ticket.

In other week-end games Owen Sound Crescents defeated Thornbury 5-1 and Meaford Black Sox defeated Hanover 8-2. Kingston Ponies opened the Central Ontario League with a 9-8 triumph over Peterborough.

YOUTH GIVEN TERM

Brockville, Ont., May 28 (CP) — Pleading guilty to eight charges of entering residential property in Brockville, Edwardsburg township, and Yonge Township, Robert Secord, aged 18, of Vancouver, was today sentenced by Magistrate Wright to serve one year definite and a second year indefinite in the Ontario Reformatory.

LEAFS DIVIDE DOUBLE BILL WITH ROYALS

Harry Rice Goes on Hitting Spree in Wild Game

BEARS CLIMB

Now Only Two Games Behind Leading Red Wings

By the Associated Press

Heavy hitting coupled with effective pitching by Charley Devens had carried Newark Bears back into the thick of the International League pennant fight.

The Bears tossed Baltimore Orioles for a double loss at Baltimore yesterday, 6-1 and 4-3 and picked up a game and a half on the pace-setting Rochester Red Wings who were shut out by Geo. Milstead of Buffalo, 6-0. Newark now trails Rochester by only two games.

Devens turned in a first rate pitching job in the first game at Baltimore holding the Orioles to four hits and blanking them until the ninth. Home runs by Jesse Hill, Dale Alexander, Bob Gibson and Vince Barton, the latter's 13th, of the season, made Devens' job easy. George Selkirk's homer with two on in the fifth decided the nightcap in Newark's favor. After Vito Tamulis had been pounded for eight hits and three runs in the last three frames.

Milstead stopped Rochester cold with six hits while Jake Plummer and Jack Smith led a Buffalo attack on Ray Harrel that gave the Bisons five of their six runs in the seventh and eighth innings. Plummer contributed a double and two singles, Smith a home run and a single.

Leafs Divide

Montreal and Toronto divided honors in a double bill, the Royals taking the opener 7-4 behind Johnny Salveson, and Toronto the nightcap, 13 to 6 by virtue of an eight-run drive on Chad Kimsey, Orlin Collier and Clarence Fisher in the first inning. Harry Rice, Leaf infielder, got four hits during this wild game, including a double and a single in the first inning.

Syracuse jumped from seventh to fifth place in the standings by trimming Albany twice, 5-4 and 2-1. The Chiefs were outhit 10-8, in the opener but made their safeties count while Fred Fussel was effective in the pinches. Bill Cronin's single in the sixth drove in both Syracuse runs in the nightcap, a pitching duel between Ralph Judd and Art Jones in which each allowed four hits. Albany's tally was a home run by Del Bissonette.

On Saturday the Leafs and Red-Wings split the points. Hollingsworth curtailed Rochester to four safeties in the opener and the Leafs won 6-4. In the first inning of the second game Pitcher Frazier threw wide on an attempted double play and before the Wings were sent back to the field four unearned runs were across the plate. Retaining the lead the Wings won by 7 to 4.

At Montreal Hal King drove in seven runs alone as the Royals submerged Buffalo 11-1.

McLarnin 7-5 Favorite to Whip Barney Ross

Expect 60,000 Will Pay Way to See Boxers in Action

By Herbert W. Barker, Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, May 28 (AP)—Jimmy McLarnin stakes his welterweight championship against Barney Ross tonight with the outcome so much in doubt that fully 60,000 fans will elbow their way into Madison Square Garden's Long Island Bowl to see what all the shouting's about.

McLarnin's personal popularity in New York plus the 10-pound pull he will enjoy in weight and his murderous hitting ability were reflected in the betting odds that favored him at 7 to 5 today. But there were many competent critics who thought the speedy Ross, champion of the lightweights, would outbox the Irishman by a wide margin and earn the decision in 15 rounds.

Scheduled to start about 9 p.m. E.S.T. the bout marks the first clash between the welterweight and lightweight rulers in 13 years. It was in 1921 that Benny Leonard then lightweight champion fouled himself out of the welterweight title in a match with Jack Britton.

Defies Ring Axiom

In seeking to add the welterweight title to his collection, Ross will defy one of the ring's modern axioms to the effect that you can't spot McLarnin weight and hope to beat him. The woods are full of lightweights who thought they could and failed—Sid Terris, Louis (Kid) Kaplan, Joe Glick, Sammy Baker, Ruby Goldstein, Al Singer and others. McLarnin's plan of battle against lighter and speedier foes is simplicity itself: "Just get 'em in a corner and give it to 'em with both hands,' is Jimmy's formula.

But Ross faces the issue with serene confidence. It was upon his insistence that the match was signed. He's convinced he can beat Jimmy, outbox him, outspeed him and above all keep his chin out of the way when the Vancouver Celt with the deceptive smile tosses right hands in his direction. Jimmy's left is no plaything, but that right has spelled curtains for many a great fighter.

Ross has at least three factors in his favor—he is younger and less ring-worn, he is faster and perhaps most important of all, he has done plenty of fighting the last year or two.

CHAPTER XLVI

Pabillo wrote Natalie, telling her she would be welcome at Loelie House, who had now been established there for a year, to do her work. He would not add a word about the truth which stood out harshly on the past. After he had finished the letter, he laid his head for a little time to feel the cool paper against his hot head. Then, quite steadily, he sealed and addressed the envelope. He was at peace with the fact that all of his life was finished. "Life, an experiment." He remembered reading somewhere, to which we are, by which, committed.

He found things a little easier after he had mailed the letter. The day was short and no longer swung unendingly to tempt him to turn to liquor.

He thought his progress in his new home with others undisturbed as did Noyes often went for long hours into the country. Once he said some property at a profit and bought more, changed some hands and lost a good sum thereby. Eating, sleeping, working, Pablo was always striving with feverish earnestness to keep waking hours dead to overflowing. This was the experiment to which he was committed: this was the experiment he lived for.

"Do you realize," Noyes said a month after Pablo had written the letter to Natalie, "that you do not anywhere you like now, since Miss Treadway made her statement to the police and Bess's running away has been accepted as a confession?"

Pablo smiled. Go where he liked! He had been a prisoner in his experiment. He was still smiling as he said, "I can take trains and steamships anywhere, I know that. I suppose," he added slowly, "that that is the reason I stay."

Bess's wife disappeared soon after her husband. She went away with a pallid northerner who had been employed as a clerk in a cheap hotel. "I'm through with Bess," she had said hardly, standing in the doorway with her travelling bag at her feet. "If you ever see him again tell she went on, to Loelie, "tell him so that that I wish he were in hell for it."

"Sure," Loelie agreed. "I'll tell him. Maybe he'll return the compliment."

Loelie went into the big room where Noyes and Pablo were lounging and pretending to read the day's newspapers. "Lee's gone," she announced. "And my God, she seems a dirty hack!"

Then she repeated the conversation, detailing what she had said and what Lee had said. Noyes nods in approval. Pablo folded his paper carefully and laid it on a near table, avoiding looking at Loelie. Noyes said next morning she was embarrassed. Loelie saw Pablo was not embarrassed by her account of the combat because he did not feel anything lately. "He don't even seem to know what he eats half of the time," Loelie decided with wonder.

She perched on the arm of Pablo's chair and asked with an assumed air of dauntlessness, "Pablo, won't we have a fight in it?"

"There was no answer. Pablo never read, had not heard what she said.

"Dearie lit!" Loelie flung out. "I see he just as much a lady as anybody else if I 'wash to!" Ideas of color were burning on her cheeks. Noyes looked at her then, agreeable enough, but with pity in his glance that Loelie could not bear. She writhed and trembling.

She went to her own room and threw herself bitterly. Even as astounding purple lounging suit, compounded of plasma trousers, a vivid and flaring cape, could not console her. She sat, her tears partially dried, on the edge of the bed, the lounging suit crumbled about her. She sat whispering to herself, "I don't care that's all. I don't care" in "My God!" an' quit callin' Noyes an ole goat!"

But she knew, sitting there, that the most painstaking mastery of the rules of grammar could not smooth the way ahead for her. There was something else that was wrong. Shelling her nose and mopping her eyes, Loelie wondered what it could be. That night she found out.

They had motored in to Havana for dinner and the theatre and Pablo, without having decided where they would go and discussing the subject till the way, "Where shall we go, Isabel," the car was held up by a sudden flurry of traffic at a busy corner ahead. As they waited Pablo looked into the eyes of a girl standing with an older man on the curb. Pablo nodded coolly, without a chance of expression. Pablillo's eyes held his steadily. They stared vacantly. A moment later the car was in motion again.

"Who was that girl?" Loelie asked Noyes when she was alone with him in the library.

"I suppose it was Estelle Field," Noyes answered without pretending to misunderstand.

"Pablo," Loelie murmured. She went up to the voot then into the dark room where she sat swinging her feet and smiling down at him brightly. "Pablo, I'm sorry. With a little bit of settled on the edge of the table where she sat swinging her feet and smiling down at him brightly. "Pablo, I'm sorry. With a little bit of settled on the edge of the table where she sat swinging her feet and smiling down at him brightly. "I had a letter from you this morning," she announced. Pablillo looked at her slowly.

"Is he all right?" he asked.

"Sure. Gettin' along grand. He's selling lots of real estate to South American millionaires."

Pablillo smiled.

Loelie went on. "Pablillo—you like Lee, Loelie."

Pablillo looked at her. He felt a gentleness toward her that he had not known for years.

"Pablillo, I'm goin' to Bean.

Loelie must have known somethin' a long time, you know. He asked her in the letter. I'm goin' to Bean cause they ain't any use to pretend about it—you an' me ain't suited."

He did not see her face then for he was looking down at his tightly clasped hands.

"I never meant to—have anything changed, Loelie," he made himself say.

"Well, like me goodby?" she invited with a splendid jauntiness. He raised her, with more love than he had ever before shown. For a moment she clung to him and he thought he heard her sob, but when she raised her face he saw that she was dry-eyed and was smiling rather fixedly, but smiling.

Noyes said next morning as Loelie was about to depart, "But, child, Bean is married!"

"Hell!" Loelie answered. "I forgot. Say, was he mad for convention!"

Until the bend of the road took them from sight she looked back at Pablillo and Noyes, who stood side by side, waving. Pablillo was weeping silently and without troubling to wipe the tears from her cheeks. "If he knew—if he only knew," she said, "how I'd love him!"

"Shoo 'a Le Merced,' she told the driver, and in the church she knelt. "Well, God, it's all over," she said in her conversational prayer. "Make her make him happy and it'll be all right with me—"

Out in the sunshine again Loelie said, "The docks." Her tears dried on her cheeks as she rode in the heat of the day. Her face felt raised and yet dulled and heavy. "Anyhow," she thought, "I don't have to hope no more and I guess it was the thing to do."

Sometimes, perhaps, the master weaver pauses to look at the tapestry that is made of lives; to pull a thread from the pattern that makes a color discord, to tie two other threads and then go on with the weaving. And sometimes there is a knot in the threads made of lives and a little space and a little sorrow while they are being untangled.

CHAPTER XLVII

Billings who had written Pablo that Sir Aubrey wished to see him personally and asked the favor of Pablillo's address in case he should change it at any time, was headed toward Cuba where he was to meet Sir Aubrey. Also his trip there.

It would be hot in Cuba. Billings thought as he left Noyes in the warm August day. Yes, it would be hot in Cuba. But this would be his last trip on the case that had taken so long to untangle. In Cuba case that had held so much interest for him.

Marcia Treadway, at Cuba, he met the eyes of a woman who no longer knew her. And Marcia smiled, seeing in this the sign that the days were so old that Pablo was safe.

Caitlin was kneeling in the Church of the Angels asking the Angels, nodding, smiled as he forgave him for his intent to kill Jeff.

Then, before Caitlin had reached this triumphing moment, had killed himself. Near Caitlin she saw Madre Santissima de Jesus. Pablillo advanced, prayed and rose from the pain. I have known and I do not fail to pray for you."

He left in the same hour a substantial part of the wages and stepped into the blistering heat of the city street feeling that the gentle mother had moved with him.

Natalie, living in three rooms of the great house that had been her father's, thought bitterly of the transience of men's affections, as she waited for the coming of the winter that would bring northerners to Cuba. Then again she would chew the bones to possible bravery. A little after Natalie, as she painted out the beauties of the place and the happy physique in the threshold of her father's office where one was might be had looked the door after him before stepping into the door which he believed all men.

She had heard from Pablillo again and had burned the letter. She remembered it with only the same oneness. She would give nothing and take nothing from him. In time, perhaps, she would learn to lose material things that held no warm, beautiful ache and did not matter.

Pablillo, writing that second letter had said that he was free, that he loved her and had always loved her, that he always would love her. She had smiled bitterly as she read the letter, trying to forget the cry but he had given her with the words. He was separated. She was through, she decided. She would never again hold out her hands to pain.

The bell on the Field gate post clanged one late August afternoon as the sun was lying on the earth in long, thick shafts. Natalie, a shabby little boy opened the gate to Norris Noyes who said he had business with Miss Field.

"She is in the house, I think," the boy said. "In the garden beyond the house. You may go there if you like to search for her. Sound on the door if you do not find her there. She is somewhere about the house or gone anywhere else. She is and—ah, said!"

Noyes gave the shabby little boy a copper and then turned toward the garden that looked over the sea. There she was, viewed by a wall, a hand on it, her eyes fixed on the fluttering sails of a small fishing boat. She turned as Noyes neared her.

"They are said.

"You dont know me, my child," he began, "but I have business with you."

She could not resent the "my child" and in spite of the child protection she felt drawn to that man with the gentle voice and kind, mild eyes.

"Sit—we sit down," she told him. "And I do not mean to say it..."

She moved ahead of him to the garden bench, sitting down beneath a leaning magnolia tree.

He smiled after she did and looked toward her.

"I feared Pablillo," he began, and saw her stiffen. "I love him," he went on, "because I know him. Loelie—the girl he asked to marry him—loved him, too. Pablillo asked her to marry him because of gratitude and for no other reason. She left us after she saw his face lose color, looking at you."

"My dear," the girl said untiedly, "why I should listen to this."

"No. Many people tell they do not need to be kind. One sees it and feels it at every hand. But I think, in fairness to yourself and to Pablillo, that you should listen."

"She is in fairness," he said, still undecided and tense.

"If Pablillo had been the sort of man who could abandon one woman on the door if you do not find her there. She is somewhere about the house or gone anywhere else. She is and—ah, said!"

Noyes gave the shabby little boy a copper and then turned toward the garden that looked over the sea. There she was, viewed by a wall, a hand on it, her eyes fixed on the fluttering sails of a small fishing boat. She turned as Noyes of life."

"Pablillo has had very little from life—very little except injustice and hardship and suffering. We are all children, you know, Children until we learn of our fate. We, with, in our various ways, our letters to Santa Claus, and we don't receive the gifts we ask for life be-cause—I'm going to a great many places and do a great many things I'm afraid that life is like that—a swelling of disappointment. Pablillo is trying to do that now. He hoped that you loved him enough to be understood. I suppose only he and Loelie will ever know how much he hoped that."

She said nothing. She plaited the edge of a handkerchief as she had years before when rebuked by the Mother Superior for eating the candies which were being saved for Father Ignatius who was coming to visit the convent.

Noyes saw that her fingers shook and that she kept her eyes lowered.

"My dear," he said gently, "you are very young!! If you were not quite so young you would know that love has a right side and a wrong side and that sometimes the cleverest of mortals will think the wrong side is the only side. The wrong side of love has a great many rough places and when the wrong side is uppermost a man will go off, without saying goodby and slam the door. And the woman he loves will cry and talk about going home to her parents. Then—if they are sensible—they put love on right side again and hide the wrong side up."

He paused a moment. "Love," he said, "means kissing and crying and forgetting. And it means a deal of forgiving. And when you grow old as I am, my dear, you will find yourself craving the power to forgive instead and not the other. I think that if you would let me send Pablillo to you seeing that he has suffered as well as you begin to hope that some day you can receive yourself."

"He—he was building a house for Estelle Field," she whispered. Her voice broke.

"He was doing all that he could to keep another from suffering the same misery you had taught him. Child, I am going to tell you that I saw them together and I love Pablillo and I do know the depths of his emotions."

He heard her breath catch.

"It said the house—half-finished —" Noyes went on. "And now he says he will never build another. That is the wrong viewpoint for a young man, my child. You—I suppose it is natural. Quite natural." He stood up then. "Thank you for listening to me, child," he said. "An old man grows garrulous, trying to keep hearts from breaking now it is so unnecessary. An old man knows, looking backward, the pity of wasting anything so precious as this little time we are given here."

He bowed and Estelle put out her hand. "Send him to me—" she said.

O, no sir, that's rite, pop, I replied, and then I asked him what pop said. Well, that's too bad, and no doubt it is, but I can't help it.

Well, it wasn't exactly perfekt, I said, and pop said, O well, what's in a bun and you can't possibly expect to remember the high. Hoes of it. Can you read what you said for spelling? he said.

Yes sir, I said, and pop said, What was it, emulsent?

TARZAN THE TERRIBLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

The baffled gryf bellowed in angry rage as Tarzan's sleek brown body shot through the aperture in the wall of the gryf pool and out into the lake beyond. The ape-man's sole object, now that he had escaped the high priest's thwarted plot, was to return to the temple where he had last seen his lost love, but how was he to find his way again into the tenebrous passages? Far along the shore rose towering cliffs that seemed an impregnable barrier against his return.

Swimming close to, he skirted the wall, searching for some foothold upon the smooth, forbidding surface. At last he saw an opening just above the water level. The ape-man's sole object, now that he had escaped the high priest's thwarted plot, was to return to the temple where he had last seen his lost love, but how was he to find his way again into the tenebrous passages? Far along the shore rose towering cliffs that seemed an impregnable barrier against his return.

Moving as rapidly as caution warranted in the benighted way, he followed down it into the bowels of the cave.

Now several flights of winding stairs brought him to another corridor which was dimly lit by flickering cressets set in niches of the wall. Numerous doorings on either side began to appear and his quick ears detected voices not far distant. Again must he seek disguise, and having learned from experience how best to secure such, he crept like Numa, stalking some prey, to the hangings that shut off his view from the interior of the nearest apartment.

Several minutes passed during which a brief gasping gurgle sounded from the curtained interior and . . . Tarzan! Then the hangings were thrust aside and Tarzan, disguised as a grimly masked priest of the temple of Jad-ben-Otho, strode into the passageway. His attention was accosted by voices coming from a room at his left. He stood with his ear close to the concealing hangings. Within, he heard the high priest's voice, talking with the Ka-ga-ra and thus, for the first time Tarzan knew of the king's murder!

Rev. Joseph Collins First Priest Ordained in Saint Carthagh's

Impressive Ceremonial Celebrated in Tweed Catholic Church

FAMILY'S RECORD

Archbishop M. J. O'Brien Ordaining Prelate at Venerable Rite

Tweed, May 26 (Special to the Ontario Intelligencer).—A memorable occasion in the history of Tweed parish was the ordination to the priesthood on Saturday morning of Father Joseph Collins, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe. Collins of Tweed, when, for the first time a ceremony of this kind took place in St. Carthagh's church. This was also the first time in his twenty-one years of ministry that the venerable pastor, Rt. Rev. Monsignor Hand, has had the privilege of ordaining a priest. Rt. Rev. Archbishop O'Brien, Archbishop of Kingston, and formerly bishop of Pembroke had officiated at ordination outside of the cathedral of the latter.

His Excellency had graciously granted to St. Carthagh's Church this unusual privilege in view of the fact that this parish and the sister parish of Stoco had fostered eight vocations to the priesthood and thirty-eight to the sisterhood, and because Father Collins was the only candidate for ordination in the two parishes. Six priests and a majority of the sisters, natives of the parishes, were able to be present at the ceremonies. The session was delivered by Dr. J. A. Byrne, rector of Tweed, and chancellor of the diocese.

Church Is Thronged

The sacred edifice, thronged with parishioners and visitors, presented a brilliant scene. The beautifully embossed and decorated church, the rich red of the altar appointments in the color of the day, the artistic ornamentation of red and white flowers, made a striking background for the ceremonies, which began at ten o'clock.

A procession headed by a cross-bearer and acolytes and including the visiting and assisting clergy, the candidate and the Archbishop was formed from the presbytery to the sanctuary. Here before the ordaining prelate sitting in his robes and mitre, the young priest was vested as a deacon and carrying a folded portable book and a stole and candle and linen bands in his right hand was examined, and there before the throne took the usual impressive oath of ordination. Many in the congregation had not previously had the privilege of attending an ordination and the solemnity with deep interest and reverence the ceremonies which are one of the native sons received sacerdotal powers of Father Collins included the imposition of hands by the Archbishop, the anointing of the hands of the young priest, the delivery to him of the chalice, vestments his investiture with stole and chasuble, his promise of faith and the promise of canonical obedience.

Assisting the Archbishop were Rev. S. Lasser, Kingston, and Rev. R. Parrell, Kenyville, formerly of Tweed, while Father Collins' first priest was attended by his pastor Rev. Monsignor Hand.

M. Leary of Deseronto was master of ceremonies and Rev. C. J. Macmin, Kingston, assistant master of ceremonies.

Rev. Dr. Byrne Preaches

An eloquent and touching sermon was delivered by Dr. L. J. Byrne from the text "Pray ye, Lord, for ever according to the order of Melchisedech." God having created each and every one, he said, to His own image and likeness and for His own purpose, gave life and soul to us that one's eternal destiny will be to dwell with Him forever. He gives our assistance we have the virtue of religion. The science of faith, the love, grace and mercy of God descend to us from Him, and prayer and sacrifice ascend on our part to Him. To teach the science of faith to impart His grace to show His mercy and point out to us how to pray and sacrifice there must be someone to mediate between God and man. This mediator is called a priest. He must be sent from God. Only one of the Supernatural, or by those to whom He has entrusted His authority.

Jesus Christ Himself taught the science of salvation by word and example the mercy and pardon of God and He has also shown us how to offer prayer and sacrifice. At the Last Supper, having partaken of bread and wine He said "Do this in commemoration of Me", thus empowering these mediators to continue His great work. Christ has begun to end of time "Behold I am with you all days, even to the consummation of the world".

The Scripture showed how Christ had chosen twelve Apostles, friends and brother. In his great work the mediator is also a father St. Paul and by the world, "Father".

"What a beautiful title is this!" said Dr. Byrne. "The world from its foundation to honor gives a priest many names. Schools of learning bestow degrees on him, confessionals see mothers on him many dignities but no title has so high and deep a sense as that of "Father" and no earthly title but that of his spiritual fatherhood will pass with him to His eternal."

Priest as Teacher

The priest is a teacher, exhorting the same teachings that God gave to Moses, the same gospel that Christ taught when He walked the earth, and inculcating in his teachings the same evangelical principles as the apostles of old. Those who listen to the priest, listen to God; those who reject the priest, reject God. Besides teaching the science and love of God, he teaches the things that ascend to God, how to pray and offer sacrifice. He dispenses sacraments, to him is entrusted the great power, of offering the Sacrifice of the Mass, of standing at the altar, and speaking and acting in the name of Christ Himself, offering to an offended God, the sacrifice of His Divine Son. How sublime and immeasurable is this power. One should go down on bended knee before the dignity and power of the Priesthood.

Man comes in contact with the priesthood as soon as he is born. He receives the cleansing waters of baptism, the consolation of absolution in the Sacrament of Penance, his Viaticum and last Communion in the hour of death. Every priest has been appointed by God to watch over His Flock.

The priest is a friend of Our Blessed Lady. She received Jesus in her arms, and he only may open the tabernacle door and take Jesus Christ into his hands. The tabernacle is richly decorated. "For the building up and adornment of the temple, earth has given of her treasures. The ocean its pearls. Spring the magnificence of its flowers, for in the tabernacle dwells the same Jesus Christ who died on the Cross".

"Let us thank Almighty God that he has given us priests as mediators. He has chosen them from the human race, for even upon the angels this dignity was not bestowed."

Joy of Parents

Dr. Byrne referred to the young man who had been this morning given the powers just described, who had been called from the outer court to the sanctuary and spoke of the great joy it was for his father and mother to gaze at their son and know that he too may offer the sacrifice of the Mass.

The pastor of the church, Very Rev. Dean O'Riordan gave a brief address thanking His Excellency for his gracious action in conferring the Sacrament of Holy Orders in St. Carthagh's Church, an action in keeping with the holiness of a beloved Archbishop who has been a distinguished leader in things intellectual, educational and temporal as well as spiritual. He congratulated Father Collins wishing him happiness and success and that when the recess his apostolic jurisdiction he might go forth and do great things for the glory of God.

Family Record

At the conclusion of Mass, His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien addressed the congregation, congratulating Father Collins and welcoming him.

He expressed the hope that his priesthood might be fruitful, long and pleasing to Almighty God. This was the third ordination in the Collins' family, and the third in several homes in the parishes of Tweed and there is no fact that gives well of the good Catholic families in that district. All families were not blessed by having a son or daughter called by God, and parents should also encourage that other great sacrament, Matrimony.

His Excellency referred to the wonderful ceremony of ordination which always made a profound impression on him. Only those in succession to Peter and in legitimate authority could hand on the powers of priesthood and confer on young Levites this great dignity. He concluded by expressing the hope that the occasion might be an earnest of vocations in the archdiocese.

Father Collins then gave solemn his blessing on each member of the congregation. Members of the Holy Name Society, Messrs. Felix Rashotte, Wilfrid Lemair, Jas. Kitchen, Chas. Trudeau, Leonard Trudeau, Joseph Trudeau, Jas. Lobb, Dan Casey, Bernard and Patrick Meraw, John Casey, Casey Rashotte and Ray Quinn acted as ushers.

The Clergy

Following the ceremonies His Excellency and the clergy including Rt. Rev. J. P. Nicholson, G.C., Belleville; Very Rev. J. P. O'Riordan, Tweed; Very Rev. J. T. Hanley, Smith's Falls; Rev. J. Lennon, Rev. J. Keeley, Maxmora, J. V. Meagher, Madoc, M. J. Farrell, Stirling, D. A. Cullinane, Stoco, W. Klein, Frankford, E. McLaughlin, Tweed, L. J. Byrne, J. F. Feeney, S. Lesage, P. C. Wheeler and C. T. Macmillan, Kingston, R. L. Parrell, Bronson, Kenyville, W. E. Tierney, Belleville, W. L. Tierlon, Read, W. P. Hickey, Napanee and Fr. Wiley of Smith's Falls, Rev. Fr. Lennon, Rector of St. Mary's Parish, Toronto, were entertained at a banquet served by the Catholic Women's League of the parish, tables being arranged on the lawn of the rectory.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Collins entertained at a dinner party on Saturday evening, in honor of their son, Father Collins, which was reverently decorated in the Papal colours of yellow and white, yellow roses and white tulips being used on the tables. Rev. Sister Mary Magella, Rev. Mother Nevis, Sister Collins, Kingston, Rose, Margaret and Michael Joseph, sisters and brother of Father Collins, his grandmother, Mrs. Jr. Lennon, Tweed, other aunts, and cousins, were guests of his parents at this occasion.

Father Collins celebrated his first solemn mass in St. Carthagh's Church Sunday morning. He was assisted by Father S. Lesage and Father J. Feeney, the former delivering the sermon. Father Collins gave his first Solemn Benediction last night assisted by the same priests. At noon the visiting priests, sisters, and relatives of the family were entertained at a luncheon on the lawn of the church.

Tired, Below Par? Try This "Hospital-Tested" Remedy

If you know that a remedy had been scientifically tested at a hospital on 40 patients, to prove its value in correcting run-down, always tired, below par conditions, and that it had been so good that it has impressed the doctor in charge of the test, wouldn't you, too, like to try it?

Such a test was recently made on that famous preparation Dr. Williams's Pink Pills. At a leading Canadian hospital 40 patients performed the test patients in a clinic to determine the value of these well-known pills for building the blood. Haemoglobin and red blood corpuscles in the blood are two of the chief out. nervously-exhausted people. (These two vital blood elements carry oxygen from the lungs and nourishment from the food to every cell in the body, and a lack of them is the cause of these run-down conditions).

In every case where the red corpuscles had been below normal at the start, there was a recorded increase after the treatment of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—and in 95 per cent of the cases the haemoglobin content had also improved. The patients had all been tired-out before starting, had regained their pep and energy and their general health was quite normal.

Are you needlessly pitting up with that distressing "tired out" feeling that indicates a run-down condition? Then Pink Pills may be of benefit you as they benefitted these 40 hospital patients. Start at once with this proven preparation will restore your energy. Vigor and buoyant health become yours. Get new rich blood stream. You are taking no drugs when you take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in stock—50c a package.

Individual reports on these 40 patients, certified by the hospital pathologist, are on file.

BODY FOUND TWO ARE HELD

Enos And Richardson George Arrested For Murder of Constable

Merrill, B.C., May 26 (CP)—The body of Frank Gisborne, Indian Department Constable, lay in a morgue here today, grim evidence of the startling sequel to the disappearance of a standing affray at the Canford Indian Reservation. Two persons were under arrest charged with murder and two others were held in custody.

Wire testings were thrown across the Nicola River, where police yielded the body of Gisborne, while searchlights played the river banks in search of the body of Provincial Constable Thomas Carr, co-investigator in the wounding last Wednesday night of Mr. Enos George, Indian woman.

Enos and Richardson George, Indian brothers, were in Kamloops gaol charged with the murder of both constables. After a brief preliminary hearing on charges against Constable Macdonald, C. Freer remanded them for eight days. A third brother, Joseph George, is in custody and a fourth Indian held as material witness.

The body of Gisborne, a native of Ottawa, was found in the branches of a willow tree five miles below the Reserve, where a bloodstained automobile was found last Tuesday. Police believe the two officers were clubbed to death, placed in the car and an attempt made to drive the vehicle into the Nicola River, against a tree.

No arrangements have been made for the funeral of Gisborne, a son of Chancellor Gisborne of the Anglican Diocese at Ottawa, pending an inquest. Meanwhile police said they were awaiting a fifth Indian in connection with the crime.

Police were spurred in their drive to solve the mystery by announcement by Attorney-General Gordon Sloan of British Columbia of a $500 reward for recovery of the body of Constable Carr.

Games of Chance, Dances Lotteries as Church Aid are Deplored by Bishop

Enrichment of Spiritual Life Best Means to Fight Communism

ZEAL IS NEEDED

Subtle Challenge of Reds Must be Met, Dr. Lyons Declares

Kingston, Ont., May 26 (CP) Neither communism nor materialism nor declamation alone can successfully meet the menacing challenge of Communist, declared Rt. Rev. John Lyons in delivering his charge to the 67th. Annual Synod of the Anglican Diocese of Ontario here today.

"The very institutions which have ever stood for the world's peace and security, are being steadily undermined by certain subtle and diabolical influences today," said Dr. Lyons. Propagandists were giving themselves "even unto death" and "unceasing every part of the habitable globe, he added. They were living missionaries for the cause which they espoused.

"They believe in their creed sufficiently, be it right or wrong, to devote themselves solely to its promulgation which presents a menacing challenge to the Christian church."

"Communism," he said, "is not only be met by a constructive message, by giving men something better to take its place."

The message of the Christian church proclaimed by men and women who believed in it so completely as to become missionaries for its cause; could take the place of the messages of Communism and other new beliefs, he asserted.

"The present and urgent need of the church, then, is a fuller enrichment of the spiritual life of her members through worship." Dr. Lyons urged co-operation with lay workers of churches and said that failure of laymen to respond to the call for service in the church was disastrous alike to the church and the individual.

Dr. Lyons deplored the use of games of chance, lotteries and dances as means of raising money for the church.

"As public opinion within and without the church is growing more and more hostile to all devices adopted to raise money for church support," he explained, "the moment is one which must arrest our most earnest attention."

The opinion of the church, he said, was unanimous in its disfavor of the methods in question. "They should not be adopted illegal or inherently wrong, bit their use should end "we know not where" he declared.

Ordained on Greek Front at Saloniki, Served Throughout the Great War

Rev. R. E. Newman, Who Comes to City From Chesterville Has Had Interesting Career During War as Agricult urist and Minister

Joining up for service during the war before he had completed his theological studies, Rev. R. E. Newman, of Chesterville, who will succeed the Rev. Harold B. Neal here next week, continued his theological studies during the service overseas and was ordained to the Christian ministry at Saloniki, Greece, in 1917, while serving with the Canadian Forces. Afterwards he continued in the military service until the close of the war.

Then for a time he turned to work apart from the ministry and followed agriculture but felt as keenly the call to the church and its work that he went back into the ministry. At Winnipeg where he was stationed for a time he married Miss Annie Moffat, who was a duoconess in that city.

Mr. Newman is one of the most interesting men in the ministry today. He is keenly interested in the Oxford Group Movement and a week ago Sunday morning he had associated with him in the pulpit a group of Ottawa members of the Oxford Group Movement. On that occasion members of Holloway Street Church Board were in the congregation.

Toronto, May 29 (CP)—The Ontario general election campaign's full battery was in action today with all party leaders embarked on tours of the provinces to plead their case before the electorate. The firing started in earnest last night, when Premier George S. Henry, Mitchell F. Hepburn, Conservative Leader, and Harry C. Nixon, Progressive Leader, delivered addresses.

Premier Henry hinted in his Hamilton address that Hon. William G. Ross, Minister of National Revenue in the Mackenzie King government, might take over the Liberal leadership in the province. Mr. Hepburn after the Ontario general elections, June 19. At the same time in Hamilton, Mr. Hepburn launched an attack on Conservative tariff policies, claiming the Conservative and Liberal firms exploiting the Canadian people and he believed if the Conservative government met defeat it would bring the death knell of the Bennett administration.

Premier Henry journeys to Cochrane today and is slated to appear Wednesday at the Bay of Quinte Conservative Rally at Blind River and Thursday at Sudbury. Saturday the Premier will be in Peterborough district and June 2

Tariff Policies Attacked by Mitchell F. Hepburn

States at Kapuskasing Many Are Exploited For Few

Kapuskasing, Ont., May 29 (CP) Mitchell Hepburn, Ontario Liberal Leader, today carried his election campaign into the pulp concrane district of Northern Ontario after hearing a warning against Conservative tariff policies with the alliance of Kapuskasing and Smooth Rock Falls.

Mr. Hepburn told meetings at Smooth Rock Falls and Kapuskasing yesterday that the Conservative tariff policies led to exploitation of Canadian people by United States companies. He charged the Standard Oil Company of New York, which Imperial Oil limited is a subsidiary, had sent $13,000,000 to the United States from profits of $18,000,000 made in the Dominion.

He urged his audience to vote for the Liberal party as a defeat of the Conservative administration in the province would lead to reversal of the Dominion Conservative government.

"We have a policy favoring the few to permit the exploiting of the many," Mr. Hepburn declared. "Outside this hall are dozens of cars for which you pay more than you should because of the Tory tariff policy.

"I bought a car myself and at the same time sold 23 hogs and several head of cattle. The return I received from the latter was insufficient to pay the difference between the United States and Canadian prices of that car.

"Where is the money? The U. S. firms, which have subsidiaries here.

He declared both Prime Ministers R. B. Bennett and Premier George S. Henry were "thinking more of titles than of the country's difficulties."

Mr. Hepburn charged, that no one could obtain a job on merit with the Ontario Hydro Electric and declared the only hope for a highway had been given this area.

"Mr. Chris Christie has done tremendous loss to this community it was left off the highway," he said. "We will lose our fair share of the tourist trade if the road goes through south of here as at present planned."

He attacked "election jobs, which required a man to sell his body and soul to the Tory party." He said men were during the winter were paid $1.30—a day but with the election pending this was raised to $2.50.

PLANE BREAKS POWER LINE OVER RAILS

FLAGS ENGINEER

Power Lines Rest on Track Endangering Lives

Graz, Austria, May 29—(AP) — Aviation, railroading and electric superpower all tangled at once today when a man swam out of his mess and rescued everybody.

That looks mixed up. It was.

An aeroplane took off from the flying school field near here. It crashed into high tension wires, spilling the pilot and a student, unhurt, into a lake.

The pilot, a swimmer, saw his student safely ashore.

Then he saw that the high tension wires fouled the Graz-Vienna broad tracks.

The morning express was due. He heard it thundering down the tracks in the distance, headed straight for the high voltage lines.

Dripping water, the flyer ran up the track and flagged the express just before it touched the wires.

The committee today swung into consideration of the financial setup of packing companies.

HON. MR. HENRY HINTS EULER TO BE LEADER

States He Was Offered Position Three Months Ago

INTERRUPTED

Premier Claims Party Followers Not Behind Leader

Hamilton, May 29—(CP)—Leaving behind an intimation that Hon. W. D. Euler, former Canadian Minister of Revenue and Ottawa might take over leadership of the Ontario Liberal party, Premier George S. Henry moved on to Campbellford today, to carry his official election campaign into Northumberland riding.

The Premier sketched at length the record of his Conservative government for the benefit of a noisy audience in the Hamilton Forum last night and expressed confidence it would be returned for "the next four years."

Criticizing Mitchell F. Hepburn for his failure to issue an election manifesto as leader of the Liberal party, Premier Henry asked his listeners to consider if "Hepburn is making promises that Mr. Euler as leader ultimately will have to repudiate."

Demand to know where Mr. Hepburn stood on such questions as Mr. St. Laurence waterway project, was made by Mr. Henry, who wanted to know why Mr. Hepburn had left Mitchell F. Hepburn, has been accused of being "a tool of Ottawa" to take over the reins of government.

"Youth is a priceless thing," he said, "but the young people of all the Province of Ontario will resent the reflection on Mr. Euler, Nixon, and will express it in no uncertain terms," impressed Dr. Faulkner.

Nanebering Twentieth Century Clubs from a Belleville, Sidney, Trenton, Foxboro and throughout the district, there was a large attendance which packed the hall to the doors.

Introduced by Ormonde Butler, President of the Belleville Junior Club, Dr. Faulkner referred in his opening remarks to his trip through the northern section of the riding, where he had spent nearly the past week.

Ormonde Butler, President of Club Presides at Meeting

In a message directed primarily to youth, Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Liberal candidate for West Hastings, at a meeting of the Belleville Twentieth Century Club held in the Liberal Clubrooms last evening emphasized that great leaders from time immemorial had been blessed with youth and its advantages and reminded his hearers that youth was needed in administration now as never before.

"Sir Wilfred Laurier took over the mantle of power in this great country at the age of 30. And how wonderfully and nobly he performed his last task!" William Pitt, one of England's greatest statesmen, is a country of statesmen. was Prime Minister and Chancellor of the Exchequer at 24. The second William Pitt, Earl of Chatham, was Prime Minister and Chancellor of the Exchequer at 24. Sir Robert Peel, Disraeli, another of the country's ablest administrators was elected to office at the age of 31. Even when with all these great examples before him, Prime Minister Mackenzie Mitchell F. Hepburn, has been accused of being "a tool of Ottawa" to take over the reins of government."

"Youth is a priceless thing; I say, that this young people of all the Province of Ontario will resent the reflection on Mr. Euler, Nixon, and will express it in no uncertain terms," impressed Dr. Faulkner.

SMASHES GLASS IN WILD MOOD

Excitement ran high and the peaceful quietness of the evening was rudely disturbed by the wild antics of an intoxicated young man who ran amok on Campbell Street about 8 o'clock, when the sound of breaking large plate glass window was heard by many.

The unfortunate affair followed the alleged drinking of some liquor and hair tonic by an otherwise law-abiding citizen. The man, it is alleged by the police, became crazed from the effect until some of the wild scene opened at the corner of Pinnacle and Campbell Streets when the hair-tonic victim was started his wild jaunt down Campbell Street. The man is alleged to have attacked three plate-glass windows, terrorized passers-by and later breaking the large plate glass window in the front of Delaney's fur store. He was arrested by police on Campbell Street, striking the window in the Wolgin's shoe store and narrowly cracking this large plate glass window, however. His window breaking ended when the man stuck his bare fist through a large window in the rear of the Belleville Burial Company. At Delaney's fur store the man struck the large window with his left fist, later cutting his right hand badly at the window pushing the window in. He was later handcuffed by an unknown passer-by until the police arrived. On the arrival of the police, who placed him under arrest. Later through the courtesy of the police he was accused man was taken to the Belleville General Hospital where it was found that his right hand, wrist and arm were badly lacerated, having been cut when he struck the various windows. The man asked for a week's arrangement in his case, when arraigned before Magistrate Mikel in today's police court, when he was charged with the wilful destruction of property, while intoxicated.

DELINQUENCY GIVEN STUDY

Social Service Work Now Scientific in Character

Hamilton, Ont., May 29—(CP)— The development of social service work as a scientific field, its adaptation from charitable and corrective pursuits into a highly specialized study and its future possibilities formed the broad topics of discussion, when delegates attended the Fourth Biennial Canadian Conference on Social Work which opened here today.

Leading with a paper on delinquency, Miss Joseph Lowndes Bradsite, member in the House of Commons for Peterborough, declared that this section had been "pulldozed" by the railway. "Ever since the highway had been given this area, there has been a steady and tremendous loss to this community if we are left off the highway," he said. "We will lose our fair share of the tourist trade if the road goes through south of here as at present planned."

He attacked "election jobs, which required a man to sell his body and soul to the Tory party." He said men were during the winter were paid $1.30—a day but with the election pending this was raised to $2.50.

City and District News

LABOR MEETING IS POSTPONED

Owing to the small attendance occasioned by other attractions in the city, the regular meeting of the Belleville Labor Association scheduled for Saturday night last was postponed by the president of the association, George Minnie. Members then attended the meeting of the Twentieth Century Club held in the Liberal Club rooms at which Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Liberal candidate, was the chief speaker.

NEW ROAD MAPS SOON AVAILABLE

Although a request has been made to the Ontario Department of Highways for a supply for local distribution, no new 1933-34 Ontario road maps have been received yet by the local Chamber of Commerce. The new maps, a copy of which has been received, is marked with the notice of the new No. 7 Highway through the north, with other new roads also charted on it. It is expected that a supply will be received within the next week or so.

SPEAKING DATE (40 IS CANCELLED

Previous speaking dates arranged for the northern section of the riding will not enable him to be present in the city Wednesday evening, according to address members of the Belleville Co-operative Workers' Association, stated Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Liberal candidate last evening. Dr. Faulkner will speak at the "tin schoolhouse" on Thrasher Lake and at Brook Road on Wednesday evening.

COLD PATCHING IS COMMENCED

Cold patching of city streets will reach a new high mark this year, according to city foreman, H. H. Henderson, whose men are now at work filling in the holes and rough spots with the tarry mixture, thunder showers in the wake of the storm severe completed last fall, and other excavations made possible by the recent storm are responsible for a greater use of the cold patch mixture this year.

WORKERS SATISFIED IN ROAD CAMPS

Declaring themselves well satisfied and content with conditions under which they are working three local youths, Samuel Poister, Mack Rexford and Wm. Michaud, who have been employed on new highway construction at Camp 43 near Kaladar returned to their job following a week end spent in the city with their parents. According to the statements of the boys working conditions at the camp are ideal and all workers are eminently satisfied with their lot. Black flies have not made their appearance in numbers yet, and work on the roads is proceeding steadily and at a fair rate. The youths made the trip from camp to Belleville in a car of their own purchased from a resident of that district.

RELIEF LIST CUT DOWN

Out of a total of over four hundred regular workers on the relief lists of the Central Relief Bureau, who had been employed on the various jobs in the city for the past many months, only seventeen or eighteen remained today to carry on the work, as the result of culling off the men according to official orders. The present force of men are expected to work only a few days longer to finish their shifts, after which they also will be struck off the lists. Relief will then be given only those, who appear to be deserving cases, and will be under the voucher system given out by the office.

CITIZENS VIEW VOTERS' LISTS

Things were busier than usual at the office of the city clerk in the City Hall building today. It was the first day that voters' lists were open for examination by citizens, and the response on the part of the voting public was brisk and noticeable. By noon dozens of residents had applied to view the lists by wards and had satisfied themselves that their names were registered properly. It is expected that the big rush to view names will occur within the next day or so.

C.N.R. STORES COAL 30 EMPLOYED

Unemployed residents of the north section of the city around the boundaries of the yards of the Canadian National Railways employed a return of prosperity today and the thrill of eating out of mid-ad lunch baskets while at work. Canadian National officials commanded the work of storing coal in a huge stock pile near the chutes and hired thirty or more men, according to reports, to assist in the work. It is expected, that more men will be placed as work progresses.

ISLAND READY FOR PLANTING

Eight men were at work on Zwick's Island adding the final touches to the work of grading and fill that has been carried on there during the past winter and spring by an average force of two hundred relief workers. It is expected by city foreman J. S. Henderson, that today will mark the last of the work on the island until tree and shrub planting is commenced later. With the work completed on the island, and practically all grading and fill operations finished, the job is now ready for planting and landscaping to follow.

GROWING VINE TAKEN FROM HILL

A concealing vine of ivy, which over the years has grown, and overgrown the south wall of the city hall building with its network of tough vines, has been removed from the building, leaving the wall in a bald and bare condition. The vine, which had gained such a stranglehold had grown itself out and had apparently been dying of old age. Of late years it has been just a handy perch for quarreling sparrows, whose quarrels had been not at all pleasing to the executive office workers inside. On Saturday the last of the vine had been removed.

Y'S MEN HEAR OF PHARMACY

Geo. Pauley Gives an Interesting Talk on Medicine

"Drugs of the Scriptures" was the interesting subject heard by the local Y's Men's Club at their final meeting of the present summer purview to the summer holiday period last evening at the Y.M.C.A., when Geo. A. Pauley, Phm.B. of this city, in opening the speaker related to the initial meeting of the "pharmacy" which is described as the preparing of medicines. Mr. Pauley, the speaker assured the meeting, that at first all medicines were extracts of herbal origin and throughout the ages man has striven to better his knowledge along these lines.

Mr. Pauley thoroughly went into the subject, and went on explained how the various names of these herbs were determined and their use established to mankind. The majority of the speaker's talk was devoted to the Biblical days, when the use of herbs was first established. Mr. Pauley's talk was one of the most interesting given to the local Y's Men's Club this season. He was cheered for his educational talk by President Earl Boyd.

During the meeting it was decided to hold monthly picnics during the summer months. President Boyd stated that he was delegated to attend the annual Y's Men's International convention at St. Paul next August, as the Club's official representative. The closing meeting was also marked by the financial report of the Club by Treasurer Harry Poste.

Police News

W. Burgoyne, 96 Dundas St., W., reported the loss of his automobile to the local police early this morning. Mr. Burgoyne had looked his motor car in the garage at the rear of his home last night, but upon visiting this morning the garage doors had been forced open and the automobile gone. The car was a 1929 Buick coupe bearing the license plates No Y-666. The police department was given but little information were immediately informed of the theft. Investigations are believed to have been responsible.

Walter Rose, local plumber employee, reported the theft of a water heater from the rear of Latimer's Drug Store Mr. Rose informed the police he had removed the water heater from Latimer's and replaced it with a new one. The old heater had been left at the rear entrance of the store and was gone when the plumber returned here. Sergeant Booth investigated the matter.

While patrolling the city at 4.30 a.m. today Sergeant Herman found an abandoned Ford coach parked on West College street. The car was taken into possession by the police and later identified as having been stolen in Trenton last night. Information was that the property of Everett Black, Trenton, who had not discovered the loss of the machine until he rose this morning. The car will be rose this morning. Later, while patrolling the east hill Sergeant Herman found two flannelette auto rugs near the corner of John and Queen streets. The rugs had been carelessly tossed alongside the curbing and the authorities to believe the rugs had been thrown from a speeding car.

No motor vehicle accidents of a serious or major nature were reported by the traffic officers of the district during the past twenty-four hours. A charge laid under the H.T.A. was discovered against a local motorist in today's police court.

EXAMS CURSE SATAN'S WORK

An interesting talk suggesting the advisability of a definite program of education and recreation for the unemployed was given before the Belleville Rotary Club Monday by Hiram Peterly, Superintendent of the Ontario School for the Deaf. Mr. Peterly brought in a great mistake for the Belleville Board of Education to discard night classes and cited instances in his own experience of forty years' teaching where such classes had been of great community benefit, benefiting and comforting. He stressed the advisability of an education curriculum for evening classes and domestic for those out of work, an education which would be of benefit to them in times to come. The danger of having a large unemployed class without anything to occupy their minds was outlined by the speaker, who also pointed out what he considered defects in the present system of education which had come down through the ages in one set form, extended and elaborated in certain demanded. Modern education was just a system working up to examinations and universities. When the child of five entered school education per se had been said, because there the child's initiative ceased to be succeeded by the leadership and direction of the teacher.

Examinations are the greatest curse inflicted by Satan on humanity, said the speaker, who advocated their abolishment, and a complete change in educational systems to provide for more initiative and cooperation on the part of the student, more of self education.

Present economic conditions and the causes leading up to lack of unemployment will want to be made of abundance were briefly discussed by the speaker in relation to the subject, and he condemned a system of education that inculcated the belief in the mind of the student, that the whole purpose of life was to make money when it should be to give a life of practical service to humanity, eliminating greed and selfishness and striving after a greater conception of the realization of the Fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man in this world.

Electric Range Drive Agreed on

Campaign for the installation of electric ranges under a financing plan, which will reduce the costs of installation and of purchase of electric ranges over many months, will be begun in Belleville shortly, it is expected.

The local Hydro Commission decided at a meeting Monday afternoon at which they met Messrs. George Hodges and Kenneth McIntyre of Toronto, who have studied the provincial campaign under contemplation, to go ahead with the undertaking. It is expected that there will be a large number of installations under this plan.

Messrs. Mickler and McIntyre have studied the problems from various angles and laid before the Belleville Commissioners all the information they had collected concerning the proposed provincial campaign under contemplation, to go ahead with the undertaking. It is expected that there will be a large number of installations under this plan.

Last evening the Belleville Hydro Electric Board members met the commercial representatives of Belleville and laid before these business men the facts presented by the Toronto men. Announcement of the campaign is expected to be made shortly.

The merit of the undertaking lies in the financing of the installation; costs and the purchase over a period of five years. Installation of scores of stoves will mean a large increase in the consumption of power, which will mean improvement of the Hydro system and the lowering of costs.

The first suggestion of the campaign was heard months ago but at the last meeting of the Hydro Commissioners it was decided to study the problem thoroughly and immed- two experts were hurried here for lately. With that end in view the their information.

History of Liberalism Outlined by Speaker

Hon. Nelson Parliament Addresses Young Liberals at Trenton

Amalgamating, May 30—(Special)—On May 30th, in Trenton, the Twentieth Century Club held their fifth banquet. The Hon. Nelson Parliament was the speaker. He says: "The attendance, I am sure, assurance is a necessity. In one last by-election in Toronto, after election day came, the young girls and men were out; latter, an active interest in the election. The Liberals won the election by a large majority. You must have some set purpose. Times may change, personalities may change, but the principles of Liberalism will apply for all time." So, you feel exceedingly proud of what Liberalism has done in this country. Go back to the early thirties. Think of William Lyon Mackenzie, who stood up against the Conservatives, fighting for responsible government. We came to 1848 when Baldwin and Fontaine, two Liberals, laid the foundation of our municipal self-government. That was the Liberal platform. These men used super human efforts to bring that about. Then came 1867 forty-five and the other forty-nine they retired, feeling that their life's work was done. You may think one elder that very much, but if you read Sir Wilfrid Laurier's history of these men, you will find that they were into it. Sir John A. was the distinguished area. They followed the very plan; it was as the people that made the British Empire possible. When the Canadian provinces were being brought together it was the Liberal leaders who arranged most. George Brown said in his speech.

Harmony Guiding Star

"There are things I don't agree with, but in order to bring this about, I will support it. The guiding star of Laurier was harmony in Canada; the architect Macy times he stood up in the House of Commons all alone to defend some principle always saying, 'I am a British Liberal, a French Liberal,' and he always stood for reliable harmony. At the time of the building of the C.P.R., just after the Liberals were defeated, Sir Wilfrid Laurier said "It might make two or three million heirs," but happy Canadians, I am sure, how they would be better. Then in 1878 the Liberal party were defeated because the National policy was advocated.

In 1878 the boom came on the States and was reflected here until 1882 and then from 1883 to 1896 this country gradually began to get in a terrible condition. It was in this condition because of the policy of the government. Sir John A. Macdonald said: "The idea of feeding these new industries so as to establish them in the country, must not continue forever. It will take a strong government to release the tariff." Canada was in a bad condition, deficits in the government.

After the elections of 1896 Laurier made a declaration of Liberal principles to the Dominion of Canada. He sent commercial agents, established trade treaties, reorganized the land, and a few other things. Borrowed it on others, and put 200 loans on land. He made a business tariff and from 1900 to 1910 was the greatest era of prosperity the country ever had. Don't say anybody but Canada that was not a happen-so. It came because of business government. The Conservatives came into power in 1911. In 1910 and 1911 a pact was made with the United States. A financial crisis was due, and, with the loss of getting the country through a financial crisis was expansion of trade.

Taxes Heavy

They were defeated. By 1914 the great War was on. In 1921 the picture was just the same as in 1906. The debt was two billion and over and the taxes were big. The Liberal party was again called to power. It will always be called to power when the country gets in the condition it is in now. Furthermore this Liberal government did exactly as Laurier had—made trade treaties, and the result was the country returned to prosperity. Not only that, but the Liberal government performed greater service. They gave the people cheap cents instead of three cent postage, and reduced and expended taxation.

That is a case of the service that the Liberal party have rendered in the Dominion of Canada. In 1905 when the Liberal party went out of power they had bonds guaranteed of six million dollars in order to open up the North by building N. N. O. Railway. Then again we hear, that the old system is all wrong. The old system may need, changing, but the system now is wrong, because it is not properly managed. The people, as the men of Ontario have no concern with the welfare of the people. We must usher in the idea of Liberalism. Liberalism means this: "Unless those things can be done which will bring the greatest good to the greatest number of people". When all this burden going to rest? Is it going to rest not on old men with white hair but on you people? You here, small though you think you are the army that is standing on guard over this province and this Dominion of Canada. This country has now 3 billions debt against it. Is it going to be that we become serious and think the matter over? Do you think honestly that the Conservative party can ever bring you out of this slough of despond? Never has a Conservative party been known to lower taxation, or to lower debt.

Change by Activity

There is only one way it can be changed and that is by the activity of the people themselves. When people say politics is a dirty game, but it is just as dirty as the people are that make it. Have some hops of the future of your country. Step into the breach without fear or favor. No nation it as richly blessed as this Canadian nation. This country is going straight for bankruptcy unless something is done. Every year since Henry came to power, they have added to your taxes, to your debts. They have more desire to serve the Tory party than to serve the people. Realizing the great country we have, the great province we have, the young people should rise to the occasion of your responsibility, and I have faith in the energy and wisdom of the young people that they will accept that responsibility.

J. B. F. Jennings, Howard Clarke and Harold Newby were elected directors at the Y.M.C.A.'s 41st annual meeting held in the association building on Monday evening. Mr. Jennings occupied the chair, Adjutant Martin of the Salvation Army Conducted devotional exercises. A hearty vote of thanks and appreciation was tendered Secretary Short and Physical Instructor Morden, Presiding Licence and his able board of directors.

Following the meeting refreshments were served with the Women's Auxiliary as hosts. Despite the fact, the association experienced a less successful season insofar as finances are concerned, there was an increased interest shown in the activities of the association.

Reports of the various departments as analysed by Mr. J. F. Short, general secretary, were presented.

In the physical department the number of boys was the best in the last ones ever experienced by the Physical Department. Commencing the latter part of September, gym activities have been carried on for six days a week without a break, throughout the winter months, outdoor activities and swimming were majored upon and again plans are well under way for the coming year.

"We wish to record since the last report, the very thorough death of two very warm friends of the association, Mr. R. J. Graham and Mr. R. J. Graham, Mrs. Cody Graham, Mrs. Cody was a life member and a liberal contributor to it. Mr. Graham was a life member of the association, was a leader among the boys, a member of the board for years. He was a substantial supporter with finance as well. At the time of his death, Mr. Graham was a member of the board of directors. Our sincere sympathy is extended to the family in their hour of bereavement. Today Herve Adam, swimmer instructor in wrestling died on the morning of this morning. The Ladies' Auxiliary report reads:

"We regret exceedingly the inability of the Secretary Mrs. Cook to be present with us this evening, year, later Mrs. Stoneberg was appointed as substitute.

"The dormitory needs have been furnished and maintained. The monthly meetings have been enriched and blessed with inspiring devotional periods under the leadership of Mrs. R. Baker. The social committee under Mrs. Shortt, have carried on most faithfully serving and planning when the need of entertaining arose. Much to the social and financial assistance of the auxiliary.

"We had one deceased member in the person of Miss Gardner and it is with sincere regret we have to mention the loss of so valuable a member.

The Treasurer reported:

C.P.R. Opens Softball Season with Win over College Grads

Trenton Fans Expect Fine Season in This Pastime

TRENTON, May 29—(Special)—The 1st was finally pried off the local Softball Association for 1934 last evening, when the veteran C.P.R. defeated the youthful College Grads by a 7-1 score.

The boys wind laid on a mixture of the stars of last year's team with Rod. Coughlin, one of the old standard Riverside Dairy team, as their ace pitcher. Coughlin, although not appearing in a good fielding team, kept the Grads off the score sheet except for one run. Gray's home run in the second stanza.

Perry Alexander, star for the Grads but was wild and his teammates made many errors. Perry was replaced by R. Fox in the fourth after making three balances.

Art Scarlett has the distinction of making the first home run of the 1934 season, when he drove for the circuit in the opening frame scoring Alexander.

The score didn't indicate the difference of the teams as the Grads are capable of better ball.

They fell down badly at bat and made many errors which were unlabled for.

A good crowd were on hand for the opening encounter. Tonight the two new teams of the league, the Benedict-Proctor and Mitchell-Mace, play.

Grads—Anderson ss, Roberts 1st, Lamore c, Mitchell if, Derry p and 2nd, Gay 2nd, Alexander cf, McCoy and Kidd rf. Fox p.

C.P.R.—Begin ss, Alexander c, Redcliffe 2nd, Scarlett 3rd, Bell lf, Steenburg c, Bernard rf, Bowden and Hogg 1st, Coughlin p.

Score, by innings:

C.P.R..... 0 1 2 0 1 0 1 0 7—7

Mrs. Start Work on Two Highways

Yesterday morning several men and teams started on the Trenton-Carrying Place Road, which will be paved this summer. The Rayner Construction Co., of Toronto, have the contract with Mr. Evans, Supt. of Construction, in charge.

The new road will fill much needed want of the citizens of Trenton as for several years an agitation had been circulated in regard to this new road.

Ground is first broken on the slope in front of the Carrying Place Cemetery. Every half of the new highway will be through new territory with the old bad turns, north of the canal being eliminated. This distance will be shortened and have two places with almost a mile of a straight right-of-way.

The new road crosses the Murray Canal approximately three hundred feet east of the present bridge. A new two-way bridge will likely be erected next year.

The new road will be a twenty-foot concrete highway and a sixty-six foot right-of-way has been staked out by Mr. Wm. Thompson, Government Engineer of Marmora.

More men are expected to start work today and gradually be increased till a large number will be employed.

The Trenton-Frankford road was also commenced yesterday by the Law Construction Co. This road, is understood, is to be covered with crushed rock, rolled down, and a macadam coating applied.

Trenton merchants are all smiles to think that these two arteries to Trenton will be paved and much business will return, that has been diverted to other centres for the want of adequate highways.

Quiet in Police Circles

The last few days have found peace and quietness in the Trenton Police Court.

The only real important feature at the police station lately, was an addition to the staff.

The police cat, a real champion mouser, gave birth to four kittens late Saturday and the latest reports are that all are doing well with mother and as her very busy keeping mice, and occasionally a rat, away.

NATURE CURES DISEASE

It is Nature's forces that heal broken bones, cuts and bruises. Nature also heals disease.

It is the lack of NATURE'S LIFE FORCES in the organs or tissue that allows disease to develop. The primary cause of which is bone pressure upon nerves at the spine cutting off the natural flow of nerve impulse.

Specific spinal corrections given by a chiropractor will eliminate this cause and restore health and vitality permanently.

KAYE DON HURT IN CAR CRASH

Mechanic Killed as Pair Prepared For Road Race

"Round the Houses" race here Friday.

The mechanic, F. Taylor, died early this morning in a hospital where Don was also taken, severely shaken up but not badly injured.

Friends discovered Don's absence from his hotel and made a search for him. They found the overturned car, a short way out of town, with an ambulance at hand. A policeman had found the two beside the stalled car, summoned aid and telephoned for aid.

The accident occurred on a lonely road when Don's car collided with an approaching car, jumped a hedge and overturned. Occupants of the other car were uninhurt. Don is suffering from shock and abrasions and will not be able to race Friday.

Although he has been an automobile racing enthusiast for years, the English veteran is better known for his speed boat exploits. He has set several world's records in this field and has held—unsuccessfully—for the Harmsworth trophy with Gar Wood of Detroit.

BETTERMENT TO GO ON

The man who has been deeply impressed with the slump may wonder how far the expansion can go without interfering with that economy which is essential to social and national welfare.

Expenditure and expansion can be a vital factor in economy, just as much as saving can be as long as they are practised wisely.

One has only to look at the British recovery which is taking up a great deal of the slackness in employment to find that Britain is making heroic efforts to pay up debts of the past, by the way of expansion of trade and even by expenditure which makes it possible for more persons with greater ease to bear the load of taxation. Britain takes on a vast housing scheme which is taking up a great deal of the unemployment and is expected to raise the tone and standard of living. Persons who have been forced under prevailing conditions to live in a way not conducive to encouragement, enthusiasm or optimism will have a far better opportunity under the new scheme which will make it possible for even these people to bear their share of the national burden almost with a smile.

So it is with expansion of industry. Wisely looked into, new enterprises may make possible rapid general improvement. This one of home improvement is one that cannot but be of utmost importance to every city, town and village. Most of these centres have relics of a past generation in the form of houses which are not fitted up as they ought to be in satisfaction of the demands of today. Owners of this type of property may be advised of the importance of improving them, for unless they are improved there will be a tendency to lower values comparatively. Today is a good time for improvement of homes, by expanding them where room is needed, by putting in modern conveniences and by making the houses more attractive. Now the owners of these old buildings face a real problem for some of these houses are not the kind which have been profitable during the past two years or so when those who rented houses have assuredly had enough worry in collecting rents. And doubtless many of these owners have not the means to modernize their rented property. Will a plan of improvement under government aid help? An experiment along this line is being attempted in the United States.

This must be kept clear. Though the 1929-33 depression was a dark one with traces yet left behind and with the era of convalescence just begun, civilization does not halt. Improvement will go on. That it should be wisely directed and fostered may be devised some method to hold in check too great optimism, and extravagance is necessary in this and any age. If our present state of civilization progresses properly it will be possible for life to be made much more comfortable in the improvement of all kinds in city and country—such improvements as will make the coming era vastly different from what we know of today.

There must be progress.

HINDU ROPE TRICK

A prize of $2,500 for proof that the Indian rope trick has ever been worked is offered by the Magic Circle of London, England.

There probably was a time in the history of the world when a man might with justice make such a claim, but he could not sustain if he were living today. It would be profitable to him but in this day what is the use of the performance of gifts of mystery when the public doubts?

There is more fun in most sane-western persons' way of thinking if the conjurician knows you know he is just juggling than if he pretended that he could perform wonders and miracles. Accept the premises that the thing is a trick and then what a lot of fun everyone will have, magician and observer alike!

One does not need to know just how the trick is worked to enjoy it.

Then there is this long-lived story of the rope which is flung up into the air by a yogi and remains upright and is so supported from the air as to permit a boy or man to climb up and disappear? If it is a trick, why should it not be admitted? But then it is claimed no living person has ever seen it performed and for that matter that no person now dead ever saw it performed.

Perhaps it cannot be done at all. If it can be performed how is it possible? There is an attempted explanation by the use of hypnotism, under the spell of the wonder-man or some credulous crowd. That the mesmerist can so handle a crowd is not quite acceptable today to a western audience which is so different from an audience in India.

A Dr. Dewey of New York, back in 1896 wrote of Indian occultism in a letter to a London paper as follows:

"The yogi preached a sermon and then took a rope about fifteen feet long and one inch thick. One end of the rope he held in his left hand while with the right he threw the other end up into the air. The rope, instead of coming down again, remained suspended, even after the yogi had removed the other hand, and it seemed to have become as rigid as a pillar. Then the yogi seized it with both hands and to my utter amazement climbed up this rope suspended all the time in defiance of gravity, with the lower end at least five feet from the ground. And in proportion as he climbed up it seemed as if the rope was lengthening out indefinitely above him and disappearing beneath him, for he kept on climbing till he was fairly out of sight, and the last I could distinguish was his white turban and a piece of this never-ending rope. Then my eyes could endure the glare of the sky no longer, and when I looked again he was gone."

It may be that Dewey did not see it and was just reporting what he had heard. However the matter stands just like that rope suspended in the air according to the story of the yogi.

ZENITH

We have eluded our pursuers now
Which one hour since pressed hotly on our trail;
Here only singing leaf and bending bough
Can see our kisses, heed our love's sweet tale.

Care's leaden feet can never climb so high,
Nor can the voice of sorrow pierce this wood.
Today earth spins for us, with you and I
Its rulers in this windy solitude.

And from the tree-clad crest of this steep hill
Which after arduous climbing we have gained,
The world falls back; here strong-winged
Time stands still.

The zenith of our love is now attained;
Henceforth the dream will never shine so bright,
In love, we reach once only in this height.
— Aline Michaelis.

ANDREW CARNEGIE, "Laird of Skibo Castle," in the Scotch Highlands, steel magnate of the United States who is mainly remembered by the public for the many public libraries he has endowed all over the continent, again appears in the public eye through an article syndicated from New York City about his widow, who acting upon the advice of Andrew has successfully kept out of the limelight since his death until recently when a woman writer found a story in the quiet, unassuming little widow who lives in what is said to be the largest private residence in New York City. Recently Mrs. Andrew Carnegie opened the gates of the gardens that surround her huge pink and white stone mansion to the public for the first time as a benefit for the Anne Brown Nursery School. One dollar admission entitled the sightseer to tea, was the Church Peace Union which he established to promote international peace and friendship through the agency of church organizations of the world. The one hobby of the widow of the Laird of Skibo is collecting table cloths which contain an autographic record of the guests of her dinner parties. Long ago there were more parties. Each guest is handed a pencil and asked to write his name. Skillful artists then embroider the autographs to make them lasting. Mrs. Carnegie started this custom when she was a girl.

THE FINE WEATHER of Sunday opened the outdoor season with a bang, and all waterside resorts were points of attraction for a moving multitude. Those with motor cars sought the great or small open spaces of their fancy, and reveled in the green beauty everywhere, and freshness of country air, perfumed with the dainty incense of lilacs and other fragrant blossoms. Those without motor cars perforce stayed closer home and Victoria Park held a happy throng all day, resting, picnicking and swimming, while the blue water of the bay was brightened by many white sails as budding yachtsmen perfected knowledge of tacksail and jib. The one thing was missing to make the day's happiness complete, there was no water in the pool for the kiddies which was just too bad for youngsters and parents alike.

WATCH THAT YOU ARE NOT EGOTISTICAL

The Person Who Thinks He Knows it All is Not Popular

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Many varieties of egotists exist, but the most annoying type is the gentleman who not only thinks he knows it all but who, in addition, makes it a point on every possible occasion to apprise you of that fact.

You have doubtless met that type of person. You find him everywhere and in all walks of life. Nor is this type of mind peculiar to the masculine gender alone. There are great numbers of women who have that same peculiarity.

The person who knows it all will invariably tell you that you are wrong in many of the things you say and do. Invariably he will tell you without your asking, what is the right way is. He will inform you that you read the wrong newspaper; that the book you have started is a waste of reading time. He will tell you how you should play your golf when you are out for enjoyment, and as such a time he is likely to bring up your business affairs and tell you why you are a poorer business man than you have suspected.

He will even enter the sacred confines of your home, advise you upon the arrangement of the furniture when you should have purchased thus and so, how you can reduce your expenses, how you can get the landlord to give you a month free, and so on ad infinitum. Not to mention all the pointers you will get for nothing concerning the training and education of your children.

On the other hand, have you ever tried, perhaps in desperation, to tell such a know-it-all a few things yourself? Or have you ever, in self-defense attempted to stem the tide of oratory by using similar bombastic methods?

If you have, you probably found that your efforts were futile to naught. For such a person possesses many times more not the least perceived of which are statistics. With these he invariably tries to slay you but does it help you much if you insist that with statistics anything can be proved

This very inability to change the constitutionally egotistic attitude that persons of that stripe possess is the very thing that they never achieve anything really superior. In short, they do not advance because they never learn anything.

No person living can possibly always be correct. Even experts make mistakes.

People who know it all can be avoided easily enough. What is more, they should be. The trouble is that there are various grades of egotists and that we unwittingly fall into like habits of thinking and acting ourselves.

Often we tend to exaggerate and to overemphasize when we get into a tight corner, or want to make an impression, or win an argument. Often indeed we are led to prevaricate without quite realizing what we are doing. It really is easy to gain the reputation of being one of those obnoxious individuals whom we dislike.

Therefore keep a close watch over what you say. When you don't know, it is far better to admit your ignorance. There are many ways the first constructive step toward finding out.

Guard your tongue on all occasions.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Those who suffer from a tendency to uric acid should be extremely careful about their diet. Milk, cereals (cooked as well as raw) white bread, fruits and fruit juices, lemonade, bake custard, rice or tapioca pudding are allowable. Meats and broths made from meats had best be avoided entirely because of their protein content. The drinking of alkaline waters is also advisable.

AFTER ACCIDENT SHE PUT ON WEIGHT

Kruschen Took it off Again!

A woman sends the following account of the consequences of an auto accident in which she was involved:-

"A year ago I had a very bad automobile accident, which left me more or less a cripple. Having to lie in bed so long, and being unable to move, I began to put on flesh. When I was able to walk a little again, I found I was 14 lbs. heavier than before. I was shocked, I thought I would try Kruschen Salts, and I must say they have done me a lot of good in every way—but chiefly in seeing my weight down. In three months I lost 6 lbs. Then I left off taking the Kruschen, and I soon went up to 142 lbs. again. So I at once began to use Kruschen, and am again steadily reducing. My weight last month was 134 lbs."—(Mrs.) W. H. M.

Kruschen combats the cause of fat by assisting the internal organs to perform their functions properly. It helps to throw off each day those waste products and poisons which, if allowed to accumulate, will be converted by the body's chemistry into fatty tissue.

"Sisters Under The Skin"

FILM OPENS TODAY

"Sisters Under The Skin" which opened at the Capitol Theatre today for a three days' run, is a film delight to a large audience.

With a simple story and title, "Sisters Under The Skin" deals with a subject that is rarely forced to choose between love and luxury. But her loyalty holds her to the man who can give her everything, while her heart asks for the other who can offer her only love.

Lenia Lind presents a glowing portrayal as the girl. Instead of making the character a hard-boiled, hate-what-you-accept individual, she created a radiant young woman again—yet afraid—to accept life's offerings. The return of Joseph Schildkraut to the screen was greeted with applause by many of the actor, Schildkraut's absence of screen four years is missed by his singularly the portrayal of the impressionable Count Rudolph Sandor considers self-honesty most important. We hope to see him emerging as a fine character actor.

Frank Morgan's interpretation of Prince Metternich, the diplomatic roue is just another example of the fine artistry of this versatile player. It's always hard to be sorry for the villain role, but Morgan gives the understanding touch that wins audience—indeed a triumph.

Doris Lloyd as Countess of Morgan's preoccupied wife, Clara Blandick as the philosophical maid as secretary, while Shirley Grey goes a long way toward completing the remainder of the cast was in itself. Added subjects include a comedy; Vitaphone, and Pathe Review; Organ-ettes pipchers for the ladies to-

Here's Summer

Here is a photograph of Rodc. G. Jackson, M.D., at 75. The picture was taken at age Dr. Jackson was given four years notice to live by the Medical Board. He did live, but through natural living habits and the use of alkaline foods Dr. Jackson is today in his 77th year the acknowledged of youthful vigor and endurance.

HERE'S Summer!— and here's hoping it will be a long and delightful one, as our Canadian Summers usually are.

Of course, our summers are often hot and sultry, and this means discomfort and an "all in" feeling for many, but that is not the fault of summer. The full enjoyment of even the hottest days is all a matter of keeping the blood in proper condition. Take my case! I'm never "all in" even on the hottest days. I'm always full of "pep" and energy. I often sit in the "altogether" on the flat top of our building in the breathing room, hours at a stretch, without head covering, although the "authorities" all say "cover the head while sun bathing." And that's good advice, too, for those who live on the conventional diet of civilization which cannot avoid destroying the normal alkali reserve. Nature's first defense against fatigue, disease and premature death." When the normal alkali reserve is destroyed the blood becomes "viscid" or ropy, circulating with great difficulty through the capillary blood vessels through which all organs, including heart and brain, get their life blood supply. On hot days, sweating depletes the blood of water, making it still more ropy and difficult to circulate through heart and brain. That is what causes the "all in" feeling, heat strokes and collapse on hot days.

But I fear none of these, because I have in my blood a "normal alkali reserve" and my blood is not ropy, but vital and very fluid. That gives vitality and resistance to heart and brain, through both of which it circulates without hindrance, maintaining a free supply of life blood in these vital organs and calling upon no fear of leg labor. Of course, therefore, I am not "all in" on even the hottest day and can safely defy "Old Sol" to do his worst. Anyone who will live my way can safely defy the sun, especially if he will feed himself my way.

And now you may ask "How does the cold affect you?" Well, during the past winter, the coldest in many years, I motored all over Ontario and parts of Quebec and New England, wearing neither overcoat, vest nor underwear. Sometimes, it was 36 degrees below zero, yet I went about lecturing between three and four hours every night, often talking eight hours in one day, but I never suffered and never tired — and I am now in my 77th year. How could I do it? For the very same reason that I can stand excessive heat, because I have a normal alkali reserve in my blood, my "first defense against fatigue, disease and premature death". For blood is life, life is resistance — and blood is made from food.

How did I obtain such a perfect blood condition? By the use of an 80% alkali-forming diet, the most important part of which consists of either Roman Meal, Bekus-Puddy or Likhus, and Kofy-Sub as my only beverage.

On hot days I eat the cereals cold with fruit jelly and cream or honey or maple syrup and cream, and Kofy-Sub cold with lemon juice or cream and sugar. All delicious, cooling, satisfying, healthful.

I suffer from neither heat nor cold and at 76 I safely defy disease, because I obey the Creator's health laws, and a perfect body, with immunity from disease, is the reward of Creative Wisdom for all who thus obey.

You can obtain this same great reward if you will also obey. Proper feeding is not all, but it is a vitally important part and the place to begin. My bulletin on Alkali-Forming Foods will greatly aid you and is free to those who write for it, but I want only those to have it who are sufficiently health-conscious and intelligent to be anxious to have it without being urged. CAMERA CLICKS AS OFFICER CLUBBED TO DEATH IN RIOT

Here are remarkable photos of the clubbing to death of C. Arthur Isman, prominent civic worker in Minneapolis, Minn., who was acting as a special deputy sheriff in an effort to fight the rioters who appear to have taken a mighty swing and felled the deputy. At the right photo shows men rushing up to aid the fallen man. This was the only fatality of the truck-driving rioting, though 45 were injured, many heads and jaws being cracked in the fierce hand-to-hand fighting. It was only a few minutes after this that a truce was declared.

MISS G. DUMAIS IS BANQUETTED BY V.O.N. BOARD

Presented With Handsome Farewell Gift By Friends

A farewell party in honor of Miss Germaine Dumais, Victorian Order nurse, was arranged last evening by the local V.O.N. Committee in Dickens' Coffee Shop. The very enjoyable affair was a total surprise to the guest of honor who arrived at Dickens' presumably to have tea with three of her friends and found herself the centre of gathering of thirty-six, who had assembled to honor her before her departure to Ottawa.

The Coffee Shop bright with Spring blossoms was an ideal place for the affair and a delicious dinner was served the guests. Mr. Reg. Moorcroft, president of the committee acted as chairman, and at the conclusion of the dinner expressed the regrets felt by the committee and Miss Dumais' associates at losing such a valued nurse. Mr. Moorcroft spoke of Miss Dumais' long service in Belleville, of the friends she had made and the homes that had been cheered by her presence. He then called upon Mrs. Moorcroft, executive and others present who spoke in appreciation of Miss Dumais' work and friendship.

They included Past President Fred Smythe, who spoke of Miss Dumais' co-operation with the Board at all times and also had a message from the secretary of the local Medical Association, who regretted that local ghut members could not be present at the dinner, Mr. J. W. Imlah, treasurer, Miss Ethel Horton, past president, Mrs. Thos. Holland, vice president, were other V.O.N. committee members who gave brief addresses. Mr. J. W. Holmes, Miss Anna Lafferty of the City Hall Staff, Miss M. P. Ross, school nurse, and Mrs. O. Paul, a close friend of Miss Dumais also spoke.

On behalf of the committee, Miss Dumais was presented with a fitted travelling bag by the President. Greatly moved by the expressions of friendship and regret, Miss Dumais made a gracious speech of thanks, referring to the cooperation of the Committee, which had been of great assistance in her work and said her memories of Belleville would always be very dear.

The guests then sang "For She's A Jolly Good Fellow" and each one present had an opportunity to convey personally to Miss Dumais their regrets at her going and good wishes for her future success.

First Communion to be Postponed

First Communion which was to have been held at St. Nicholas's Church has been postponed because of the absence of the pastor, Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., who is in Ottawa, owing to the illness of Archbishop O'Brien.

Controlling Emotional Children

Sensitive Child in Need of Sympathy And Understanding

By LISA GRENELLE

What a problem they are—these emotional children! Up one minute, down the next; tears and tantrums; sudden "brushes", then sulks: "nobody loves me" days and silent days of martyrdom. A bit of a trial, these emotionalists!

But very worth while, if a little thought is given to handling them. Obviously they should be taught to control themselves. They must not be fussed over too much because, oh, how they love attention!

Yet these same children need sympathy and understanding more than any other type of child. They are very sensitive, and those "hurt feelings" are not just put on. They are genuine, even demonstrative, feel more intensely, demand more of life. Also they are ready and able to give more. Indeed, they must give, whether wisely or not, for they must have an outlet and satisfying outlet for their emotions. Therefore any form of child study that involves repression rather than planned exercise is sure to end in disaster. Also, they are probably just at the wrong moment when it is most essential.

USUALLY CREATIVE

The giehly emotional child must be provided with a harmless but potent method of expression. Such a child is almost always creative, or it has a particular bent for any of the arts, let him devote himself to it. Any actively creative expression is good, whether carpentering sculpture or anything in which he has initiative. Even copy work is allowed copy, to exercise his own thought and feeling.

If there is no definite bent, or if any inclination the child may show is not sufficiently absorbing to be satisfying, why not try him—or especially her—in dramatics? This need not mean that you have the stage in mind for him. Indeed, your plans and his own may be quite different.

But study the interpretation of character under stress—is the most satisfying of all methods of expression for such a child, because it is entirely active. The child may express himself not only with his mind and his eye, as in painting, but with his whole body. He may express, too, all his emotions, without limit or confinement.

DRAMATICS AND DANCING

At the same time, in acting the child gets exercise resulting through repetition and training he must learn to curtail his feeling and limit his interpretation of it. All this helps the child find and organize himself emotionally and teaches him to put his feelings under control.

Dancing I put second to acting as an emotional release for children and adolescents. Tap dancing, ballet or interpretive dancing is good exercise, keep'ng them physically fit besides giving them self confidence. Teach them or have them taught, or let them invent their own dances to the accompaniment of radio or victrola. This will give them a really creative outlet, while developing agility and grace.

By whatever means keep the emotional child occupied, and let that occupation be active and creative. This will give his pent up feelings release and make it easier for him to control them in every day life.

Look picturesque in a large hat of transparent fabric. A lovely model is a very flat hat with shallow crown. It is of smocked black crin. The crown has coiled green grass stems fastened to each side and a leaf in white and green relvet.

Pick daisies as one of the most useful of the floral prints. A new dinner suit is of black taffeta with a large daisy print in white, yellow and green. The jacket is loose with a tiny band of white daisies at the cuff. Bands of white daisies also mark the neckline and edge the belt of the frock.

Go away but don't forget that a good travelling coat is always needed. A new and nice model is of beige woolen trimmed with brown leather buttons and belt. The sleeves have dolman armholes and are half of notria widening at the wrist.

A sparkling career is certain for a smart dinner shoe. It is an oxford in heavy black satin and the eyelets are edged with a row of rhinestones. The tie lacings have tiny rhinestone balls to add to the glitter.

A life saver to old evening frocks for dinner dates is a wide, square collar of chiffon or organdie with a ruffly border and tucks in the many portions with a huge crushed corsage.

Searching for a dime is out of fashion, with a new handbag it has an ornament of cleisonne or gilt, a disc which when turned around shows an opening where coins are kept. Room for two quarters, nickles and dimes.

Correct Manners

SYMPATHY LETTER

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I had a cousin whom I loved dearly who was also and killed by his uncle about two months ago. I would like to know how to write his sister a letter of sympathy and I simply cannot. Could you help me please?

L.

Maybe this may help you to write this certainly very difficult letter:

Dearest Mary,

I wish that I could take your hand in mine, and tell you, cousin to cousin, how my heart aches for you in this terrible sorrow that has come to you. Such grief as yours is seems to be beyond the power of words to express but please know, dearest Mary, how profoundly we are all holding you in our hearts and prayers, and how deeply we are understanding what these awful sad days must be for you. We love you so dearly, so especially dearly, and how I wish that we could do something to make these days of readjustment without your beloved brother easier for you.

Is there anything that we can do, anything that you will tell us that we may do to help? Will you give us this privilege of sometimes this terrible burden that you are carrying in your loving heart? Do let us know.

Tommy is so too was dearly loved, such a precious boy he was, so fine and upstanding and lovable. The memory of him and of his sweet ways will always be a shining thing to us all.

Do, when you can, write us of you, how you are, what your plans are, and especially if you can plan to spend some time with us soon. We would do love to have you with us, to love and cherish as we have always loved and cherished you. We will do everything in our power to make your days comfortable and peaceful . . . won't you come to us?

Dearest, love to you, and our hearts full of sympathy and understanding and devotion.

Affectionately,

CASH PREFERED

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are a young couple planning to be married this summer. As we have been purchasing various articles for our home, such as lamps dishes, silverware, linens, glassware and a host of other things, we think a rather unusual way to have our relatives and friends give us any wedding gifts (such as is the custom in most marriages) and we have been wondering if it has ever been the custom for the couple to receive money as a wedding gift?

Providing this is correct, it would be more suitable to us. How could it be arranged in the proper way?

Thanking you in advance for your kindness.

A Happy Couple

Very often relatives and sometimes very intimate friends consult with the bride-to-be as to her wishes concerning wedding presents that she most wants, and in these cases, it is quite permissible to suggest to them that she would prefer a check for the amount that they had budgeted for the wedding gift. (Of course the bride-to-be would have to be especially understanding of the person by whom she is speaking, sure that this suggestion would be in good taste, for this person, sure that it would be the gracious and appropriate thing to do).

But in the case of the most friend and guest-to-be at the wedding, I can't see how you could carry out your plan of receiving money rather than another kind of gift. In the first place, it would be taking for granted that the person is going to give a gift, and this isn't quite the right thing to do. Next it wouldn't be graceful and in good form to suggest what we want rather than what the person wishes to give.

I am sure that every bride-to-be wishes that she might do just what you would like to do for them of course her home would be as she wishes it to be, have the accessories that she would choose with her own taste. But I'm afraid that this plan of yours isn't so easy in just this kind of world!

HAND-IN-GLOVE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a girl is being introduced to a man, especially to a member of the opposite sex, should she take off her glove when she shakes hands, ask to be excused while taking off her glove, or just shake hands with her glove on?

B.

Since it isn't considered necessary for a woman to remove her glove when she offers her hand for a handshake, she just doesn't do it and make no comment about not doing it. May I add, too that when the usual introduction of a man to a woman, a casual introduction, the woman doesn't offer to shake hands. But of course it is not incorrect for her to do so if she wishes, and if the introduction is an especially casual one, she often does.

Also may I say just a word about the beginning of your question. "When a girl is being introduced to a man". Be careful about saying this, for a man is introduced to a woman. "Miss Williams, may I present Mr. Allen," or "Miss Williams, Mr. Allen".

SHOWERS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it correct and good manners for a member of a girl who is to be a bride or was a bride secretly, to give her a shower? Considering the fact that she has no sisters, but has girl friends who intend giving her showers.

C. E. P.

Because of the obvious reason that a shower given by the mother or other near kin of the bride or groom does give the impression that the shower is more in the form of a "promotion", it is considered better form for a group of the friends of the bride-to-be to plan a shower for her.

GIVING THE BRIDE AWAY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When a young woman coming from an absolutely strange family, wishes to have a church wedding, to whom does she walk to the altar and, who is to give away? May her mother accompany her and also give her away? This young woman in question hasn't a male relative in the world, not even a distant cousin, over fifteen years of age, since they are either dead or out of the family of the male sur.

2. When a widow of middle age whose parents are dead, wishes to marry again, how should the formal announcements of the wedding read?

B.

1. When there is no male relative or friend of the family present the girl in marriage, she may walk down the aisle alone and later have her mother present her to whom she is giving her place, I think), or she may have her mother walk up the aisle with her.

2. This announcement may read:

Mrs. Mary Richard Smith

and

have the honour to announce their marriage

On Tuesday, the first of June nineteen hundred and thirty-four Chilcott, Ontario.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions that should appears submitted by readers.)

Board Room Gossip

New York, May 29.— It's been more or less of a "holiday" market for so long that one hardly little or nothing of today's operations calling a holiday activity.

Some bellevers are going to have an active market this summer. Certainly there is little less than a hope but these optimists say that when Wall Brothers Son of the war, the market may advance.
—D. J.

GRAIN

With practically not a drop of rain anywhere in wheat belt of U.S., or Canada when moisture is so badly needed it was a foregone conclusion that markets would be strong and higher. Forecast also holds no hope for any important precipitation. Crops might be scattered showers at isolated points. From world point of view situation is getting worse as Liverpool, July wheat closed 2¼ cents a bushel under ours. Consequently a readjustment of about 20 to 35 cents a bushel would have to occur before there could be any sizeable export business. Final threshing fields in Texas report yield of about 34 bus. to the acre. Kansas spring wheat may be taken as a criterion until we hear from more diversified districts. Reason for this included considerable improvement on scorns of the soft weather, which is very favorable for filling but with warmer weather in sight this may not be lasting.

Chicago—With a holiday tomorrow and somewhat unsettled weather forecast for parts of the northwest, a tendency to accept profits on the rallies has been in evidence in the wheat market.

Split Decision Gives Ross Welterweight Boxing Title over Fighting Jimmy McLarnin

Tireless Left Hand of Jewish Lightweight Earns Award

HUGE CROWD

No Knockdowns And McLarnin Unable to Reach With Right

By Sam Robertson, Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, May 29 (CP)—Barney Ross stood among the immortals of the boxing ring today because of a tireless left hand that might easily claim kinship to class one lightning. Directed by an agile, cool brain, that left drummed the welterweight crown off the brow of Jimmy McLarnin last night and made the lithe Chicago Hebrew the first fighting man ever to claim the lightweight and welter champions of the world as his own.

Some 65,000 sat under a starry sky in the Madison Square Garden Bowl on Long Island as the crafty hand wrote the ring history other lightweight masters, Benny Leonard one of them, attempted and failed. They sat, almost silently, through 15 slightly blood-spattered rounds as the Canadian's right with the cobra sting and Ross' left that crackles like a machine gun, turned the flow of battle this way and that.

Then a tumultuous acclaim went up from that living sea of white faces for the boy who had dared and buried the banshee that so long accompanied the Vancouver Irishman in his personal war against Jewish ringmen.

A sprinkling of boos and jeers greeted the announcement that McLarnin had swelled to an unbroken line of nine the welterweight rulers deposed in their first title defence. But then the decision of the officials wasn't unanimous.

Five Low Blows by McLarnin

One judge voted McLarnin the victor; the other spoke just as strongly for Ross. Without hesitation Referee Eddie Forbes cast the decisive vote in favor of the product of Chicago's West Side.

Five low blows, which Ross said did not damage him, automatically cost Jimmy that many rounds, even had his hooking left and heavy right given him the edge in those frames.

Mainly because he was outsped, McLarnin lost the title that took 10 years in the winning. He had held it one inactive year. The inactivity seemed to enter into it, too, for Jimmy saw more of his punches miss their mark last night than he had in his last 10 fights rolled into one.

He was shooting, however, at a target with the legs of a Percy Williams. Feline like, Ross would attack with a flurry of lefts and rights, then either force an exchanging clinch or dance out of danger. Jimmy's historic smile of battle was replaced by a look of grim determination as he sought a dancing, elusive chin to crush with his lethal right. But less than a dozen times could he locate it, and all but the once glancing blows followed.

Tears in Eyes

As against the triumphant smile Ross wore, there were tears in Jimmy's eyes as he hurried silently from the ring shorn of his title. It was unlikely that he wept over the loss of his crown. It seemed more likely Jimmy's heart just overflowed with chagrin because he had been unable to use the heavy ammunition that blasted his earlier path to the pinnacle.

In short he had been thwarted in a boxing match and Jimmy is only at his best in a fight.

There were moments of the 15 rounds when a ripping, tearing Ross gave the Vancouver belter a chance to belt. In the ninth round and through the twelfth, when the cherubic Canadian blasted ahead like a warship under forced draught in an effort to wipe out the earlier advantage Barney's incessant left had piled up, there were spots that teemed with action.

The hearty lightweight who weighed about 138 stood head to head and traded smash for smash with his 142 pound foe. But as quickly as the storm blew up, it blew itself out, usually with the fast tiring mittmen in each others clinching arms.

In all, the fans who paid some $225,000 to see the bout, found cause to leave their seats less than a dozen times to stand and cheer.

There were no real knockdowns, although in the ninth both bounced in the resin from the combined effort of being hit and went off balance. Ross, half turned as he took a looping right, lost his footing but bounded up without a count. He immediately let fly a left hook that caused McLarnin, as he ducked, to slip and land on his haunches. Jimmy also leaped up before the knockdown timekeeper could go into action.

The left with which the American whipped his opponent started the blood flowing from Jimmy's nose in the fourth round. A left hook cut a gash near Barney's mouth in the eighth and from then on he bled freely. In the last half of the fight both were frequently red smeared as they stabbed and slashed spasmodically, but never a knockdown blow cracked out in the almost still night air.

Mammoth Crowd

As the mammoth crowd, which ended a two year depression in the fight industry, poured up and over the rim of the bowl into the street, there was drama back by the dressing rooms.

While Barney accepted the congratulations of hundreds and said "it was grand fighting McLarnin, but he didn't hurt me," a little old lady sat weeping on a bench near his room. That was Barney's mother. They were tears of joy as she heard words of praise heaped upon the son she didn't want to be a prize fighter.

Fifty yards from there, in McLarnin's quarters, there were tears of the other sort. Many edged in to remind Jimmy of the fights ahead, but he hurried into street clothes, unmindful of the consolation, and soon was away alone to a destination none would reveal.

Old "Pop" Foster, who spied the little Celt in a kid's street corner fight and has managed him ever since, gently handled the well-wishers.

"Jimmy boy is alright," he said. "But leave him alone. He doesn't want to talk."

Split decision or no. There was no word of dissent with the official verdict from Jimmy or Foster. In explanation, all the veteran manager would say was "he should'a kept fighting."

That was the refrain he chanted from Jimmy's corner through the latter stages of the bout:

"Keep fighting Jimmy, keep fighting."

WINS MARATHON

Dave Schoales, 25, young Fort William iron-worker, won his second successive victory in the twentieth running of the Daily Times Journal ten-mile road race at Fort William, May 24. Schoales led a field of thirteen to the tape, setting the pace from the pop of the gun to finish in 55 minutes and 25 seconds, 34 1-2 seconds slower than his last year time. Bob Young, Fort William, came second and Paavo Lahde, Sudbury, third. Upwards of 20,000 viewed the classic from vantage points along the winding route.

The Albert College Rugby Field is being carefully groomed for a lacrosse game next week. Home and home games are being arranged with Deseronto Indians the first game to be played in Deseronto, Saturday being the probable date. On Thursday, June 7th., a general meeting will be held with delegates from Tweed, Trenton, Wellington, Deseronto and Aajmaa Club for the purpose of re-organizing the Bay of Quinte Lacrosse League.

Paddling— A keen interest is maintained by the members in paddling.

On Sunday last a group of members travelled to Gananoque as guests of Gananoque Canoe Club. They were thrilled by the Dominion Champion experts when they put on several of their classy demonstrations. In the afternoon Jack Kidd paddled along with an expert and Jack just took to paddling as a fish does to water. There is not any doubt that the members of the Aajmaa Club will take to paddling.

CURRENT SPORT

(Day By Day)

Five members of the Aajmaa Club journeyed to Gananoque on Sunday where they were royally received and entertained by the members of Gananoque Canoe Club. With Bill Fry in charge of the expedition Grant Ashley, Jack Kidd, Jimmie Ketcheson and Johnnie McLaughlin motored there, the latter three being the ones to be actively interested in canoeing. Johnnie and Ollie Wing, Hank Littlejohn and "Moon" Harding, all expert paddlers, gave the local contingent an exhibition of their skill and later showed the boys the rudiments of handling a blade and shell. Later Kidd, Ketcheson and McLaughlin were allowed to try their skill in a double shell and according to reports took to the sport like ducks to water.

It is the intention of the Aajmaa Club to sponsor and support a junior canoe crew in Belleville, with singles, tandem, fours and later possibly a war canoe crew. As was pointed out by the Gananoque Club they started some years ago by training in ordinary canoes when they competed at a regatta they borrowed shells and thus built up an organization that they are proud of. Of course when that club grew they purchased their own shells, and the same could apply here.

Two members of the Gananoque Club are coming to Belleville next Sunday to look over a possible course and assist in organization. If the project meets with the approval of locally interested boys a regatta will be present during Centennial Week with some nine or ten events on the program. Some of the best paddlers from Gananoque have promised to come to Belleville to assist in making the regatta a success. Those desirous of aiding or joining a local club are requested to get in touch with Bill Fry at the Aajmaa Club rooms, 294 Front St. The success of a future canoe club here depends on the support given by boys of 'teen age, as it is a young man's sport and takes a great deal of training. Once the foundation is established it is felt that a canoe club would outdraw and outnumber any other aquatic organization in the city.

During last night's practice Manager Mills announced he had released Chuck Barriage to the Victorias for more seasoning. Barriage is recognized as having one of the best throwing arms in the Central League, but has not been hitting with any degree of consistency this season and will be afforded a better opportunity to improve while playing with the Victorias rather than sitting on the bench for the senior team. He is a natural fielder and will improve in hitting. In all probability another man will also be turned over to the intermediates in order to bolster them for the opening of the season at Brighton Wednesday. Manager Panning will have his charges out to their final workout this evening and the line-up will be picked then.

Tomorrow the Belleville Senior Softball League gets going for their long grind with a play-off berth in the O.A.S.A. as each club's objective. The opening game sees the Canada Dry team hook up with Grills' Garage. The "Drys" take the place of the Delaney Bearcats, a team that has been sponsored for the past three years by J. T. Delaney. A meeting is being held in the Aajmaa club rooms tonight for all interested in soccer.

For the purpose of passing on players' certificates the executive of the Bay of Quinte League met at the "Y" last night. Some little discussion was entered in upon some of the names brought before the meeting by Picton and Napanee, but after the usual controversy that follows such meetings everybody left quite satisfied with their lot. Ernie Gibbard, secretary of the loop, made us a present to all games, league and exhibition played in Gibbard Park this summer. The Victorias have signed Cy Barriage, who made a good impression with the Nats last fall, as well as a couple of well known softball players about town. The Victorias have Bud Wilkins and Russ Langman to start the season off on the hilltop. While on the subject of baseball Art Young's Crystalacs won their first game of the season by downing the Shannonville "Sluggers" 6 to 1 in an exhibition tilt last evening.

ALEMITES WIN SHORT GAME

Defeat Shannonville 6-1 And Look Like Real Junior Squad

In a pre-season exhibition game the local Crystalac juniors defeated the Shannonville "Sluggers" by the score of 6 to 1 in an abbreviated game played at the Alemite Field last evening. Manager Art Young used three hurlers during the six innings played starting "Wild Bill" Hammett, who through wildness in the initial frame suffered the only score registered against the "Lac" kids. Hammett then settled away, however, and breezed through the next frame in excellent style.

Frank Lee with his slow breaking curve from the left hand side completely baffled the visitors the next two innings, while Weeks, the final local hurler, although nicked for three safeties, managed to blank the visitors for the next two innings. Doherty with a fast breaking curve hurled the complete game for the Shannonville nine. Don Thomas and Jack Kidd split the local receiving duties. Sinfield and Gray led the locals at bat.

The line-ups: Shannonville—Reid, 2b, H. Houston, 3b, Bell c, Bennett ss, Liddle 1b, Milligan rf, B. Houston cf, Burtt, lf, Doherty p.

Crystalacs —Gray rf, Sinfield, lf, Little 2b, Sero ss, Rigby 3b, Cole 1b, Johnson cf, Thomas Kidd c, Hammett, Lee and Weeks p.

Umpires—White and Darrah.

Score by innings:—

SYRACUSE IN FIFTH PLACE

Winning Streak Now Extended to Five Straight

By the Associated Press

Off on another winning streak, Syracuse Chiefs had jumped into fifth place in the International League standings by virtue of their fifth successive victory.

Given excellent pitching by Bobby Coombs, the Chiefs turned back Albany Senators yesterday 4 to 1, although they made only seven hits off Milligan and Porter. Milligan was yanked after he had allowed one run in the second and had forced another run over in the third by walking Max Rosenfelt with the bases loaded. Porter then came in and Taylor greeted him with a single that scored the other two runs. After that Porter held the Chiefs to two hits but the damage had been done. Coombs, meanwhile, breezed along comfortably. He gave only five hits and was helped by three double plays. Del Bissonette's double in the fourth drove in Albany's lone run.

A three run rally in the ninth gave Newark a night game decision over Baltimore 9-7. The Orioles had jumped to the fore with a four-run splurge in the eighth. Vito Tamuli came into the game as a relief pitcher in the ninth and set down Gilbert, Puccinelli and Abernathy on strikes to protect the lead Newark had gained in the first half of the frame. Vince Barton hit his 14th. homer for Newark and Alexander also contributed on for the Bears and Puccinelli one for Baltimore.

Johnny Wilson and Lefty Michaels battled through 10 innings in a fine pitching duel before Rochester could earn a 1-0 decision over Buffalo in another night clash. Michaels, pitching for Red Wings allowed Buffalo only two hits. Wilson was touched more freely— for nine hits—but was effective in the pinches.

Toronto and Montreal did not play.

CARDINALS ON TOP RUNG OF NATIONAL LOOP

St. Louis Wins 20 Games of Last 26 Games Played

GIANTS WIN 2

Defeat Pirates in Two Smart Hurling Duels

(By Herbert Barker, Associated Press Sports Writer)

The banner of St. Louis Cardinals waved high over the National League today.

Starting from the depths of the second division, Frankie Frisch's Red Birds had climaxed a long streak, netting 20 victories in their last 26 games, by pulling into the lead for the first time this season.

To "Wild Bill" Hallahan, crack southpaw, fell the honor of pitching the Cardinals into first place. He shut out the Phillies with seven hits yesterday, while his teammates rattled 15 hits off the fences in Baker's bowl and coasted to a 10-0 decision. Only once was Bill in danger. Bartell's single and John Moore's double put runners on second and third with none out but Hallahan turned on the heat and set down the next three men on strikes.

But to oust Pittsburgh Pirates from the top rung the Cardinals needed help and they got it from New York Giants who turned back the Corsairs twice in a pair of epic pitching duels, 3-2 in 11 innings, and 1-0. Travis Jackson punched out home runs for the deciding tally in each game. Larry French and Hal Schumacher allowed no hits for seven innings and only two apiece in the first nine innings of the extra-inning affair. After the Pirates had counted twice in the 10th, the Giants came back to tie the score and then Mel Ott's home run in the second inning of the nightcap was the only score of a great duel between Carl Hubbell and Ralph Birkofer.

This combination of results gave the Cardinals first place by a one-game margin over the Pirates. The Giants moved into third position when Chicago Cubs were beaten by Boston Braves 5-3. Benny Frey's fine pitching gave Cincinnati an 8-1 decision over Brooklyn.

American League

Cleveland maintained its narrow lead over New York Yankees in the American League race with a sensational 8-5 victory over Philadelphia Athletics. Jimmy Foxx's 10th and 11th home runs gave the A's four runs in the first three innings but the Indians kept pace and finally won out in the 10th, when Earl Averill's double scored Billy Knickerbocker. Lou Gehrig hit his 11th and 12th homers and Babe Ruth, Tony Lazzeri and Jack Saltzgaver contributed one apiece as the Yankees slugged St. Louis Browns into submission 13-9.

Paced by Hank Greenberg who hit a pair of homers, Detroit Tigers drove Lefty Grove out of the box in six innings and beat Boston's Red Sox 12-8. Chicago's 17 hits gave the White Sox an 11-7 verdict over Washington Senators.

NOT THEORIES! By Alex Morrison

I think I've issued this warning before, but it's important enough to repeat.

Smokers dropping their cigars or cigarettes on the grass while they play a shot and then picking them up again to put them into their mouths little realize the danger of infection to be had from the various acids and fertilizers used on the grass.

This practice is generally resorted to on the putting greens where the grass is almost always covered with some sort of foreign matter.

Place your smoke on the tee box or let your caddy hold it for you while you shoot, but don't expose yourself to infections so easily picked up.

BOYS TAME YOUNG SEADOG

This young seadog is the unique pet of Edward and Edgar McLaughlin of Saint John New Brunswick. The lads lassoed the amphibian on the beach near their home, and, after keeping it captive overnight, decided to return it to its home in the sea. It swam away, but next morning awakened the neighbors with its barking, or whatever seadogs do at the McLaughlin's door. It continued the uproar until the boys turned out and caught it a breakfast of fish. Now it is as tame as a real canine, flops about after its masters wherever they go, swims after their boat when they go to tend their nets. Edward and Edgar, with an eye on a circus engagement, think they'll teach Fido tricks.

The Romantic Runaway

by KATHARINE HAVILAND-TAYLOR

CHAPTER XLVIII

Sir Aubrey had told Pablito the whole story and now sat waiting for the young man to speak. Pablito seemed too quiet, too contained. His manner made Sir Aubrey remember the pitiable twisting of Mary's hands. He could not guess whether his confession and his promise to do everything possible to make amends would count or not.

He had told his wife and daughters the same story, promising them the inheritance that was rightfully theirs but declaring that the house and enough to run it must be his son's. His son's! And now that son sat before him, so strangely quiet.

Suddenly Pablito spoke a little metallically. "I suppose she had a rotten time of it," he said.

"It killed her," Sir Aubrey admitted.

Pablito pulled up a sleeve to show on his upper arm a jagged, deep white scar. "My foster mother did that," he said. "She did it one day when her mood was no worse than usual. I saw her in Key West a month ago. Noyes had been supporting her, not knowing, of course who she was. She recognized me and her worn-out heart stopped of fright. She knew I had too much to remember. But I didn't really blame her. It's you I blame! You and men like you—desert children and leave them to fend for themselves! Norris Noyes is my father—"

"That —is your answer?" Sir Aubrey asked.

Pablito nodded. "I will take nothing from you!" he said. "It is too late."

Standing stiffly, he watched Sir Aubrey make his way rather slowly toward the stairway, realizing as he did so (and trying to ignore the thought) that Sir Aubrey was an old man—a very old man. But Pablito could not forget the woman who had been his mother—the woman whose name, Sir Aubrey had said, was Mary Marriage.

As he stood thus, rigid from the moment that had passed. Noyes came hurrying up the stairs. Noyes' eyes were bright his thin cheeks flushed.

"Pablito—" he said breathlessly, "I have a message for you. Estelle Field wants to see you."

In an amazingly short time (considering the distance he had to cover) Pablito was tipping a shabby little boy who opened the gate of the Field estate for him. Then he went to the garden that faced the sea.

He saw Estelle in the twilight which had thickened swiftly. She was standing against a wall and she was trembling as she waited. When he had reached her he found that he could not speak. Pablito dropped to his knees and felt her hand on his hair. "Oh please!" she whispered. "Please!"

And he knew that she meant, "Get up! Kiss me!" He struggled to his feet; to hold her close and kiss her frantically. To murmur things he had not said for so long—those exaggerations that are but a part of the truth when one is in love.

"Don't ever leave me again!"

"Dearest, I never will," he answered.

"I love you more than ever, Pablito!"

"My dearest! My darling!"

"I can't live —now—without you!" Her hands, as she spoke, moved over his arms and shoulders, clinging, reassuring him that she was really there. In a moment he thought—trembling and breathless as he looked down at her—in a moment he would wake again. "Is it true?" he managed to whisper.

He heard, Oh, Pablito, dearest!" and then a sob. "Of course it's true."

Sir Aubrey had made ready for the night and crawled beneath the mosquito netting that covered the immense bed. All his hoping now was at an end. He was going back to Lower Girtings to see on the terrace a line of round-cheeked, pale-eyed women who would welcome him with love, even though knowing what he had been. There would be no son in the old house—no son who would take his name and bring there, in time, his own wife and son. And now time and circumstances would snuff out his name as a cold wind snuffs out a candle.

He realized he had hoped a great deal as he lay, trembling, under the mosquito netting. And he knew he had loved Pablito by the hurt that Pablito had wrought him. Suddenly tears gathered in his eyes and rolled down his cheeks by the handkerchief in the pocket of his Bond street pyjamas.

Then there was a tap on the door. For a moment Sir Aubrey was minded to ignore it. He could hardly see anyone now, but something made him struggle free of the mosquito netting and move unsteadily toward the door. There he called out, "What is it?" in a voice that he tried to make crisp.

"It is I—Pablito," he heard. Sir Aubrey opened the door. Pablito stepped into the room—not a Pablito Sir Aubrey had ever seen before but a new version, strong and smiling.

Sir Aubrey regarded the youth with wonder, forgetting the tears on his cheeks. Pablito saw them, remembering suddenly that there were tears in the world and reasons for them.

"I came back," he said, laying a hand on Sir Aubrey's arm, "because I know that I was brutal. I'm not —feeling brutal any more."

"I'm glad," said Sir Aubrey. Then he had to wipe away the tears because they were rolling down his cheeks again. "Oh dash it" he murmured, wholly shamefaced. Then he had to sit down in a wicker chair that squeaked as he settled in it. For when a great deal of joy or pain came to him Sir Aubrey realized that the years were creeping upon him and that those years were numbered.

Pablito stood looking down at the older man, a hand on his shoulder. Now, without shame, Sir Aubrey groped for Pablito's hand and held it in his.

"Father" said Pablito.

Sir Aubrey managed to say ,"Eh, what?" almost crisply.

"Father," Pablito repeated, "I'm going to be married. The girl who has promised to marry me has lost her father. So if you'll dress you can come to our wedding and give her away—to me. You'll be gaining a daughter. It's all very sudden — and rather amazing, isn't it?" He laughed a little unsteadily as he finished speaking.

"Then some day at Lower Girtings—" Sir Aubrey began, but Pablito could not let him go on with his dream.

"I'm sorry to rush you," he said, "but we really must go right away. Estelle is waiting for me. She is waiting for me!"

Then after a deep, indrawn breath Pablito's teeth set on his lower lip, his hands clenched and for a moment he closed his eyes. Influence with the authorities had made it possible to arrange the marriage ceremony hastily. Within half an hour Estelle would be his wife. His wife—!

"I'm sorry to hurry you," he went on steadily, "but you see—"

"Oh, quite naturally!" said Sir Aubrey, struggling into his garments. "So it's to be a wedding and two of you to come home to the Small House—until I go on—And Noyes, too—if he will—. I'm no end grateful to him."

Again he mopped his eyes. "A wedding at midnight is romantic, isn't it? I say, dear boy—er—my son, hand me my braces, will you?"

TARZAN THE TERRIBLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

A lucky accident had made known to the ape-man the rapid course of events which had occurred in A-lur while he was struggling to escape from the gryf's pit. Now he was following, in disguise, behind Pan-sat, the high priest's trusted messenger. At last the underpriest emerged into the courtyard beyond the temple, and shortly after Tarzan did likewise. Here the ape-man went his own way. He reached the Forbidden Garden undetected and climbed over the high wall.

The garden was deserted; yet he knew that she he sought must be here somewhere. A light flickered from the sleeping apartment of the princess O-lo-a. To his surprise the place was also unguarded. As he stole through several apartments he heard voices raised in anger and excitement. Making his way onward the sound he drew the skin hangings slightly and looked within. Two women were battling with a Ho-don warriors. At the moment the ape-man saw them the warrior had seized one by the hair and bent over her with raised knife.

Casting aside the encumbering headdress of the dead priest, the ape-man leaped across the intervening space and, grasping the brute from behind, struck him a single, terrific blow. As the creature fell forward dead, the two women recognized Tarzan simultaneously. "Tell me," he cried, "Where is the white woman Ja-don brought here from the temple?" "Mo-sar, the father of this thing," replied O-lo-a, "carried here away but a few moments ago." "Which way?" cried Tarzan. Pan-at-lee replied: "He must have gone toward his own city on the Dark ake!"

Tarzan disappeared as quickly as he had come. He searched the outskirts of the city until nearly dawn but discovered no trace of the perfidious Mo-sar or the stolen woman. Often during the night he encountered stray bands of fighters still continuing their battle to thwart the high priest's plan to seize the palace. Several times he joined a scattered force of Ja-don's until they had won. As the sun rose, confident that his beloved was not in the temple or palace, Tarzan turned toward Mo-sar's stronghold, Ta-lur, the Dark City.

The man with the HOE says—

Cabbage and cauliflower plants should be transplanted in the cool part of the day. Late afternoon is a good time.

Make a sowing of corn every two weeks, so that you will have a constant supply at the height of its goodness.

Every garden should have an herb border. Plant sage for the beauty of its foliage as well as for its flavor. It is an excellent gray-leaved plant for the flower garden.

Make stakes for beans and tomatoes of a good quality wood. Cedar is fine for this purpose, and will last years longer than ordinary soft wood stakes.

Celeriac makes fine flavoring for soups.

Savoy cabbage is the finest you can grow in the home garden, and it is seldom found on the market, because it does not keep well and should be used immediately after picking.

Overcrowding is the cause of many vegetable failures, and it is so easy to avoid. Be unscrupulous in your thinning.

Watch hotbeds and cold frames closely to regulate conditions of moisture and ventilate whenever the weather will permit. A few degrees above freezing is a signal to give fresh air.

It is not too early to begin work on the lawn. Fertilizer may be spread and weeds pulled any day.

An interesting book for delphinium lovers, recently published in England (Macmillan, U.S.A.) is Delphiniums. Their History and Cultivation, by George A. Phillips, well-known grower and hybridizer.

Begin saving any leaves that weren't raked up last fall for a compost heap. All can be spaded in and make good manure and humus.

Try a row of cultivated mustard for greens. It is worth growing even if it sounds like a weed. Lots of leaf to it.

Larkspurs, both annual and perennial, like a soil rich in lime.

When watering the lawn do so thoroughly. Frequent, but inadequate waterings, drive the roots near the surface in search of moisture where the hot sun will damage them.

Watch the insects that eat the leaves of plants and lawn. Apply insecticides early to prevent possible damage

Little Benny's Note Book

Mr. and Mrs. Hews came over to play bridge with pop and ma, and pop and Mr. Hews started to tawk about feeling healthy, pop saying, There's ony one anser, and that's exercize, and there's ony one exercize that never fales, and that's wawking. It takes a good stiff wawk every day, with the shoulders back and the stummick in and the toes out, to pep up the old corpuscles and keep the blud in the red, he said.

I subscribe to that, Mr. Hews said. There's nothing like a long brisk wawk for shaking up the liver and holding down the stummick, he said, By gollies, he said, and pop said, By gollies, Yewstace, what would you say to combining our resources and werking out this proposition to the limit? I mean how about the 2 of us assembling brite and erly every morning and stepping down town at the rate of about 5 knotts an hour? he said.

Nothing would please me better, in fact nothing would please me as well, Mr. Hewes said. The more I think of it the keener I am to get the procession started, he said, and pop said, That suits me elegant, the sooner the quicker, that's my motto.

Tomorrow morning's the soonest I can think of ma said, ony of course you'll have to tear yourself out of bed like a spartan of old instead of bending your usual energies to getting 40 more winks and so on add infinitum, hee hee, and Mrs Hews, said, Yes, and Yewstace will haff to forgo his 40 minnit breakfist conference with his ham and eggs and the newspaper, hee hee.

Tomorrow morning seems a suitable date to me, how about you, Yewstace? pop said, and Mr. Hews said, I suppose so, I meen why not? The ony thing is, the wether report says tomorrow's going to be cloudy and windy, and I must admit I detest a lot of wind.

I'm not partial to it myself, we'll fix a date later, pop said, and ma said, Hee hee, men are funny people.

Wich they are, and so are ladies.

SAME TREATMENT TO ALL

have given me a wonderful and responsibility and I will not leave anything undone to live up to what is expected of me. My trip through the north section of the county has shown me that there, more than anywhere else, they feel the need of a change in government, and are fully determined that it shall be so.

Passing tribute was paid by Dr. Faulkner to his fellow workers and supporters, who had assisted so nobly throughout the trip.

NO PERSONALITIES

"The issue before you," warned the speaker, "is not between the Conservative and Liberal party. All personalities and issuences have nothing at all to do with this campaign for better government. It is an issue, that is vital and one, that strikes at the heart of every resident in this province, no matter of what age. In the north this is particularly felt. Issues up there are vital and important. Those farmers have their troubles the same as you, only more so. Their problems multiplied. While in the north we were getting relief, they were not there to see for ourselves conditions first hand. We were struck by the absence of newspapers and radio. Good, honest, hard-working people, whose only request is that they be given good government and half a chance to live. They feel the need for a change. They are burdened under debt that is crushing them under its load. They are determined that this time in hand when something must be done."

The speaker referred to the $600,000,000 of debt, which was said had been saddled on the taxpayer, the direct attention to the enormous rate at which it was piling up each day and the client increasing expenditures in nearly every department. "Your grandchildren will never live to see this debt paid off," he remarked, "and, therefore, refuse to tolerate any longer the extravagance of Mitchell F. Hepburn and his colleagues."

ASKS CO-OPERATION

Dr. Faulkner pleaded with those present to forget all political differences "and work for the good of the country." "We are units as one to secure in the future honest and efficient and forward administration for everybody, whether he be north or south east or west or south in this riding. The co-ordination and co-operation should will be given to everyone, if I'm elected," he concluded amid loud applause.

A case was cited to prove statements to the speaker, that residents of the northern section of this county, who were known to be Liberal cases along. "He told me that all his life he had voted Tory, but now it was time for a change."

"I shook his hand. Thanked him for his vote."

"Don't misunderstand me; I'm not voting for you. I'm voting to save the country," the visitor hastened to add as he was replied.

"That's the feeling in the northern part of the riding," supplied Dr. Faulkner.

Road and highway work at increased pay as carried on at present was dubbed by the speaker as "nothing more than a bribe, which is coming out of the money owned by the taxpayer."

"We have a sad state of affairs in the back sections of the county. The farmers have deserted their farms. No seed is being sown, No land is being worked as a rule. Owners are at work on the Provincial highways. They have been taken from their farms and put on that job which is absolutely unnecessary at this time, but they are getting $3.00 per day. Last year they worked a whole day for 18 cents. And they had to walk to work. They were told that if they missed their car they would be taken off relief. They would be walked seven miles. Now they are getting two dollars a day. Is it necessary for Bill Breadon, C.N.R. president of Trenton and address Belleville unemployed?

"And I ask you, if you believe in that system of compulsion that I then vote for Bill Ireland. If you don't believe in it, then get out and work your hardest to show them that ever man has a little scheme of his own."

CONFIDENCE EXPRESSED

"It is impossible to express the confidence, that exists all through the county over the outcome of the coming election," asserted the speaker. "Sir John A. Macdonald once said that elections were pretty much like horse races. Although I'm not a judge of horses, I believe I've got a real pair on to put your money on the Liberal horse. For as sure as anything can be cure, there is going to be a change and one for the better. But there must be nothing left undone to make victory sure and certain. We must not relax our efforts, but work harder as the time draws near. Elections are won by votes. Make sure that you are on the list. They will be turned in, and copies will be kept at this headquarters. It is the duty of everyone to see that they are voted."

Youth was given a rousing invitation by Dr. Faulkner to join the progressive movement and assist in any manner it could, and to spurn the young people that the future of the country depends, he told them.

As president of the Trentieth Century Club, Mr. Harold Holton who has accompanied Dr. Faulkner into the north section of the riding, arranging speaking dates and issues and, that they had covered thirty-two of the thirty-five homes in the area Tuesday night. "We went to the end of the trail road, stopped at the last and then turned further to find them. Everywhere we found the people in the best of spirits and optimism. They are just as wideawake back there as they are down in the front township and they are not to be fooled either. They can't over the issues of the day. Interest in town was the most encouraging."

Mr. Holton paid sincere appreciation to the work that had been done so far in this section. He pleaded with the Liberal workers to keep up the fight. "Don't relax. The government couldn't even get a majority when we were in the woods on the roadside last year, but they will be a big one in the past winter, when it was needed the most."

$9 P.C. WORKING CLASS

"Don't forget," Mr. Holton warned, "this isn't just a fight between Grits and Tories. It is for our existence. Eighty per cent. of the $9 per capita are those, who walk to work to make a living. But, do you think, that they are getting anything from it? Not anything of us? The rich get rich and the poor poorer. There must be a rebellion on in the country just as surely as there has been one running this province in wide stations, and running deeper into debt day by day. What will happen if the present government is returned to office is another matter. Premier Hepburn says he can't reduce expenses; Hepburn says he can cut it in two. It is for you to decide to believe and align yourselves with."

The speaker referred to the early struggles of the Liberal party under Mr. Hepburn and the high esteem in which he had been held by his own folk in Elgin County and the fight he had put up in Kent where wherever he is known. "A good honest, upright, and able man, who has proved himself a capable same government and will make good his promises," was the title bestowed by Mr. Holton on the leader.

Instances of where money had been spent, by the present government with little or no return for the money were cited by Dr. Faulkner, including the Dominion Power and Transmission, which was purchased at $5,000,000 claimed, and then offered free with no takers and the Beauharnois and Abitibi projects were also cited as instances of poor business methods. Deficits of the various departments were also shown by the speaker, who declared, "every department doing departments were forced to turn over their profits to support needless waste in others. "Twenty million dollars were taken in by the Ontario Department of Highways, and only six million of this was spent on roads. Hepburn promises, that he could get twice the work on the roads at no more cost than at present" said the speaker.

In his message to the younger people, Mr. Hepburn urged them to organize more thoroughly than they had ever done before. From now on, he said, plenty of hard work remained to be done, and nothing must be left to chance no matter how sure things looked. "Crosses on the ballots are the only election cards, and we want to be sure of ours."

Dr. Faulkner is elected representative of West Hastings, then paid always be glad that is happened," he promised.

"Ours is something phenomenal happens between now and the 19th, this country will be the greatest landslide in history."

Gave Also of Club

In his introduction, Ormonde Dunkley, president of the Junior Liberal Conservative Club of the city, chairman of the evening, called attention to the aims and objects of the club. "It is not a political club, your aim then is to know and understand the politics of the day. After the election it is over we intend to continue along social and intellectual lines."

Mr. Butler referred to the debt of Ontario at the present time, and stated that it was mounting at the rate of $600 per day. "It must be apparent to anyone that since the Conservative government has almost continually ruled for the past thirty years, except for a short period of the Drury regime, it must be the fault of the present government, that the debt is increasing at such a rapid rate.

The Twentieth Century Club is essentially Canadian, and most of the members will be entitled to vote this year. And our vote is the vote to guard, that priceless heritage—British Law and Liberty."

In expressing his thanks for the splendid meeting, Dr. Faulkner, from Trenton, Deseronto and elsewhere throughout the district, president Butler called attention to a meeting rally that would be held in some suitable hall in the city on June 11th when neighboring clubs would participate. A prominent outside speaker will also be present, along with others.

PLAINFIELD W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Plainfield W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Hall, on Mrs. Fred Hall, with an attendance of twenty-one. The President, Mrs. Hall opened the meeting with hymn 405 followed with prayer by Mrs. Everson. Roll call was answered with current events. The study by Clarence Hall took charge of the devotional period, reading by Mrs. Donald Hall entitled "Lest we Forget". Solo by Mrs. Harry Harrison. Instructive readings by Mrs. Ison and Helen Hall. Perth Temperance Federation last night decided at Stratford against entering a candidate in the elections after members had the privilege of hearing Hon. Dr. Manion, Conservative leader, address the meeting. One member was heard to say that whether the meeting was a Liberal caucus or not, the speech of the candidate was not asked to appear also.

"The situation in North Renfrew reminds me of the time when the two candidates who had disputed the right to represent the Liberals withdrew. They are Dr. F. N. Crowder and A. A. Harrington. A. H. C. Trottier, former Belle River Rover, was the executive's choice as candidate if Mitchell F. Hepburn appears. Dr. Gardiner last fall was named candidate and then this spring, when a rift appeared in the executive, Mr. Marentette was named candidate.

Yesterday they both withdrew and gave their support to Dr. Trottier. The Minister of Mines spoke at Coniston last night and described Ontario's mining regulations as the most advanced in the world. Mr. McCrea said the government had backed the mining industry to the utmost and was responsible for its advance.

At Galt, Hon. Leopold Macaulay, the Highways Minister, charged the Liberals had attempted to make "a deal" with the C.C.F. in regard to placing candidates in the field but that in Hamilton the offer had been spurned by a C.C.F. candidate.

McBride in Race

Mr. Marsin, Public Welfare Minister, also made a statement in defence of the government's record. He spoke at Dundas Tulls and Mr. Nixon, the Progressive Chieftain, addressed an Astronaut meeting by declaring charges, that his friendship with the Liberal Leader was of late occurrence were untrue. He said in the early days of the United Farmers of Ontario when that body was flourishing, Mr. Hepburn was secretary of the U.F.O. in Elgin and he was secretary in Brant County. They both had the same ideals then as now.

Mayor M. M. MacBride of Brantford, stepped into the campaign as an Independent candidate who will have the support of the Liberal executive. Mayor MacBride accepted the nomination at an open meeting when F. F. D. Wallace, President of the Brantford Liberal Association declared the executive would co-operate and that its one aim was to defeat Mr. Martin, Conservative candidate.

The executive, he said, would "everything in his power" to defeat the Minister of Public Welfare.

Workingmantobe Helped if Henry Govt. Returned Says William H. Ireland

W. H. Ireland Addresses Co-operative Workers' Association

REVIEWS RECORD

Believes Government Has Always Stood Behind Workingman

The Minimum Wage Act as a protection for Ontario workmen, already explored by the Conservative party, and one of the strong planks in the party platform could and probably will be worked out immediately to the satisfaction of all concerned if the Henry Government is returned to the polls, if Mr. Henry is returned to office, I will consider it my duty to push it along," asserted Mr. W. H. Ireland, Conservative candidate for West Hastings at a crowded meeting of the Trades and Labor Council, which held in the Y.M.C.A. rooms last evening.

Back from a tour of the northern section of the riding, Mr. Ireland was in high spirits and confidence. He was accorded a hearing and a rousing reception by the local workingmen, and scores of citizens, who packed the hall to hear the Conservative candidate who is a native to his Belleville constituents. "Make no mistake about it, I will be returned to office. And when I do go back there will be plenty of work to do, for there is a long list of which seems to be a pressing question just now, is only one of the things that will be undertaken. Others will follow, he volunteered.

Introduced by Mr. W. H. Newman, general manager of the Bridge Coal, plant of the Sterling-Vulcan Coal and Alemite Corporation, who acted as chairman of the evening, Mr. Ireland referred briefly to an introductory remark made by the chairman.

"Ernie has told you, that better times are in the offing. That is only natural. Better times are on the way. Perhaps we're not out of the woods yet, but the distance from here is not far, and signs are better every day."

His address, he informed those present was primarily an address to the workingmen.

Northumberland Electors Hear Issues of Day Discussed

Campbellford, Ont., May 30 (CP)—Ontario electors had the assurance today that as long as Premier George S. Hepburn, leader of the Ontario Liberal party.

Premier Henry, addressing some 2,000 electors from Northumberland constituency last night, traced development of the system of control over sale of liquor and upheld the Government policy for fixed sale of beer as a lead from the drinking of "hard" liquors to beer.

PRIMATE HITS AT GAMBLING

"Filching Money From People" For Religion "is Deplored

HALIFAX, May 30.—In charging the Nova Scotia Synod, Most Rev. C. J. Yorwith, Primate of the Church of England in Canada, vigorously condemned lotteries as a means of obtaining church monies and gave his views on the ethical, moral and secular affairs.

"The chaotic condition of the world" he said, "which has resulted from a reckless and demoralizing effort to progress by the secular methods provided by a machine age has more or less demonstrated the thoughtful minds the impossibility of anything in which the hand of a supernatural power is overlooked.

Speaking on the employment of gambling devices in "filching money from people" for the service of God, the Archbishop declared that "sweepstakes, which it is sought from time to time to legalize, I hope will never be allowed in Canada."

TAMPERED WITH PLANE CHARGE OF FLIERS

London, May 30—(CP)—Capt. George A. Pond emerged today from the aeroplane in which he and Lieut. Osmar Saleski recently flew the Atlantic had been maliciously tampered with before they left New York.

Claiming that he had definite proof, Pond traced trouble the fliers encountered to the alleged sabotage before they left. He said that the valve admitted to regulate the gas flow to the engines, was turned to New York.

"We have evidence of three types of tampering," Pond said. "There were strips of cardboard in the oil tank and a tin "filler cap in the oil line. The main feed line from the rear of the gas tank was definitely shut off and the fuel system, one of which I filled myself were emptied."

"Particularly foreign articles in the oil tank line did not prevent fuel from getting through, though they may have restricted the flow of material. Tampering with the oil tank is more serious and could not possibly have happened accidentally."

MANY CARP SEEN IN MOIRA RIVER

Plowing their way up the Moira River through the shallow water and over the bars in the centre of the stream to the deeper pools of water just below the lower bridge, scores of hefty carp in a large school provided considerable excitement for unemployed of the city who congregated on the lower stone river wall on Wednesday morning devising ways and means of capturing some of the heavy specimens. The more venturesome of their numbers donned hip rubber boots and attempted to herd the big fish into shallow water but with little success.

No reason was given for the sudden appearance of the carp. Some of the specimens weighed between fifteen and twenty pounds.

FATHER SAVES CHILD AFIRE

Theodore Lee Burns Hands Putting Out Fire in Child's Clothing

Badly seared about the upper parts of her body, including her face, neck and chest after she had been enveloped in flames from her clothing that had been ignited while playing with matches in her home at noon today, little Mary Lee, five-year-old daughter of Theodore Lee, 71 Dundas street, east, is in the Belleville General Hospital at present under medical care.

Although the burns are extensive they are of superficial nature, according to Drs. J. J. Robertson and Chas. Adams who were immediately called in attendance. The little victim is expected to recover.

Medical care was also required for her father who sustained badly burned hands through his efforts to extinguish the burning clothing of his daughter when aroused by her screams.

The child had been left momentarily unattended in the home and had picked up a fallen match. With childish curiosity she had succeeded in lighting it after scratching it on the floor. Her dry clothing immediately ignited and flames enveloped her tiny body. But for the prompt response of her father to the child's screams a serious and unhappy ending would have followed. When advised of the plight of his daughter she was found to be with all her clothing afire.

Kiwanis Stage And Screen Show Receives Personal Endorsement

"I have no hesitation in placing my personal guarantee behind the Kiwanis Stage and Screen show and consider it the best show value that has perhaps ever been offered a discriminating Belleville audience," this statement describes in all sincerity the program to be presented at the Belle Theatre Thursday evening May 31st at 11.15 p.m. presenting Canada's favorite Four entertainers on the stage, and a gala screen show.

This ace entertainment is sponsored by the Belleville Kiwanis Club in co-operation with the Famous Players Canadian Corporation Limited, who through George J. Forhan, local manager, wholeheartedly donated the use of the theatre, being always ready to assist in a worthy cause.

Space does not permit the enumeration of the large program of community work to be carried out in the next few months by the Kiwanis Club and the funds acquired from this special show will help considerably to make certain the good work is completed.

Canada's Favourite Four Entertainers are a unique organization of unusual entertainers, their rendition of novelty and old-time numbers have been enthusiastically acclaimed by music-loving Canadian audiences, they have appeared before Canada's musical elite, coming direct to Belleville from the Chateau Laurier Hotel, Ottawa.

The quartette consists of the Misses Gladys T. Cornell, contralto, Pauline T. Wilson, cellist and reader, Myrtle M. Armstrong, violinist and Maybelle A. Smith, pianist. These talented young artists never fail to entertain. The London Free Press says: "With the Favorite Four featuring a program of exceptional merit, the Grand Opera House was well filled last night for one of the best concerts given this winter, the well-balanced program with artists who rank among the best talent in the country brought an entertainment which received rounds of well merited applause."

The screen feature presentation is "The Masquerader" a picture that will hold you tense with its mystery and features Ronald Colman and Elissa Landi. The exciting double-role provides Colman with a perfect part most suitable to his presentation, the enjoyment of the feature attraction will be enhanced by the presentation of a selected program of varied short attraction. The regular Belle admission prices will prevail for this stage and screen show.

MOUNT FOREST TRIBUTE TO BANKER

A recent issue of the Mount Forest Confederate bears testimony to the esteem with which Mr. B. C. Sisler, manager of the Dominion Bank of Belleville, is regarded at Mount Forest, his former home. Mr. Sisler took an active part in the work of the Boy Scouts and on Friday evening the Boy Scouts and Cubs turned out in uniform and formed up in front of the home of Dr. W. H. Gilroy where Mr. Sisler and family were being entertained at dinner. Scoutmaster Ivan Seim presented Mr. Sisler with a handsome fishing rod and reel in appreciation of his indefatigable efforts in behalf of the club of which he had so long been scoutmaster, and his son Jimmie was presented with a jack knife by the Cubs as a token of kind remembrance and good will.

Both Jimmie and Mr. Sisler expressed their gratitude for the gifts and the appreciation and good wishes they symbolized. District Scoutmaster A. G. H. Winslow gave a short address concerning the fine work done by Mr. Sisler and the high esteem in which he was held.

The situation was held dangerous enough to warrant a government patrol being guided through the province's timberland. Backed by a near-gale wind, flames have been fed by timber resources in Cumberland County, Nova Scotia, with destruction of a seven-mile stretch of forest behind them. Damages of several thousand dollars was caused and the end has not yet in sight. Here as in other parts of Canada rain was badly needed.

Rain in Quebec

While heaven-sent rain in Quebec did much to alleviate the fears of mining settlements and those of trappers and colonists and actual as a danger on blazes that threatened life and caused damage estimated at $200,000. The fresh outbreaks in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia and along the Ontario-Quebec boundary revealed the source by no means wholly under control.

Severity of two blazes in Prince Edward and Stormont Townships, Ontario, was relieved, but also to a long-anticipated rainfall. The fires are still raging, however, and hundreds of firefighters are working night and day. Over 10,000 acres of wooded land were burned in Moffatt Township.

Along the Ontario-Manitoba boundary fires were reported to be raging in and about the Little Red Lake settlement. High winds at this point hampered the firefighters but the latter were reported as able to prevent the fires from spreading.

With improvements noted in the situation in Alaska and Manitoba, aiding 2,500 government forest rangers in Quebec concentrated their efforts in more easterly sections, notably Malaise and Rivière Du Loup where several fires of smaller but none the less fierce category are in progress.

Many Homes Destroyed

Numerous homes were destroyed in these districts and hastily evacuated threatened hamlets.

At Casgo, and particularly in Chandler Township, fires were menacing as they were along the shores of Lake Timiskaming.

In New Brunswick many fires broke out and one that was not less than 15 different places were being fought by any score of volunteer firemen. The most serious situation was in Northern Restigouche District of Restigouche county where three fires converged over a four-mile sector.

The homes of 16 settlers were destroyed in Gloucester County, N.B., with Messrs. Mackenzie, York and Victoria Counties also reporting outbreaks also.

In the Rimouski district of Quebec hosts of the Mukrile, Armitead and Alderman Mines, the gravity of the situation had lessened considerably and Henri Harter, chief of the Quebec Forest Protection Service, said that none by fires now smouldering in Matane County, Rivière Du Loup and Gaspe were causing any anxiety.

Over 8,000 persons are estimated to have worked in fighting the fires in the affected areas throughout Canada.

M. F. HEPBURN GIVES VIEWS

that Hon. W. D. Euler, former Liberal Minister of Trade and Commerce, had been offered the leadership of the Liberal party in Ontario. He said such a statement was a deliberate misrepresentation on the Premier's part.

The Liberal leader also denied Conservative charges of lack of unity in Liberal ranks. He referred to the letter written two years ago by Mayor James Lyons of North Bay, Mayor of the Conservative member in the Legislature. This letter, Mr. Hepburn said, informed Premier Henry that Mayor Lyons could no longer follow his politics.

"I would like to ask Premier Henry if Mayor James Lyons is supporting him in this campaign," Mr. Hepburn concluded. "I would, call to Mr. Henry's attention, that five of his candidates have announced themselves as Independent Conservatives, rejecting his leadership.

HON. MR. HENRY RAPS D. CROLL

Lack of unison in the stand by the Liberal party on the Hydro question was recalled by Premier Henry and he repeated his oft-asked question of where were the men who disagreed with their party leader and voted against the Government measure.

"Then we have another gentleman, who has just come into the picture; a man, who has never been a member of the Legislature," the Premier continued. "His Mayor David Croll of Windsor. I have been trying to find out this past few days how far Mr. Hepburn follows his lieutenant.

"Because he goes much further than anyone else ever has thought of going on the public platforms of this province, Mayor Croll is guilty definitely and candidly advocating the Australian system of wide-open sale here, there and everywhere in the province, and who would abolish local option. He would have beer in every little roadside stand.

"That never has been the policy of the Conservative party and as long as I'm leader of the party it never will. So I say to Mr. Hepburn, find out what Mr. Croll is saying and check him if you do not agree with his statements."

Review of what he termed the greater accomplishments of the various Governmental departments was made by the Premier, who suggested the Government was deserving of praise for its system of economy and was able to balance its budget in such difficult times.

50 MEETINGS ARE ARRANGED

Premier Charges David Croll Advocating Wide Open Sale

Toronto, May 30 (CP)—More than 50 meetings are arranged for Conservative candidates in the Ontario general elections campaign which comes to an end June 19 when the citizens cast their ballots.

Other meetings will be held later. Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal Leader, today was in Sault Ste. Marie to start his 10-day tour, action before the Algoma residents. Tomorrow he will deliver addresses at Blind River and Espanola.

Both Premier George S. Henry and Mr. Hepburn took part in the political wars last night, The Premier charging Mayor David Croll of Windsor was advocating wide-open sale of beer in the province, while Mr. Hepburn announced his stand on the St. Lawrence Waterways by maintaining the time was inopportune for such a great undertaking.

Premier Henry spoke at Campbellford and Mr. Hepburn at North Bay and Cobalt. The Premier declared he would never support wide-open beer sale and he asked how Mr. Hepburn felt about Mayor Croll's policies.

POOR SEASON FOR HATCHING

Scarcity of Feed And Cold Winter Blamed For Conditions

Score up another one for the record severe winter and scarcity of feed in this district. Chick hatcheries throughout the section, as well as farmers with individual settings of eggs under their broody hens have found this season the poorest one on record for the hatching of baby chicks.

According to reports from the various hatcheries and outlying sections the infertility of eggs this year is between 40 and 50 per cent. In individual hatchings the percentage of sterile eggs has reached 75 per cent. Occasional reported instances throughout this immediate section during the past few weeks state that out of fifteen and twenty eggs set only one or two lonely chickens have hatched.

According to manager Wensley of the Bellcrill ebranch of the Trenton Electric Hatcheries, Prunedale Sts., the average number of sterile eggs in a batch is held at about 75 per cent. This year, even in the best of regulated hatcheries, the percentage is much higher. It is believed to have reached at least 70 per cent in governed hatches.

The reason is simple, as explained by manager Wensley, "The past winter has been a tough one for chickens as well as the farmer. Feed has been scarce and chickens haven't fared as well as they might have. Consequently their resistance was lowered. Loss of vigor and vitality was transmitted to the eggs laid. Hatches in many of the country are one quarter dead on their feet."

ADMIRAL TOGO JAPAN, DIES

"Nelson of Japan" Succumbs to Cancer of The Throat

Tokyo, May 30.—(AP)—Admiral Marquis Heihachiro Togo, "The Nelson of Japan" whose humble home in Tokyo became a National Shrine, died today.

Death came to the valiant old warrior at the age of 86 after a slow but losing fight against cancer of the throat. The Empire was plunged into mourning.

Admiral Togo was the last of the heroes of the Russo-Japanese War. It was he, standing on the deck of his flagship, who directed the fleet to a decisive victory over the Tsar's navy and from that triumph Japan became a world power.

Only yesterday Admiral Togo was elevated to the exalted friend and one-time pupil, Emperor Hirohito, to the rank of Marquis.

Emperor Hirohito decreed a great State funeral, the first in this decade and the 10th in Japan's modern history to be held since 1. Distinguished persons went to the home today, while tens of thousands stood outside sorrowfully. Typical headlines in newspapers were: Asahi, "Nation's Protector, War-God Togo, Dead" and the Hochi Shimbun, "Spirit of Giant Seafighter has Ascended to Heaven".

THE LATE ROBERT J. GRAHAM

The late Robert J. Mr. Graham could see beyond the details into the larger sphere of every interest which appealed to him, he saw business, society, and life in a larger way than it is given to the average man to see. He possessed in addition the power of leadership, and executive and organizing gifts.

This varied equipment made it possible for him to play a very important role in the city, as mayor, as industrial leader, and in the world of business at large as the head of manufacturing industries whose ramifications spread to all parts of the continent of North America. It made him lend his aid to civic interests, as in the presentation and dedication of a park for memorial purposes and in the placing of a cenotaph to the city's immortal dead of the Great War. It made him the loyal supporter of church and the Y.M.C.A., it made him a world tourist who had an observant mind. He toured Africa and other parts of the world, finding everywhere an interest in all sides of life revealed during these travels. His were the mentality and sympathy which could appreciate the varied phases of life which came into his ken. At times he spoke of his travels, his stories being always marked by a clear presentation of what he had seen.

In his family circle Mr. Graham will be most missed for to him the family life was the centre of life.

A citizen has passed who will long linger in the memory of the Bay of Quinte section, in Sidney, and in Belleville.

INTERESTING REFORMATORY FACTS

In the thirty-five corrective institutions in Canada which include reformatories, industrial schools, industrial farms, prison farms, boys' farms and training schools and all corrective institutions for the detention and reformation of their inmates who are generally first offenders or short term prisoners or juniors lacking proper parental discipline inmates, were 4743 inmates, says the 131 census. All these inmates were not guilty of criminal offences for they included many juveniles who are placed there only for protection and shelter.

About 50 per cent. of the total offences were against property, those against public order and peace comprised 33 per cent., while offences against public morals and decency and offences against the person totalled 11 per ent. Of the 1121 offences against property committed by males 71 per cent. were for burglary, robbery and theft, while for the 1113 offences committed by male juveniles against property 94 per cent. were for these same offences.

Most female prisoners were in for vagrancy, 35 per cent. of the 402 adults females. The predominant offences of juvenile female inmates were incorrigibility and delinquency, namely 46 per cent. It is notable that only 9.4 per cent. of all inmates in the institutions were from rural centres. British born led the list with 80.8 per cent. and of these 70.8 per cent. were born in Canada.

One of the outstanding features of the analysis of this report is that concerning literary. 89.8 p.c. could read and write in some language, 6.8 per cent. were illiterate, while 0.7 per cent. could ready only. The illiterates in Canada according to the 1931 census was 3.79 per cent. of the population.

Referring to weekly earnings of adults when last employed 11.4 per cent. were earning under ten dollars a week; 32.9 per cent $10 to $20; 35.7 per cent $20 to $30; 15 per cent. $30 to $40 and 5 per cent. reported earning over $40 per week. Of the 125 female inmates whose weekly earnings were reported 91 or 72.8 per cent. were earning less than $10 per week and the remaining 27.2 per cent. were paid $10 to $20. For the male inmates the largest group was those earning $20 to $30 per week. There were 62 or 5.1 per cent. of the male inmates who wer earning less than $10 per week.

The distribution of inmates according to environment or residence previous to admission is of interest to all who seek relation between environment and crime. The information was obtained for 4,670 inmates or 98.5 per cent. of the total resident inmates. It was seen that 4,226 or 90.5 per cent. came from centres of 1,000 population or more.

With respect to the use of alcohol the inmates were divided into three groups, namely, abstinent, temperate and intemperate. Abstinent were those who did not use alcohol as a beverage; temperate those who used it to some small degree and intemperate those who became repeatedly intoxicated, deteriorated or afflicted by disease from the use of alcohol. It was shown that 395 or 16.5 per cent were abstinent, 1,089 or 45.6 per cent. were temperate, 878 or 36.7 per cent. were intemperate and for 28 or 1.2 per cent. the information was not available. Those classed as intemperate were, as a group, the chief offenders in such offences as assault, sex offences including rape, breaches of the liquor control acts and being drunk and disorderly. In only one offence, namely trespass, were the abstinent, as a group, the chief offenders.

With respect to the use of drugs 108 or 2.3 per cent. of the total adult inmates were recorded as addicts. Of these addicts 58 or 53.7 per cent. were committed for breaches of the Drug Act; 22 or 20.4 per cent. for burglary and theft; 9 or 8.4 per cent. for vagrancy and 17.5 per cent. for all other offences.

LIFE IS SO FULL

Ah, life is so full and life is so good!
If I dwelt deep in the thickest wood
Where seldom another soul went by,
But only myself and the trees and the sky,
I should never tire through the long years there
For the richness of life is everywhere.
In winter I'd watch all the shy, furred things
While I'd hear how fiercely the north wind sings;
I'd learn strange secrets of squirrel and fox
And I'd find warm lairs hidden back of the rocks.
My sun-dried corn with a starving deer
I'd share when it grew too weak for fear.
I would let it eat of my scanty store
Till it strengthened and left me alone once more.
And in springtime I'd feel the surging flood
Of sap as it rose in each leaf and bud.
I would read the story that summer brings
With its fruits and blossoms, its myriad wings.
Joys would throng about me, a multitude,
For life is so full; life is so good!

FRONT PAGE EDITORIALS that are different appear in the Quebec Chronicle Telegraph from the pen of Frank Carrel, veteran editor. The principal feature of these editorials is that they say something, say it in few words, and the type is set in different style from the usual line by line. A collection of these snappy editorials, made into a miniature book, has reached this desk and found appreciation as something new, something different. Here's a sample of Editor Carrel's terseness:

BUY NOW.

There is no doubt, that the price of goods,
And everything else is soaring,
And those who do not buy now,
If they can,
Will have to pay more for what they want
In the future.
The great danger now
Is the shortage of goods.
We forecast this many months ago.
We even went so far as to say
We thought, within a short time,
Our factories,
Would not be able to fill orders.
Well, we still think so,
Excepting—that the time is coming quicker than we expected,
So those who buy now
Will reap the benefit.

OAK LAKE YACHTSMEN will miss the enthusiasm of Cyril Waite this summer on account of the latter's removal to Saint John, New Brunswick, in the service of the Dominion Bank. Cyril put lots of action into everything he was connected with, and he was an ardent sailor, in good and bad weather, even utilizing the rather limited sailing space of Oak Lake where his summer cottage was rather than forego his favorite sport. Now that he is down by the sea no doubt he will soon be a deep sea sailor. A good citizen Belleville loses Cyril Waite with regret. He was active in the Chamber of Commerce, the Red Cross organization, Trade Crusaders, Board of Education, and even his Sundays were partially given over to service thru' his church work and services as organist of Christ Church. Cyril Waite was a good all round useful citizen of the type which progressive communities are loath to lose —but we pass him on, reluctantly, to Saint John, chalking up a debit in our community ledger, knowing that a corresponding credit will appear in the community ledgers of Saint John, which we understand is down by the Bay of Fundy with plenty of sea room for ambitious sailor men who go down to the sea in white ducks and craft that draw plenty wind and water.

Sandy had the misfortune to find lodgings where the landlady was never at any time too lavish with the food. One day when she placed a particularly small morsel in front of him he thought it time to object.

"Haven't you made a mistake?" he asked.

"Why?" asked the landlady.

"Well, my name's Sandy, not Gandhi," came the reply.

Mr. and Mrs. Adams, who reside on Burton street, were out driving yesterday when the horse ran away. Mrs. Adams was thrown from the carriage, but escaped serious injury.

The West Belleville Bounders played a match with a nine picked from the vicinity of the station yesterday afternoon and an excellent game was put up by both teams. The Bounders say that they were short some of their regular players and that accounts for their defeat. Both pitchers did good work. Page for the Bounders twirled a fine game but Walker's curves seemed to puzzle the Bounders best batters. The score 8 to 5 in favor of the Station team. The following composed the teams: West Belleville Bounders: W. Bawden, Tuite, G. Bawden, Connell, Page, McGuire, Gerow and Kennedy. Station team: E. Wrennick, Brown, Cornell, O'Neill, Walker, Cornish, Tallon, Stapley and Wrennick. C. Connell gave satisfaction as umpire.

ALEMITE PLANT IS EXTENDED

Addition Necessary to Supply Floor Space Says Mr Rowsome

Although when questioned later in the evening he had little to add to his previous statements except, that it was "a little too early yet to give any definite details," Mr. W. E. Rowsome, general manager of the Stewart-Warner and Alemite Corporation plant of this city indicated at a meeting of the Belleville Co-operative Workers' Association last evening, that Belleville would undergo a flurry in industrial circles within the next few weeks, with at least two new factories commencing work inside of six weeks, under favorable conditions.

One of the new factories will be housed in the plant of the Carthage Machine Company. No estimate of the number of employees needed was given.

A second plant, which is expected to be in operation within the same period will employ fifty girls and the same number of men. Its location was not stated.

Expansion of the Stewart-Warner and Alemite plant north of the city has called for construction of a new building on the northeast corner of that lot, with preliminary work for its erection already commenced. The structure will be devoted to storage space and will relieve crowding in the present plant. It will be of concrete and corrugated iron, and when completed over 4,000 square feet will be available.

Men, who have already commenced work are being paid at the rate of 40 cents per hour, eight hours per day. Fifteen minute rest periods are being given them during the forenoon and afternoon of each day on orders of Mr. Rowsome.

Better times are in the offing for this city, and prospects for a good year appear excellent, according to Mr. Rowsome.

"Our own plant is proceeding ahead on the basis of complete industrial recovery, and we expect one of the best years yet," he added.

"All the Canadian manufacturer needs now to put him back on the right road to recovery is protection from the rackateer manufacturers with fly-by-night concerns south of the border, engaging in cut throat competition and flooding this country with their products, thereby forcing our own men out of work. When we are assured of that protection from the government, then our own workmen will really go back to work."

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"DAWN" MOST WIDELY DISCUSSED FILM OF EDITH CAVELL

The Rev. L. Leydendecker, formerly rector of the German community in Brussels and an eye-witness of the shooting of Edith Cavell, declares that the sequences of the tragic death of Edith Cavell in "Dawn" which is coming to the Capitol Theatre on Thursday, are absolutely correct. The statement by the Rev. Leydendecker, would seem to put an end to the controversy that has been waged throughout Europe and one in reference to the sequence in the production.

"As the report of the former Evangelical garrison chaplain of Brussels, Lessar, as to the shooting of Miss Edith Cavell, which a number of German and foreign papers have published, mentions me as a witness of the shooting, I should like to express myself briefly on the subject," the priest wrote in an article published in the Germania, chief organ of the Roman Catholic or Center Party.

"The report mentioned corresponds absolutely with the truth. It is also exhaustive and leaves unmentioned nothing of all that happened that morning in the Tir National at Brussels. What beyond that has been believed and printed abroad (an attack of nausea in the condensed), resolves itself as a sheet at an unconscious woman, and so on) is sheer invention.

"Miss Cavell was, as I was told by a Belgian lady who was condemned to a long term of imprisonment at the same trial, a 'glowing patriot' during the time of her preliminary investigation. I visited her, like all other prisoners, every week, the always showed herself gratefully pleased by these visits, which, of course, as she was an Anglican, and described herself to me as such, has only a humanitarian character.

"Doubtless the shooting would not have taken place if it had not been carried out on the morning after the pronouncing of the judgment. An appeal for mercy which Cardinal Mercier sent in behalf of the Pope, addressed to authoritative quarters, and which at the utmost basis was necessary, was sent by telegraph, arrived too late. The execution had already taken place. That I learned during a later audience from the lips of the Cardinal himself."

From the foregoing lines the Germania infers that the execution was the work of "subordinate military authorities," and cannot fairly be assembled as a "typical expression of German barbarism."

Sybil Thorndike, a close friend of Nurse Cavell and one of London's most celebrated emotional actresses, portrays the war nurse in "Dawn". Madame Bodart, a character in history, appears in person in the film. Many of the extras and supporting cast were actually participants in the historical events and friends of the nurse. The Belgium government assisted in the production of the film and every care was exercised to make it historically correct to the finest detail.

"Memories of Conflict" depicting actual war scenes and in best activities will precede this unusual feature. These scenes are taken from the various Government archives and are absolutely authentic in every respect.

Two comedies; cartoon and Capitol up to the minute News Reel will bring to a close a program you'll thoroughly enjoy.

AT THE REGENT

Fredric March in "Death Takes a Holiday."

The much-heralded Paramount production of "Death Takes a Holiday" which opens at the Belle Thursday is regarded to be one of the finest pictures ever produced in America.

Splendidly cast with Fredric March and Evelyn Venable recently seen with Will Rogers in "David Harum" in the leading roles, supported by Gail Patrick, Katherine Alexander, Helen Westley, Henry Travers, G. P. Huntley, Jr., and Kathleen Howard.

Nancy O'Neill and Gemard Dezil two lovely young screen actresses are appearing with Hulbert, the former as Jack's sweetheart and the other as the alluring Countess of the Chinese picture. The story abounds with laughs and romance, and introduces tuneful melodies, with a host of beautiful girls that can sing and dance. Photographic Pictorial revealing intimate glimpses of important people and events of the world set on the same program.

Warner Baxter Leaving

Warner Baxter is appearing at the Belle tonight for the last times in his first starring picture, "Such Women are Dangerous," and the large audience last evening were unanimous in declaring it to be his best picture. OBITUARY

LATE MRS. SARAH PARKER

Stirling—The death occurred in Stirling at her residence, Front street on Saturday, May 26th, 1934, of Mrs. Sarah Hay Fiddler Parker, widow of the late Francis Bowland Parker in her ninetieth year. Deceased was a daughter of the late John and Eliza Fiddler who came originally from Nantucket, Nantucket Islands and settled in Marmora where the late Mrs. Parker was born. As a young girl she came to Stirling to attend school and later taught school in this village and Mrs. Robert Parker. Later she married Frank Bowland Parker, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Parker, who with his brother, Dr. Robert Parker, conducted a private Bank in Stirling, handling such matters as estates, successfully this private enterprise was taken over by the Sovereign Bank. Three daughters were born to the union, the late Mrs. A. E. Ross (Mabel) of Toronto, Mrs. Judson Hunt (Bessie) of Toledo, Ohio, and Miss Emily at home. One grandchild Donald Ross of Toronto also survives. Her husband predeceased her some thirty years ago. The late Mrs. Parker has been confined to her home for several years through illness. In religion, deceased was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling. The wealth of floral tributes was most evidence of the high esteem in which the late Mrs. Parker was held in her passing. Stirling loses one of its oldest and most highly respected residents.

The funeral services were held at her late residence on Monday, May 28th at 3 p.m. and were conducted by Rev. Joseph A. Kotfend of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. The service was brief and of an unassuming nature in keeping with the retiring disposition of the late Mrs. Parker, and opened with the Twenty Third Psalm following which Rev. Kotfend spoke briefly of the deceased who, in her own quiet way, had lived a long life of service to God. The hymn "The Sands of Time Are Shifting Fast" was sung and the service concluded with the prayer by Rev. Kotfend of that well-loved poem of Alfred, Lord Tennyson, "Crossing The Bar". Interment took place in Stirling Cemetery where Rev. Kotfend officiating at the Committal.

Six prominent Stirling merchants and life long family friends acted as bearers and were Messrs. James Lagrow, John S. Morton, Willbert Jones, John M. McCoy, Lindsay Malcolm, and Fred C. Ward. Relatives and family friends present at the funeral service from out of town were Judge and Mrs. Parker of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ross of Toronto, Dr. J. J. Robertson and daughter of Belleville, Reginald Garrett from Mrs. A. E. Ross of Kingston and Ottawa, Mr. William Parker, manager of the Belleville Branch of the Royal Bank of Canada and Mrs. Parker of Belleville, Miss Helen Fralick of Belleville, Miss Ethel Anderson of Toronto, Mrs. Strong of Colborne and Mrs. Grace Deacon of Marmora.

FARM MACHINERY GETTING HEAVIER

A well-known resident of the city, whose interest in surrounding farms is confined to the ownership of them he secures through the medium of mortgages, has added to car as it passes the cultivated land along the roads, asks the natural query why those old Farmer horse hook-ups are being used this year instead of the proverbial two horse teams to draw the farm machinery. He has noted the increasing use of horses this year particularly.

A well known rural resident of the district of Cannifton answers the query, that machinery is getting bigger and heavier each year, and to take only one team of horses now requires a hook-up of three and four horses. Farmers have been using more of them during the past years or so."

Another angle is that the horses haven't wintered so well, and are not nearly as fit in pre-condition. The extra horses are being used to conserve the strength of the individuals.

Crows Protest Molestation of Their Homes

At a huge conclave of crows held near the Fair Grounds last evening the following resolution was unanimously concurred in and passed.

"We the crows of the Marshall Road and Hollon's Grove, at an indignation meeting of our members held last evening in the pine grove west of the Fair Grounds hereby go on record as being absolutely opposed to the reign of terror, that is being spread through our ranks by numbers of small boys and other irresponsible persons who seek to destroy our nests, steal our eggs and fledglings and otherwise molest and make life miserable for us.

"And whereas we believe that it is our undenied right to live and exist and rear our families in peace and harmony as it is therefore resolved that from now on such actions as stoning our nests, molesting our young and setting opposition to harm us when they may occur, be strenuously opposed that the attention of the proper authorities be called in the matter, and a copy of this resolution be despatched through the proper channels and otherwise given due publicity.

Signed, Jim Crow,

Chairman of the Crows' Committee of Marshall Road and Hollon's Grove.

IN MEMORIAM

It is with deep regret that we record the passing of former Rotarian, J. J. Graham, at his residence here, on the afternoon of Empire Day. Mr. Graham thoroughly enjoyed the fellowship of Rotary and very reluctantly resigned about a year ago, only when he found it impossible to keep up his attendance. It would take volumes to record his travels, his experiences and his abounding generosity. He had a wonderful mentality and was in every respect a most outstanding man, not only in this community, but in all Canada. He was a real Empire Builder and advocated in London over 30 years ago that the Empire should draw closer together in matters of trade. He again, and almost alone, took this same stand at the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire Conference in Cape Town five or six years ago. His efforts however finally bore fruit and he was indeed fitting that this noble generous soul should pass peacefully on Empire Day, at the ripe age of 74 and in complete possession of his faculties. His loss will keenly felt not only in Belleville, but by a vast host of friends everywhere, for he had travelled and transacted business in almost every country in the world. Belleville has had a distinguished citizen, and many of us, a very dear friend. He died as he had always lived, a great Captain of Industry and a very gallant gentleman.—Belleville Rotary Club Letter.

BLACKWELL—CORNELL

Desoronto, May 30.—A wedding of considerable interest to the residents of Desoronto and the surrounding district took place this morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Cornell, on Colborne street, Lindsay, on Saturday afternoon, May 26th, when their eldest daughter, Miss Dorothy Edna, became the bride of Dr. W. J. C. Blackwell of Desoronto, only son of Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Blackwell of Owendale. The ceremony was performed by Rev. John Ramsay of London, uncle of the groom, who was assisted by the Rev. J. J. Black of Lindsay. Miss Mary Cornell, sister of Peterboro, cousin of the bride, played the wedding march and during the signing of the register, Harvey Forsythe sang "All Are To Thine". The ceremony was performed under an arch of palms, ferns and roses.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white suede lace, made on long lines with tight-fitting bodice and long tight sleeves. She carried Johanna Hill roses and lily of the valley. Miss Lorna Cornell, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, was gowned in white lace over taffeta and wore a period old-fashioned bonnet of sweet peas. Dr. John B. Keeling of Toronto, cousin of the groom, was best man. A reception was held after the ceremony with about fifty guests present.

Mrs. Cornell, the bride's mother, wore a gown of flowered chiffon with a lovely bouquet of lily of the valley. Mrs. Blackwell, the groom's mother, wore a gown of flowered chiffon and a corsage of roses.

Dr. and Mrs. Blackwell left on a motor trip to Ottawa and Montreal, and on their return will reside in Desoronto where Dr. Blackwell has been living for the past three years. The bride's going away costume was navy blue ensemble with white trimmings and accessories to match.

ONTARIO SCHOOL FOR DEAF

The session is drawing rapidly to an end and the air is vibrant with the pupils' thoughts and talk about the home-going, the preparations for which involve very careful planning by the officials concerned. In only three weeks our halls will be silent and every pupil, we hope, safe at home.

The new residence is now occupied by the Junior pupils, who moved over last week. Miss Burgside has been appointed teacher-in-charge. The formal opening of the new building will probably take place the latter part of next week.

The pupils are jubilant, and the staff much pleased, that one of our boys, Jack Glenister, won the Junior Championship, of the Bay of Quinte district at the sport meet at the Belleville Fair Grounds on May 19th. He also made a good showing at the athletic meet in Kingston on May 24, winning a bronze medal, but failed to carry off the chief award. The annual field day of the school will be held on June 2nd, weather permitting.

This is the week for Superintendent Fetterly. On Monday he gave an address to the Rotary Club, and on Tuesday to the Kiwanis, on a topic of vital interest, a report of which appeared in our columns. On Wednesday and Thursday, as one of the representatives, he will be in attendance at the annual session of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church, meeting in Brockville. On Friday evening he will be tendered a complimentary banquet in Winchester, his home town, in recognition of his election as Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Ontario East.

On May 23rd, the O.S.D. Dramatic Club, composed of senior pupils, presented an Empire Day program that was are confident was not surpassed in interest and merit in any school in the province. It consisted of appropriate addresses, recitations and songs, all given by the pupils, and the whole celebration reflects great credit on all those who took part. One unique feature was a display in large cases of 1200 stamps from 67 parts of the British Empire, in the collection and mounting of which some of the senior boys take great interest under the direction of Mr. Lally.

Miss Jessie Tuite was the guest speaker at the meeting of the Association of Teachers and Instructors on Monday afternoon last, and favored the members with one of her delightful travel talks, descriptive of her trip to Europe last year. The address, clothed in her felicitous language and vivid portrayal of scenes and incidents, was greatly enjoyed.

Step out into the SUNSHINE
How many days of your life are lost in feeling under par? How many hours will you be bright are dull and dispirited?

Half-hearted days are frequently due to common constipation. It clouds your waking hours, takes the sunshine out of living. Yet it can be overcome so easily by eating a delicious cereal.

Laboratory tests show Kellogg's All-Bran provides "bulk" and vitamin B to aid elimination. All-Bran is also a fine source of iron.

The "bulk" in All-Bran is such like that in leafy vegetables. Isn't this "cereal way" pleasanter than risking patent medicines?

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. With each meal in chronic cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve All-Bran as a cereal or use in muffins, breads, omelets, etc. In the red-and-green packages. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario, Canada.

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

TORONTO MINES (CLOSE)

Toronto, May 30.—(CP)—The trend was generally firm in the mining sections of the Toronto Exchange today with volume around the low record for the year so far. Interlinked gold and base metals were remarkable by the New York market holiday but some of the secondary gold shares maintained a strong appearance on fair turnover. Base metals and silvers had some acceptance by no reactions of importance.

Traders were in the market for Hollinger and McKenzie Red Lake, heavy buying in these issues taking prices up 5 to 10 cents each. In the senior gold list several issues were also within fractional range, Lamaque closed 9 down and Flank, Hargraves and Bralorne closed unchanged. Business in Noranda was restricted to a few odd lots, mainly odd lots with the price-down about 10 cents.

TORONTO STOCKS (CLOSE)

Toronto, May 30.—(CP)—Interest was low also today on the industrial section of the Toronto Exchange, according to the New York market holiday and prices were barely steady. Canada Malting, distillery and oil issues had fair turnover at moderately lower prices.

Brewery shares made no response to the settlement of a beer tax reduction, the issues of that group showing nothing greater than variations of 1-8.

Industrial shares closed lower with the single exception of Imperial Oil which held a gain of 1-8 at 14 7-8. Canadian Oils Pfd moved up 2 points and Supertest and British American Oil eased down small fractions. International Nickel selling ex-dividend 10 cents, swayed about the amount of the payment and minor losses were recorded for Ford A, Brazilian and C.P.R.

Deep in my heart there's a memory
Worth more than silver and gold.
It's the picture of my dear mother
Whose memory will never grow old.

BROWNS COMING

Recruits Help Hornsby Keep His Team in Fight

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.)
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

A good crop of rookies can be an asset to the best baseball team and the success of a couple of St. Louis Browns' newcomers, Raymond Watson Pepper and Harland Benton Clift, is one good reason why Rogers Hornsby's Club is up at the head of the American League's second division and threatening daily to go higher instead of bobbing along, as expected, near the bottom.

Neither was a .300 hitter in the minor leagues last year, Pepper batting .295 with Rochester and Clift .273 with San Antonio, but both have been well above that level against American League pitching so far as the 1934 season has gone.

Between them this pair of recruits accounted for eight runs yesterday as the Browns slammed out a 12-7 decision over Detroit Tigers yesterday to regain their .500 place in the standings. Pepper had a perfect day at the plate, hitting his fourth and fifth homers of the season and three singles to knock in three runs.

Seven other hits added to this collection brought a decisive victory although the Tigers joined in the swatting to the extent of 11 blows including homers by Charley Gehringer, Goose Goslin and Gerald Walker.

The other American League contests were marked by nifty pitching as Cleveland increased its lead over the idle Yankees by shutting out Chicago 5-0 and Boston broke a sixth place tie with Philadelphia by taking a 2-1 decision over the Athletics in a game shortened to seven innings by rain. Mel Harder blanked the Pale Hose with five blows for his first victory of the season while Johnny Welch held the A's to two —a homer by Bob Johnson and a single by Lou Finney. A pair of Boston circuit swats by Dick Porter and Rick Ferrell were wiped out when proceedings were halted in the eighth.

National League

The idleness of the four Western clubs enabled New York Giants to register an important gain in the National League as they defeated their Brooklyn neighbours 4-3. The triumph left them only one percentage point behind Pittsburgh.

Piling on Ray Benge for five hits and three runs in the second, the Giants looked to have an easy victory until a drizzle dampened the ball and Fred Fitzsimmons was unable to throw his knucklers in the seventh.

Then the Dodgers got three runs back before Dolfo Luque halted them.

The other National League contest saw Boston Braves down the Phillies 6-4 with the aid of a four-run outburst started by Pinky Whitneys homer in the seventh and some snappy fielding, that kept Frankhouse out of trouble. The hurler started the best feat himself, when he nailed Irvine Jeffries' lined in the second and started a triple play with Buck Jordan and Bill Urbanski.

Clem Allen added another boxer to his Stewart Warner-Alemite A. C. fight stable in the person of Art Angell, the local blonde lightweight. Angell has not been training quite as seriously as he might have for the past few months and was distinctly told he must get down to work if he intended wearing the new local fight colors. Angell is a good boy at his weight, when in condition, but like all boxers looks terrible when out of condition. Once this lad returns to his old form the S. W.-A. A. C. will have two high class lightweights under their colors, Bill Crawford and Art Angell. The other Alemite boxers, Parry, Langman and Gordie Morris are working out nightly in preparation for Friday night's bouts at Kingston when Parry meets Tommy Bland, the Canadian lightweight champ. While on the subject of the fight game we wonder if a champion ever lost his crown under similar circumstances surrounding the Ross-McLarnin decision. The two judges were as far apart in their individual scoring as the poles. "It looks like another Schmeling decision and you can spell it to suit yourself".

On Friday evening a meeting of interested lacrosse moguls in the Central Ontario area has been called for 8.30 p.m. at Cobourg. A delegation from the local "Aajmaa" club will represent Belleville and sit in at the conclave. Lacrosse has long been a dead issue in this city, but through the efforts of the Aajmaa Club semi-weekly practices are now being held with the result, that new faces are weekly showing up to practice. There are a couple of seasoned and proven lacrosse players in the city and they have taken it upon themselves to instruct the aspiring players. At Friday's meeting, delegates from Campbellford, Peterboro, Norwood, Millbrook and Belleville have been invited to meet the Cobourg Club. It is understood by the local organization that clubs are being formed in Tweed, Madoc and Trenton, thus giving Belleville a compact grouping if the project goes through. Naturally a local lacrosse club could not be expected to compete with seasoned teams from Cobourg, Campbellford and Peterboro while a oopl incuding all new clubs would perhaps prove more prolific to all concerned.

Following last night's senior baseball practice Manager Mills announced that he would start Carl Casey against the Kingston Ponies today. Casey hurled four masterful frames against the Dukes on the 24th and seemed to have returned to his old time form. His control was letter-perfect. With Casey starting the game Skipper Mills will have Jack "Chief" Williams warming up throughout the game in case the big right-hander falters. At present Casey seems to be in about the best condition of the local hurling staff Williams, being the oldest hurler on the staff, naturally needs the warmest weather possible before he will show his real wares. At present Ernie Smith is quite erratic at times, but seems to have more on the ball than he did last season. Once Smith learns the rudiments of control, he will be hard to beat. Utronki has not been used on the local hilltop as yet, but is daily working out in the bull pen in keeping in readiness for relief duty. In all probability Vaughan Jack will start at short stop today for the Nationals with the remainder of the line-up being the same as appeared versus the Dukes on Victoria Day.

Apparently being rather skeptical as to the ability of his new hurler, "Speedy" St. Louis, Manager Jim Arnell started him on the road versus the Petes on Saturday, saving Yammy Jamieson to pitch against the Nationals today. Jamieson has held the well known "Indian sign" ove rthe locals for the past couple of seasons, but 1934 is another year and finds a different local club to face the diminutive Limestone city hurler.

In reference to the 9 to 6 drubbing taken by the Petes at the hands of the Ponies the Lift Lock City sport scribe has the following to say:

"Well, it's the wrong start but doesn't matter much. It's only the first game and showed the Petes have the material for a championship squad if they can just come through in the right spots. At least we're glad to see the old enmity still exists between these two outfits. It makes for better ball. Ash and Foxton nearly tangled once when the latter "hipped" him. Foxton came in to the bench remarking, "No player in this town can pull anything on me!" And Hewit Smith—who tangled with Ash in the playoffs last year—was burned to a crisp when the Petes' captain caught him out on the line at first. Smith said: "I'm going to ride that guy hard some of these days." Both sides missed no opportunities to insult each other. There'll be fireworks yet."

When the local senior men's softball loop opens at Central Park this evening the league officials have inaugurated an opening ceremony and everything, that goes to assure success. Mayor Tice will hurl the first ball before the Canada Dry nine take to the field to battle the Grills' Garage entry and ring up the 1934 curtain in O.A.S.A. circles. Tomorrow evening the other four clubs composing the loop swing into action with S.E.A.C. visiting the College Hill Cubs and the Tip Top Tailors battling the Alemites. All six clubs have added to their club roster and a gala season of softball is assured the fans.

During the passing of players' certificates at the recent meeting of the Bay of Quinte League the name of Bob Green was submitted by the Picton Club. Bob was recently granted an O.B.A.A. transfer from Wellington to play with the local Crystalac juniors. Greer is at present in ill health and at the request of his parents returned home to Wellington recently. At once the Picton intermediates signed Greer to an intermediate certificate, but Secretary Gibbard refused to sanction or sign Greer's intermediate certificate, much to the chagrin of the league title holders. It seems a shame, that Greer may be kept out of baseball owing to his present ill health as he is still a minor and some little leeway should be granted in such cases. The matter is being brought to the attention of the O.B.A.A. by the Picton Club. Today the Bay of Quinte loop is scheduled to hold opening day ceremonies with Belleville Vics at Brighton and the Picton club raising the league pennant before taking on the Napanee Gibbards at home.

ONT-INTELL WINS CUP

Printers For Second Time Annex Junior Bowling Trophy

The Mercantile Bowling League came to a close last evening when the Ontaro-Intelligencer Printers and the Teco teams played off for the Mercantile championship which was won by the Printers.

Speeches were made by each team representative.

Many kind words were spoken in favour of the genial manager, Leo (Stub) Barrett, for the way the league was run and all credit was due to him on the success of the league. "Stub" replied with sincere thanks and thanked the boys for their cooperation and on behalf of the Recreation Alleys hoped that the boys would all be in the league next fall.

The cup was presented to "Cece" Ling, captain of the Printers, by George Fordyce, president of the league, who on behalf of his team thanked one and all.

The league organized for the coming season with the following officers:

Hon. Pres.—B. J. Black.
President—Geo. Fordyce.
Secretary—Newt. Wilbur.

The league will operate the first week in October.

ROYALS CROWD MAPLE LEAFS

Montreal Pounds Out 13-8 Win Over Toronto

(By The Associated Press)

Their new-found batting power rapidly is carrying Montreal Royals in the general direction of third place in the International League, much to dismay of their Canadian rivals, Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Royals have averaged better than 14 hits per game in their last seven contests of which they have won five and today third place was only two games away.

Charley Lucas and Earl Cook felt the sting in Montreal's bats yesterday and the Royals plastered a 13-8 defeat on third place Toronto. The Leafs likewise collected 16 safeties off Ray Fritz and Clarence Fisher but doubles by Murray Howell and Jack Crouch were the only extra base hits in their collection. Montreal's string, on the other hand, included doubles by Ripple, King, Sankey and Roettger, a triple by Thompson and home runs by King and Walker. Against that long distance pounding, Toronto had no chance after the Royals had taken the lead in the fifth inning.

Meanwhile Buffalo made it two out of three from Rochester's pace-setting Red Wings, pounding Ad Liska, Dykes Potter and Virgil Brown for 18 hits and an easy 10-1 victory. Gregory Mulleavy, Frank McGowan and Ollie Tucker each contributed three hits to the Bisons' attack. Ken Ash blanked the Red Wings until the ninth when Rochester scored its lone run on two hits and a pass. He allowed only seven hits all told.

Albany and Syracuse engaged in a slugfest which the Senators won, 18-11. Albany grabbed 23 hits all told of which Fred Sington kicked in with five, including two doubles and a home run. Bill Brubaker hit safely four times in as many chances and every other man in the lineup, aside from the pitchers, got at least one hit. Syracuse collected 14 hits, bunching many of them in the fourth and sixth frames when nine of the Chiefs' 11 runs were scored.

Newark and Baltimore had an off day.

OFFICE STAFF DOWNS FACTORY

Big "A" Boys Have Good Time at Expense of Plant

Les Lennox's mighty home run gave the Big A softball team a 2-1 victory over the Alemite Office team in an exhibition game played at the Alemite grounds last evening. The game was played as a challenge affair the employees of the Big A store making light of their manufacturing brothers' ability on the diamond and fully lived up to their aloof attitude by humbling their opponents right on their own diamond.

The office staff at the Alemite plant made a final bid for the victory in the final innings, when they filled the bases only to have the winners rise to the occasion and retire the side Umpires Art Young came in for more than his share of verbal abuse as the stakes were high and the rivalry keen. Failure to hit with men on base cost the office team a win while the Big A store nine took every advantage and hit in the pinches.

The line-ups—Big "A"—L. Lennox, Ketcheson, Lockyer, Langton, Reppard, Ross, Stortis, Rowsome and Hanton. Alemite —Smith, White, Seymour, Ristow, Summers, R. Lennox, Brown, Ethier and Hagerman.

AMELIASBURG TEAM WINS

Defeat Gardenville in Prince Edward County Loop

Gardenville, May 30—(Special)—Ameliasburg's 1934 entry in the Ameliasburg Softball League hammered out a 16-9 win over the Gardenvillies here last night in a game halted at the end of the fifth inning on account of darkness. Getting away to a late start owing to the late arrival of some players, the visitors got right away in the lead with three runs in the first, but the locals gamely equalled the feat in their half. Not to be discouraged, however, the Ameliasburgites went to work in earnest, and garnered in two more in the second, six in the third, three again in the fourth, and five in the fifth. Wilf Cretney, elongated coach and captain of the team, made himself the popular hero by banging out a beautiful hit to deep righ field in the first Canto to score himself and two of his mates. Townsend, starting on the mound for the visitors, gave way in the fourth to W. Cretney, with Dempsey going in at third.

This is Gardenville's second loss, but the boys are beginning to play heads-up ball and are far from being out of the running. G. Herrington on the mound was playing his first game of the season; and though a little inclined to be wild, registered a number of strike-outs. Gardenville scored in every inning except the second. Bonter made a sensational running catch in the second.

ROSS NOW AFTER DUNDEE'S TITLE

Believes He Can Take Middleweight Title Also

New York, May 30.—(AP)—Barney Ross is wondering now whether the middleweight championship couldn't be added to his list of titles.

The young Chicagoan, lightweight title-holder for the past year, set one ring precedent when he outpointed Jimmy McLarnin on Monday night and captured the Vancouver Irishman's welterweight crown. The next bigger game would be Vince Dundee, ruler of the 160-pound class.

"I think Dundee would be easier than McLarnin was," Ross says. "If the fans would like to see me fight him, I'm ready. Wouldn't that be something—Lightweight, Welterweight and Middleweight Champion?"

It sounded impossible to most experts. There would be many stumbling blocks to overcome. It is open to considerable question, for instance, whether any State Boxing Commission would sanction a match between two men showing such disparity in weight.

But Ross' managers might be persuaded to toy with the idea.

Although preliminary negotiations already have been started toward a return bout between Ross and McLarnin, they haven't got very far yet. Ross apparently is willing to give the Irishman a chance to regain the welterweight championship, but McLarnin was too heartbroken over his defeat to want to talk fight. There have been indications he might hang up his gloves for good but the consensus was he would forget all about that once the bitter disappointment engendered by his defeat passes away.

THE JEW BEAT THE FIGHTING IRISHMAN

Barney Ross of Chicago was just too much for Jimmy McLarnin in their welterweight championship fight in New York, and Jimmy had his welterweight crown knocked from his classic brow by the boy from the Windy City. Here Barney is seen in the crouching position that kept Jimmy guessing all evening, and that enabled Barney to put over his own left almost at will, and with telling effect. The bout went 15 rounds, and Barney took the split decision.

"THESE WOMEN"

By Vernie Connelly

CHAPTER ONE

"He's got to propose tonight!"

This anguished thought had been whispered all evening by Evelyn Hadley. As they danced at the country club while they dined at home and now, here in the drawing-room of the house she had rented for the season at Great Neck, she had started everything on dancing. Wade Todd, who was an eligible young suitor, a little drunk and sentimental at his bridge party of seven. Another day of uncertainty would make her a nervous wreck, Evelyn was certain. How could a man be so slow, so dull!

The man happened to be struggling with a problem of his own. He had everything to say and didn't know how to say it. Instead, he finished his glass and resorted to cough-drops.

"Here's to Solomon!"

"Solomon? Who's?" Evelyn was much too serious to be subtle at the moment.

"He favored Texas beauties, did he not?"

Wade replied with a smile, and Hilda Jones' pleas to her lips. A flood of hope set her body aglow. It was not the first time she had been called a Texas beauty. She was a desirable girl, and knew it. And she considered herself a good sport. Only those who were deprived were in that origin. That creepy, rose-tinted skin was milk-fed. Her hair had been bleached in the gold from the sun. Her lithe, strong limbs were a heritage from the open spaces. But this was a personal secret, since she had become Manhattanized.

Webb walked about the room, glancing idly at the framed photographs, as if he had never seen the familiar objects. He was nervous. More nervous than Evelyn. After all these gruelling weeks of competition, now he was to be going to tell her that the game was ended? For seven years, he felt like a man which was silly, of course. He stopped before her, started to speak, then took a quick gulp from his glass.

"What's the matter?" Evelyn asked. "Didn't you have a happy time this evening?"

He was going to tell her. Now or never! He gave his head a shake, as if to clear it of cobwebs, and began:

"You couldn't be more what you did. But I say, there's lunch. I'd no idea you weren't flush. You are the kind of girl that needs everything lovely, like this....." His glance swept the room.

"Why do you hate to go, even if he does want you to?"

"I don't, of course. As a matter of fact, I wedded ... no fear of cupid. But he says I ought to go and I know he's right. Dad's farm has a continental setting, in part. I've been trying to tell you for some time, Evelyn, but I've been afraid to go. I hate like fury to break up this cozy arrangement, but you say something? Do you think I ought to go?"

"That's not for me to say. I'll be disappointed, terribly disappointed, but I suppose Mr. Moffit is right. You have been very devoted, and you can't very well write about what you haven't seen."

"I bet I could at that. Anyhow, I've given my word. But I didn't know I was going to feel this way about leaving you. I'd refuse to go even now, but, Judith has written for appointments, and has the stage all set for rehearsals."

"You mustn't let me make any difference, Webb. You've got to go, however, I hope. And it will be nice to see you when you come back."

Why didn't the girl cry—make a scene? If she did, he would probably cut out the nonsense and ask her to marry him, take her along. No, that wouldn't do. He couldn't take her on a honeymoon with Judith. He wouldn't want another man within smiling distance.

Evelyn thought it appeared a little indifferent. She should warn Webb, and he would be afraid to leave her without her consent to marry him.

"How long shall you be gone?" she asked, with just the right touch of regret in her voice, she thought.

"It will seem forever to me. At least three months. I'm afraid you'll forget me, Evelyn, won't you?"

"I couldn't ever, ever forget you, Webb, dearest. I'll be very busy, too, going to get a job."

"Why?" You should leave the job to the girls who have to work."

"But I do, Webb. I've spent practically all my money. It wasn't long a lady....."

"What's the matter?" Evelyn asked. "Didn't you have a happy time this evening?"

"Is it so helped," she said, resignedly, and a couple of discreet tears glistened on the lashes of her rich brown lashes.

Webb very properly moved. Suddenly he was kissing her, telling her to be a brave girl until he returned, and that it would be well. But he did not propose.

When it was leaving, he said, "I'm afraid I won't get out again. But I hope to get my job back. I come in Saturday for luncheon? Then we'll go to the box together. My publishers are putting on a party for me. Miss me a little bit, dear twelve," he added, mentioning a endless hotel, "and I'll miss you. I want as much time with you as possible."

"I'll live on Webb."

She saw him to the figure down the walk. He paused to light a cigarette before he got into the car. For an instant, she thought he was pleasant and the well-shaped, snow-white head. Then he waved to her and called good-by. Then she called it a night. She went out on the drive and he was gone.

Evelyn knew that the room in which now seemed haunted to her as she sat there, was empty. She had failed! Big tear! Wherein had he missed a step? Had she been too aloof? Perhaps if she had let him see how he hurt her when he left he as he was doing now.....

She had come to this city six years before, when she was eighteen. Her youth and beauty acted like a magnet to men. For a time, poor had left its scars. Her recollections of this period she dismissed until dimmed by time.

There had been four more weeks! years. Then an eye-opening incident was her up with Webb.

At a party one night in a hotel suite, a girl, called Carmen Gil, had attempted to hold a man against his will. Roda was the name.

"Sorry to quit the party, folks," he said. "But I've got to make a midnight train—board of directors meeting in the morning."

"Can't you cancel it long distance?" Carr Sanders asked him.

"No, it's about that consolidation. Delay would be costly to the whole deal."

"That's too bad. Well, so long, old man. It's been great to have you. Long time no see, Roda."

Reg Roda was not agreeable to this. He went to him, begged him not to leave her. He was pleading all over him. Finally, when he saw it was no good, he said, "Run along now, I've got to work."

Instead, she removed her hat on him, kissed him and said that she have to leave, "Come now," he argued, concerns at the door. One of his wrist watch travelled towards the door. Roda was the name.

"That's for what I'll Roda waste you to do so.

The man's anger rose suddenly, terribly. Breaking from him, he flung her from him ruthlessly, violently.

"Women are such fathheads!" he growled, and slammed " the door after him.

The tousled girl sat up with a vacuous look, rubbing her throbbing head, which had struck against the side of the table when she fell.

"Gimme li'l drink," she blubbered.

That was what girls got who held themselves cheap, Evelyn concluded.

But Evelyn reviewed the years, she realized that she had learned much about men. Learned that while they like to be entertained by, and were impressed with the girls who accept their cocktail and dinner invitations, marriage was the rare exception.

Worth while men, she reasoned, suddenly clarify, find the girl they married to be a mixture of saint and sinner—about one part to a million. So, after the Rose incident, she tried hard to be the masculine ideal of a saint, and not a sinner. Marriage followed, and she was now her goal.

Through this new resolve, she had time on her hands. She used it in improving her mind. After graduating, evening classes at New York University, and began to read good books, and to study them. That was how she met Webb Taylor. He lectured on English literature. He carried on with him afterward, gave him a card, and was surprised at his unfavorable memory.

Webb's father-in-law-to-be father died and left her $2,000 insurance. So she bought a lovely apartment, took the house on Long Island, and continued to acquire a few desirable acquaintances, enough to make a pleasant circle of a few of the less lovelies Webb. He came and was content.

During leave to New York now, debating over the awards of the Pulitzer prize, Webb had informed her Webb that she was not rich, though she had thought she was. She said she was at least well off. She had been left a comfortable fortune, she thought, as she did everything. She did not told him the truth of it till she was compelled to, and then only because of Judith.

He believed she loved him, though he had never suspected that beyond the citadel of her reserve, there was a tender, passionate girl which he longed, yet feared to cross.

Little Benny's Note Book

My sister Gladdis came over to see me this afternoon, and she looked in the room mood. She looked in the room mood. Things look just the same around here, except I got me a little modern and move your furniture around in the wall. You could revolutionize the room by continually changing furniture a little each week.

Let's try it, Gladdis. I'm glad you dropped in, ma said.

Her always inquiring herself when she's moving. Soon as you move the furniture one place she is the same room, and they moved everything all around. Then after supper was in the lite in the front room so pop would look at the paper, and I wish he did, saying. Well for Feet sake, I'm coming out for some something.

Now what's the general import of that particular remark? ma said, with pop. What's the first step in taking all the furniture to the middle of the room and then doing it?

Well of all the ignorant remarks, ma said. Gladdis said. I mean the entire afternoon rearranging this furniture to make the house look a little more modern, and that's the hardest to get for. O it's just too exasperating. I could sit down and cry. This room is a sight in the daytime. Walks what it's been she said.

Is this different, if it's supposed to look like a revolution it's a huge success. Now I'm on your side of the fence. How was I to know? pop said, and said, You're just getting mad because I'm sitting with my feet on the footstool of the footrest and I'm in the fire, you've spoiled my whole afternoon. I'll say you've done. Now I'm just going to spoil yours by leaving on reminding you of it, she said.

Yes you let's lets compromise. I meet how about going to a movie? pop said, and ma said, Lovey Darling? how perfume is it the Narcissus, how you said, I'd even sit through Lovey Darling to avert a civil war, quoth William Potts the grate patrick, come on, let's go.

With they did.

BRINGING UP FATHER

TARZAN THE TERRIBLE

As Mo-sar carried Jane from the Forbidden Garden, she struggled furiously, until he was forced to bind and gag her in self defence. When he came to where his men had gathered, Mo-sar was glad to turn her over to a couple of stalwart warriors. Sure that the vengeance of the slain king's relatives would soon search him out, Mo-sar now hurried down out of the hills from which A-lur was carved. Luckily for him, he succeeded in safely reaching the lake called Jad-ben-lul.

Here, on the big lake's edge were his fleet of strong canoes, hollowed from tree trunks. Into the stern of one the warriors cast their captive at a sign from their chief. "Beautiful One," he said, "let us be friends and you shall not be harmed. You will find Mo-sar a kind master if you do his bidding." Thinking to make a good impression on her, he removed the gag from her mouth and the thongs from her wrists, knowing well she could not escape.

Under the splashing of a hundred paddles the fleet moved off. All day they glided through the windings of rivers and across the lakes into the valley of Jad-ben-Otho. In the last canoe Mo-sar, tiring of his fruitless efforts to win response from his silent captive, squatted in the bottom of the canoe with his back toward her and sought sleep. Thus they moved in silence through the verdure clad banks of a little river.

At last the canoe fleet came out upon a vast sheet of water whose black shores seemed far away under the weird influence of a moonlit night. Through it all, the captive while woman sat alert in the stern of the canoe bearing her to an unknown destination. For months she had been the prisoner of first one ruthless creature and then another. How she had survived unharmed, she believed only by the grace of a kind and watchful Providence.

WORKINGMAN TO BE HELPED

Workmen to be Looked After

"In the short time I have been a member of the Legislature, great things have been done for the workingman, but this has been only a start. There remains much to be done. But, like all things good, changes must come gradually. Things can't be turned upside down in a week or so. Radical reforms and changes must have time. Other than that it would result in chaos such as we have witnessed in other countries. But the workingman of the British Empire has always been the best off, and always will be."

The Workmen's Compensation Act was stated by Mr. Ireland as one great and needed change that had resulted favorably for the workingman following its legislation. Mothers' Allowance Act was also a great thing for the country but was not fully complete as yet, warned the speaker. Other articles must be incorporated within the latter before it can be called, complete. One instance cited was that of a mother and child, who must be looked after. Some other form of legislation should also be extended to men unable to work. These reforms, if time was indulged, were just in the offing and would eventually come.

Mention of the Minimum Wage Act by Mr. Ireland provoked loud and sustained applause.

"That is one Act, that is inevitable. It must come. Women who work have it for their protection, and it is only just and right that its privileges be extended to men. In this matter I stand solidly behind Premier Henry and his manifesto favoring the Act."

An interruption was caused at this point by a front row member who asked: "Have you any idea of the rate of pay that would be given the workmen in the event of its legislation?"

"That would probably be worked out between the intervention and the manufacturer, and the workingman himself. They would have to come to terms to arrive at an equitable decision," replied Mr. Ireland.

Must Come Slowly

"Now Come Slowly," comes slowly," warned the speaker. "When the Workmen's Compensation Act came into force, manufacturers all through the country waited to pretest and foresee the ruin of business. But since then they have found it as just to themselves as it is to their employees. I believe this is one of the best Acts of modern time."

Unemployment insurance mentioned by Mr. Ireland also brought a wave of applause.

"Nowadays we hear so much about stabilization and unemployment. That I believe it would be a good idea to superannuate some people at an earlier age, or start the Old Age Pension earlier. I'm a firm believer in this insurance. It will operate in a similar manner as the Minimum Wage Act, and it will be as well brought about."

Mr. Ireland referred briefly to the work accomplished by the Conservative party in the last seven years in other services. He cited the many millions that were used in bringing relief and assurance to homes in the hardest sections of the north. He drew a parallel between conditions in the old days, when infected teeth were common and dentistry was unknown. Now travelling dental laboratories, and medical cars, bring public health to the most isolated. Children living in the most remote parts are taken to the cities and hospitals without ever seeing the inside of a school. Such humanitarian courses are arranged free by the government. Much of the money being spent now was not even realized by the average man or woman.

In closing his address Mr. Ireland asked members of his large audience to present any question they would like answered. "Ask me while I can't guarantee an answer, I'll make a good try at it."

"How can the standard government wage?" asked a voice in the back. "Sixty cents an ordinary work."

"Were on County Scale"

"Then why are the highway workers being paid only twenty-five?"

"That is a county wage, paid jointly by the county and government. I admit it's not enough, but that work is being carried on directly by the government is I believe being paid by the rate of forty cents."

Mr. Ireland digressed at this point to explain that no matter what a man's political faith was there had never been any discrimination shown by him in any matter. He had, he explained, been as hard for those who voted for him as he did for those, when he knew were directly opposed. Several instances, where Old Age Pensions and Mothers' Allowances had been secured for people when he knew they were not supporters of his party were given as an example.

"Why can't the government put more men at work on the highways? And did you know there are four hundred or more men in Belleville on relief?" asked a voice from the audience.

"The matter of work is a joint agreement between County and the government. If the county feels that they can't afford to hire more men, then the government must assistance. And it must be understood, that if four hundred men are put on the job all at once, the work would soon be ended."

Re-Alderman Harold Armstrong from a back row asked: "Do I understand the government is still continuing to pay their portion of relief to municipalities, who ask for it?"

"Yes, that's right. They are still at work along these lines. As far as I know it hasn't been changed yet."

"Is the work at the Ontario School for the Deaf being done under contract?" asked Robt. Wills.

"No."

"Then why the difference in pay? They get forty cents there; on the highway they get twenty-five.

"It all boils down again to the same old question between county and government. I know twenty five dollars isn't enough, but I don't make the rate."

City Council Has No Part

"Has the city council anything to do with the highway rate?" asked another member.

"No, it's between the county and the government only."

"This road work seems to be a sort of 'unemployment work' measure for the city," added another.

"The road work started, Mr. Ireland, "was started as a means of helping back prosperity to the workingmen. The government believed, that the money that was being paid out to the men would be spent locally, and start men on the job. That is one of the evils that must be cured under the new Act. If the Conservative Party is re-elected in the just how soon can it be expected, that the Act would be enforced?"

Mr. Ireland: "It is already in the manifesto and completely endorsed by the Conservative government the same as any other plank in the platform. I believe it could be worked out to the advantage of both employer and employee almost immediately. And, if I'm returned to office I will consider it my duty to use my best efforts to push it along. The slowness bugs of so-called greed the promise by Mr. Ireland.

More questions were forthcoming.

In the closing remarks, in which he thanked the audience for their attendance and attention, Mr. Ireland pointed out, that he had not appeared in Belleville to sell anyone how to vote. "That's a thing, that no one should interfere with. Your franchise is the one thing that is yours, and yours alone, and others. No one has any right to interfere with it. I am not asking for your support, then all I can say is that I appreciate the attention you have given me. A second colleague of ours, Mr. Chalmers, will speak in conclusion of the address.

COMPETITION DISASTROUS

Moyer Brothers Firm Official Tells Mass Buying Profits

OTTAWA, May 31.—(CP)—Competition has been packing plants has almost driven his 30-year-old firm to the wall, Miss Morgan, secretary-treasurer of Moyer Brothers Limited, port packers of St. Catharines, Ont., told the Parliamentary Mass Buying Committee today.

The St. Catharines packer read a letter to the committee which he wrote to the minister of trade and minister in April. The letter said mail-throat competition from large packing plants and chain stores had placed the firm in a very precarious position; that it was 3 years ago it was formed, and that while it is all he, gone. Now we are back where we started as regards volume and worse off because the costs of production were about double what they were then."

It was his opinion, Mr. Moyer said, the law making plants "manipulate free hog prices" on the market is the root of trouble for everyone but themselves.

Small packing plants could not survive much longer, due to the competition, he said, and consumers who under-sold them.

This cut-throat competition prevailed the nightout the St. Catharines district are said. Mr. Moyer said in the last two years, Mr. Moyer stated.

Buying Wholesale

Cut in the two companies his firm had bought wholesale many sheet of products from Big packers, chiefly Canada Packers, he had found.

said Mr. Moyer, his firm had paid a higher price than the Big Packers had sold to retailers.

The casualty of his plant was from 200 to 225 hogs per week, but it was down to a handling of only 75 hogs weekly, said witness.

"Do you hope the practice of Big Packers is to go into a territory and where they have been selling their goods at a lower price than in a territory where there is no competition?" asked Hon. H. H. Stevens, chairman.

"It appears that way," answered witness.

Radical Difference Between Platforms of Two Parties Claimed

TELLS FOUSTON

Says Affiliation With Companies Never Interferes With Party

Willowdale, Ont., May 31. (CP)—Premier George S. Henry moved northward today, carrying the defence of this Conservative government over the week-end of Mitchell F. Hepburn, leader of the Liberal party, in a speech moulded on to Gravenhurst after Saturday's meeting of his own constituents here last night when he charged Mr. Hepburn with being the agent of the C.C.F., as they are themselves.

The Conservative Commonwealth, he said, stood for "confiscation of private property" despite the protests aborted by certain sections of the Liberal party, and continued to be interrupted the premier in the latter part of his address, and attempted to argue with the speaker until the chairman called order and announced no further interruption would be answered until after Clifford Fousten, Conservative candidate in North York had made a brief address.

One man from the rear of the hall told the premier he would never vote for a "Chinaman than any other Liberal, Labor or Conservative party," which he described as "two of a kind."

The Premier, however, said there was a radical difference between the two on declare he and Hepburn would not stand on the same platform because "we are as same C.C.F. as they are themselves." The Conservatives, he said, stood for "law and order," for British institutions and supported

William Nethery Praises Mr. Bowerman For Wardenship

AGAINST TAXES

Debt of Province is Discussed From Various Angles

Ameliasburg, May 31 (Special)—The Liberal meeting was held in Redeserville Hall on Wednesday, May 30.

Mrs. Wells, daughter of the candidate, Mr. Bowerman, was the first speaker. She said, that we all know the country is going in debt, but Henry and his government don't mind, for they will not have to pay this debt.

Mr. Bowerman, the candidate was then called on. "Two men in the Hydro Commission receive the following salaries: one $12,000 and the other $20,000." We find that the Ontario Government has 700 "Executives' salaries $2,000 each—and this is Honest George of the straight furrow. It says in the paper, that he loves his farm, and milks his cow every morning. Recently I saw a picture of him milking a cow, and under the picture was written, "Such scenes seem to be the case with Henry too. Mr. Oliver stated, that last year there was $40,000 spent on the roads. Men who looked after the roads were interviewed and said they never used that at all. What became of that half of it? What became of that money? This year we find new out fillers of clothes. This is merely a case of bribery. They are getting $4 each and a team of $1,000 to $1,000 per month. The Attorney-General, which is the department supposed to be the most sanctimonious, came down to Trenton with two proposals to make. The Prime Minister and Mr. Macaulay said they had agreed to take over the highway from Trenton to Kingston, and the other was that they

White Woodchuck Under Hat, John Holmes Makes Capture

Rawdon (Special) — Mr. John Holmes, popular foreman on the C. N. R. section, has been rewarded for the good fortune to capture a half-grown white woodchuck last Friday when coming home from work.

Mr. Holmes noticed a family of four, two red and two white ones resting quietly near their hole having the arrival of their parents. He approached the family and three of them immediately scurried down the hole while number four sat very quietly and watched the proceedings.

Mr. Holmes gently laid his hat over the little fellow and then picked him up in his hands and carried him home.

He then built a coop with a run runway and the little fellow is now on display and sightseers from Belleville and other points are coming daily to see him.

The little fellow looks very cute as he laps milk up from a saucer and he enjoys a good feed of clover. He is about half grown and each day becomes a little more tame.

Mr. Holmes hopes to catch the other white one in the near future.

Red woodchucks are very common in this district and an old timer recall having seen a black one but this is the first time that a white woodchuck has ever been picked up.

PEN SHAKE-UP IS REPORTED

Warden However Refuses to Comment on "Pen" Matters

Kingston, Ont., May 31 (CP) Verification of rumors regarding changes at the Kingston Penitentiary was impossible today because of the inabsence of Warden M. B. Mcgaughan not to comment in any way on penitentiary matters, but there is little question but that things are not all serene inside the big walls of the institution.

One official stated this morning that lack of discipline among convicts was noticeable. He cited one incident recently when a convict lit a lighted cigarette from the Warden's hand and calmly smoked it, and that nothing was done to the insubordinate convict.

At another time, he said, convicts deliberately started to play ball against the high prison walls.

Trouble in one of the shops recently threatened to become serious, it was learned when a couple of convicts threatened to throw their guard over the railing in the shop some, preparing to throw the guard a distance of some 30 feet to the stone floor. The plot, if plot it was, was frustrated when another convict "tipped off" the guard, who called to them in the shop, one by one.

CEREMONIES

Descendants of Pious Leader Attend Service

Brockville, Ont., May 31 (CP) —Members of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church this afternoon joined in a pilgrimage to the grave of Barbara Heck, who founded Methodism in North America. Residents of this district also took part in the pilgrimage to the grave in Augusta Township.

At the grave on the shores of the Bay Lawrence River tribute was paid to the life and services of Barbara Heck, on the 200th anniversary of her birth.

Members of the Methodist and Ottawa Conference met the members of the Bay of Quinte Conference at the monument erected in memory of Barbara Heck and founder of the first Methodist and United States Methodists. Dr. C. H. Mackay, city of Oshawa, President of the Bay of Quinte Conference, presided at the services and Rev. Dr. R. M. Hamilton, Ottawa, spoke on the life of Barbara Heck's religious career.

Descendants of Barbara Heck, living in Augusta Township, stood by the graveside in the Old Stone Church. It was in Augusta Township that Barbara Heck's brother and her husband, Paul, settled following the Revolutionary War.

Barbara Heck, whose maiden name was Barbara Ruttle, was born in Tipperary County, Ireland. Converted to Methodism at 17 years of age, she became noted for a quiet but fervent piety. While her husband, Paul Heck, she came to America in 1760, and established the first Methodist church in New York City.

With a group of other settlers, the Hecks moved to Canada in 1776 and in 1778 took up land in Augusta Township, near the village of Prescott. The Rock Street was opened to the first Methodist Episcopal Church in Canada, William Losee, in 1790, and Paul Heck ied preaching until his death in 1792. Barbara lived until 1804 and was buried in the cemetery surrounding the Blue Church.

Her first Bible which she carried from Ireland, and age is a treasured relic in Victoria College Library, Toronto.

Civil Marriage 'A Reno in Canada' Rev. T. H. Hall Tells Synod

Kingston, May 31—The Anglican Synod of the Diocese of Ontario, in session here, favored establishing civil courts to handle marriage in Ontario. The delegates approved a resolution to this effect and a committee appointed to study the question.

Dean William Craig was chairman of the special committee, whose recommendation read: "We would ask that the Synod support by its influence any movement to secure the end in view, provided that the movement is such as it can approve of on other grounds. We are also of the opinion, that if a form of civil marriage be established in this Province, care should be taken to safeguard the dignity of marriage in the selection of the rank of the civil magistrate authorized to perform the marriage."

The delegates voted 36 to 17 in favor of the recommendation of the committee.

Dean Craig, Frederick King, K.C., of Kingston; Col. Andrew W. Gray of Brockville, and Judge R. H. McLean of Picton, favored civil marriage. Rev. T. H. Hall of Belleville, opposed the recommendation, declaring the Synod was stepping on dangerous ground.

Rev. Mr. Hall believed civil marriage would tend to establish a "Reno in Canada." The question should be given careful consideration before any action was taken, he maintained.

SPARK BLOWS UP GAS TANKS

One Thousand Dollar Loss Caused at Service Station

TORONTO, May 31, (CP) — A spark from the ignition in a motor caused an explosion in East Hebron service station on Dundas Street, which destroyed two large gas tanks and caused $1,000 damage.

Harry Sedgwick, manager of a local radio station, and John Oakes, Service Station assistant, narrowly escaped death when the gasoline tank, at which the former had parked his car, exploded.

Cairns had just filled the tank in Sedgwick's car and was putting the hose back on the tank when the tank exploded, hurling fragments high into the air. ECONOMICS IN SCHOOLS

Lessons Taught by Slump Years Valuable to Pupils

J. R. Littlepood, Ontario Fanny Bank Superintendent, in a report to the teachers of the schools of Ontario issued from Toronto, discusses the teaching of thrift lessons in the schools. He states that the economic crisis through which the country has passed in the past four and a half years has taught many valuable lessons. One of the results has been a determination on the part of many people that another crisis will not find them without ready money. Evidence of this is found in the fact that many new depositors are reported in the Penny Bank as well as in the chartered banks. Another result has been a general demand that the younger generation be taught practical personal economics.

These reactions demand more than the regular fifteen or twenty minutes devoted to school banking once a week, Mr. Littlepood believes and considers it advisable that thrift lessons be taught on the meaning of money, a sense of values, parental saving, wise spending, money management, industry, independence and similar subjects.

One period a week, in Mr. Littlepood's opinion is the least amount of time that should be devoted to developing an economic consciousness in the minds of boys and girls. The argument that the existing crowded curriculum would not permit such instruction was no answer to the insistent pleading of youthful need for this training.

Mr. Littlepood's report also contains interesting figures as to the relative number of pupils in the different schools throughout Ontario who were taking advantages of the Penny Bank. The average weekly percentage of pupils depositing during March and April in Belleville was 45 percent while the percentage at Brighton was 37 percent and at Trenton 24 percent. King George School led in Belleville with a percentage of 59, Queen Victoria following with 42 percent, and that of Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra being respectively 32 and 28 percent. The total amount on deposit at the end of April, 1934, was $9,940.76 in comparison with the comparative figures of year ago which were $9,163.46.

CAR IS LOCATED NEAR COTE JCT.

Transient Tells Whereabouts of Car Stolen From W. Burgoyne

Found abandoned and secluded in a clump of bushes an automobile belonging to Wm. Burgoyne of this city, was discovered by transients near Cote Junction early yesterday morning, after having been stolen from Mr. Burgoyne's garage some time since previous. The stolen car, according to local police information, was found within four miles of where the three escaped prisoners from the Brantford jail were apprehended yesterday. It is believed by the local police, that these three escaped convicts stole Mr. Burgoyne's car early Tuesday morning, continuing their journey eastward.

Previous to the theft of the Burgoyne automobile a Trenton motor car was found abandoned on College Street. It had been stolen in Trenton early Monday evening. The police are led to believe, that the men had stolen cars all along the line, from Toronto to the Quebec boundary, driving each one until it ran out of gasoline.

The first information received by the local police relating to the whereabouts of the Burgoyne car came late last night, when a transient informed the desk sergeant, that he had seen a local licensed automobile hidden in a clump of bushes near Cote Junction. An immediate check-up found the transient's story true. The transient gave his name as Theaophil Danis of Drummondville, Que. The Burgoyne car is being held for identification by the Cote Junction police.

STIRLING SCOUTS TAKE PART IN JAMBOREE

Tied For Second Place Honors in Series of Events

Stirling.—The First Stirling Troop of the Boy Scouts under Scout Master Tom Ward attended the Peterboro District Jamboree held on May 24th, and succeeded in tieing for second place honours with the Sixth Peterboro (St. John's) Troop. Twelve hundred scouts in all attended, while some thirty representing the local Troop accepted the cordial invitation of the Peterboro Boy Scouts Association to attend the Jamboree which they were holding on the C.G.I.T. Grounds at Nassau, some three miles above Peterboro, on Victoria Day.

The local representation assembled at 8 o'clock in full uniform with lunch in hand and through Committee arrangements provided through the kindness of Rev. R. W. Rowland, A.S.M., there were also in attendance of the 1st Stirling Troop, R. Ward, Harry Cooke, and Ross Shore were conveyed to the scene of the Jamboree. Prior to the events, the boys enjoyed a brief visit to the Liftlocks and were privileged to inspect one of the greatest feats of hydraulic engineering in the world, many boys availing themselves of the opportunity to take a number of snapshots. Lunch at noon was in accordance with true Scout style, and was eaten on the sailing banks of the Otonabee River. After lunch a wrestling bout was staged as well several unique stunts but the time was short and after clearing up and burning all refuse paper, the boys were motored to the grounds at Nassau for the Jamboree.

The spot is indeed ideal for such an event situated as it is beside the River, a sailing plain of three hundred acres. The Troops represented in the different events were the Fourth Oshawa Troop, the Fifth Oshawa Troop, the Sixth Oshawa Troop, the Seventh Oshawa Troop, the First Cobourg Troop, the Second Cobourg Troop, the First Lindsay Troop, the First Blackstock Troop, the First Petersboro Troop, the Second Peterboro Troop, the Sixth Peterboro Troop, the Eighth Peterboro Troop, and the First Stirling Troop; in addition to three hundred healthy, red-blooded Canadian Boy Scouts, one hundred Wolf Cubs had assembled and although no programme had been prepared officially for them, they enjoyed the various exhibitions and displays of Scoutcraft as staged by their big brother Scouts.

At 1.30 District Commissioner J. J. Lumley summoned the boys to the large horse-shoe formation around the flag pole by Assistant District Commissioner Allen Hoag, President of the Peterboro District Scout Association, and Secretary of the Jamboree, and introduced to the visiting Scouts a most cordial welcome. Leaders were then called together for a short discussion among the Scout Masters, programmes were distributed and entries from the various troops exhibiting in the Handicraft, Secretary of the Peterboro Association announced the course. The programme prepared for the day's activities was a splendid one embodying Scout Scout games, and Scout Craft.

The first event of this thoroughly comprehensive bill, was a test event in charge of A.S.M. Max Hutchinson of the 8th Peterboro Troop. Eight local boys represented the Stirling Troop, Jim Ward, Russell Woodlock, Clare West, Gerry Ward, Jack Potter, Lloyd Sartain, Bob Jones and Bob Cooke with seven of the Peterboro Troop straddling a pole facing J. Ward, corrwalk, who was likewise flanked by Scout Potter. The object of the race was to run or waddle to a flag 50 yards distant, return to the starting ground, returning. Unfortunately for the Stirling entry, their pole or rather, "beat" broke and so the event was lost. The second event with Fred Joblin and Arthur Gould entering for the local, was in charge of G. Goombridge, S.M. of the First Peterboro Troop with the object being to secure five wood, build a fire, melt a tin of wax in a pail of water, although the boys did not burn the water entirely they finished a close second in the race.

The third event consisted in the naming of twenty-five trees designated in the adjacent wood and in this six Scouts from each troop entered. The locals composed of Doug Richardson, J. Mahon, Ken Morrow, F. Scondeo, F. Joblin and C. Holmes finished in second position with John Munro deserving special mention as he named every tree correctly. The fourth event, the Scout game of "skin the snake" was most entertaining, the same contestants as those in the boat race taking part. The pillow fight, the fifth on the programme was a most exciting event with J. Potter and J. Munro being dispatched as it was during this that John Munro's hair touched the ground and the boys had shown themselves to be worthy of bumps on the log. It was most unfortunate that Johnnie had not visited the local barber shop earlier to his departure for the big city.

The tug of war, however, that tug-of-war, however, that test of might, strength and ignorance, saw the Stirling contestants, Arthur Gould, Clifford Holmes, Fred Joblin, C. Potter, and K. Morrow clinch third place honours. The knotting race did not find the locals adding points, although they are quite in the art of tieing knots, failed to keep up to the pace in running in the eighth event, a fireman's lift race, the locals took first honours with C. West the pallbearer, J. Ward, G. Matheson, L. Rowand, B. Jones carrying him, and Fred Joblin applying the Schafer method of resuscitation. The tenth event, the Message Relay saw Stirling crop third place with the entry composed of R. Matheson, K. Morrow, C. Holmes, J. Mahon, F. Joblin and L. Rowland. In the distance judging event, distances ranging from 100 yards to 1500 yards, the First Stirling Troop scored first place honours, they also were victorious in their ball game.

The Beale Cup Message Relay open only to troops of the Peterboro District was the feature of the day and was won by the Lindsay Troop, a model Scout organization in every way. Incidentally in addition to retaining possession of the Beale Cup, they won the pennant for the troop attaining the greatest number of points in the day's events while the 1st Stirling and the 6th Peterboro Troops tied for second place honours.

Mrs. Peterboro Scouts were hosts to the visiting Scouts at supper and in the evening, a council fire was run off in true Scout style, by F. G. Wolf, S.M., of 6th Peterboro Troop. The highlight of this was the War Dance staged by the victorious Lindsay Troop. This marked the close of a most successful Jamboree and the organization in charge is to be commended for the splendid management of the day. The people of Stirling feel justly proud of their aggressive Scout Troop and their Scout Master and feel that they made a most praise-worthy showing even when matched against Scout Troops from large cities.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

The Stirling Board of Education convened in the High School Board Room on Monday evening, May 28th, at 8 p.m. for the regular monthly meeting with the following members present: J. B. Belshaw, C. F. Linn, H. C. Martin, J. S. Morton, Lloyd Bailey, Dr. C. F. Walt, C. R. Bastedo, Earl Bailey and Walter Wright. The minutes of the last meeting were read and duly adopted following which J. S. Morton submitted a report stating that the Agricultural plot had been secured from Mrs. Hockey for the fee of $10 per year.

Dr. Walt likewise submitted a statement in which he stated that Miss Edith Bowen had been secured to fill the vacancy occasioned by Miss McCulloch's absence from the Public School staff and would supply there for the remainder of the term. In regard to the vacancy on the High School staff due to the resignation of Mr. H. B. Disbrow, no steps have been taken to fill the position although several applications have been received. Dr. Walt also devoted some time to the collection of fees in arrears, the Board the work required of a teacher in Agriculture in accordance with the School regulations. Mr. H. B. Tompkins, editor of the Stirling News-Argus was introduced to the meeting after which the bills were ordered paid and the meeting adjourned. The following are the accounts, Public High School, Birks-Ryrie, $5.26; Mr. Disbrow, $7.50; Clifford Holmes, $4.00; C. Belshaw, $16; J. O. Butler, $71; J. S. Morton, $23.65; Mrs. Hockey, $10.

The Life Saving Crews of the Town League played on the High School grounds on Monday evening, the Dunlop aggregation suffered a severe defeat at the hands of Walt Wright's lads.

Rev. A. R. McDonnell of St. John's Church and Dr. M. H. Mahon, and Messrs J. B. Belshaw and James Scott are in Kingston on Tuesday and Wednesday attending the Synod of the Diocese of Kingston.

The concluding meeting of the season for the St. Paul's U.C.W. was held in the church parlours on Monday evening with a record attendance of approximately one hundred and seventy-five persons. As the Blue side was victorious in the season's count over the Red, and place White side by a substantial margin of ninety-two points, that side assumed charge of the meeting. Incidentally the Blue side is the Literary Department of the U.C.W., and is under the direction of Miss Marion Jones, third vice-president.

On entering the parlours beautifully decorated in shade of blue, one was transported in fancy to one of those bewitching scenes taken from Arabian Nights simply in gazing at the blue-vaulted dome of the testifying structure over which the lighting effect produced an impression of a blue-summer sky. In addition to the other blue decorations, a profusion of blooms—lilies, apple blossoms and marsh marigolds—rendered the scene one of rare beauty.

As is customary, the meeting opened with the president, Mrs. Harry Jones, in the chair and following the singing of the Young People's hymn, the latter, Rev. E. W. Rowland, led in prayer. The first feature of a thoroughly enjoyable programme was a spirited debate, "Resolved that Old Maids are best to the welfare of the community than Bachelors," with Fred Joblin and John Munro taking the affirmative side and Misses Helen Mallory and Margaret Craig upholding the honours of the negative side. The latter proved most amusing, each side advancing flights of unheard of arguments and theories which made the old maids and bachelors appear in a by no means favorable light. Each speaker was given an allotted three minutes with an additional two minutes for the reply. The judges, Rev. E. W. Rowland, Miss Lulu Johnston and Mrs. Harry Rowland experienced a great deal of difficulty in arriving at a decision, but after much deliberation, Mr. Lovibond with much gusto, submitted the decision of the judges in favour of the awarded a win to the affirmative side by the narrow margin of two-quarters of a point. Mr. Harry Hinds acted as timekeeper.

Miss Marion Jones gave a clever clock trick and after Mrs. Dobbie, Mrs. Hockey, Mrs. Morrow, Mrs. H. C. Martin and Mrs. Earl Bailey had apparently had their fortunes told at the fair, the abandoned all avowing Miss Jones a master at the game. The president then addressed the gathering voicing in appropriate words his sincere regret in the retirement of the Y.P.U. drawing to a close and saying that he felt it was inevitable that some of those members to whom all had become endeared through association in the Y.P.U. throughout the year would not be present when the organization is resumed again in the autumn. With a brief recession of the Y.P.U. prior of the joyalty and support of the officers of the society throughout the past season, the latter concluded his remarks.

Mrs. E. W. Rowland and Mrs. Arthur Fryer, next contributed a delightful piano duet to the programme, "The Dragon Fly" and "Shepherd's Dance" sang a beautiful vocal solo, "Do You Know the Garden" during which Charles Irwin rendered a Hawaiian guitar selection "Song which he was heartily encored responding with "Juanita". Rev. Rowland then gave a most humorous monologue entitled "Arguments of a Fussy Lawyer" which provoked much merriment. Mr. John Jones gave a musical number in which he played the Spanish Guitar and the mouth-organ and received an encore, playing such numbers as "In the Sweet By and By", "Shall We Gather at the River" and "Turkey in the Straw". The Misses Grace and Barbara Wright rendered a vocal duet, "The Old Spinning Wheel" which was well received by an appreciative audience. The lucky door prize for the variegated bouquet of crepe paper were distributed to the guests on first entering the blue-shaded parlours was won by Mrs. Dodds, of Edmonton, who held the lucky circular ticket. The programme having been concluded dainty refreshments were served after which the gathering dispersed, the meetings of the Y.P.S. not to be resumed until the Autumn. The season has been a most successful one and the meeting of Monday evening formed a most fitting conclusion to it.

Mrs. and Mrs. C. R. Bastedo were Victoria Day visitors in Kingston and Albion.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lain of Montreal were week-end guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Linn.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Bocock were week-end visitors on Sunday.

TWENTY-SIX YE AR-OLD ONTARIO WOMAN MOTHER OF QUINTUPLE GIRLS

At callander, Ontario, near North Bay, history was made when quintuple children, all girls, were born to Mrs. Oryla Dionne, 26-year-old mother of six other children. Mrs. Dionne was married at the age of 20. She is here seen with the five new children, whose average weight at birth was 2½ pounds. The father, when asked, if he felt proud, is reported to have replied: "I ought to be ashamed of myself." The doctor who was in attendance at the births believes the children will probably die.

TAX-OWERS

Necessity is the mother of invention in many spheres and it is no wonder that the mother of invention has been busy in the dull times so lately beginning to disappear.

One of the newest results of the depression is the manner of meeting the default of taxes. Of course there is the old way to sell the property at a municipal tax sale but the mayor of Winnipeg does not like that manner of dealing with the situation for one of the most deplorable events in a city or town or in the countryside is to see a man forced out of his own home.

So the mayor of the Manitoba capital has an idea—Barter for Taxes. He barters work for taxes. Over sixty thousand in arrears has been treated in that way in that city, where the method is called a success.

Hamilton Spectator discussing this situation which of necessity faces every municipality in the country says that if work is not deliberately created the plan might be worked out with success in Hamilton. "This barter system to reduce tax arrears is not so simple as it appears at first blush. The controllers should hesitate before they approve of any expenditure to provide work for 'tax-owers,' to make sure they are not paying out unnecessarily the money of the tax-payers. Careful judgment needs to be exercised. Otherwise we see no fundamental objection to the proposal. Work the city had to do might legitimately be done in exchange for taxes."

The question is whether municipalities as a matter of fact are not creating work which would not ordinarily be done.

The problem under the system would be to find work to barter for taxes, work which would not interfere with the work which causes councils a great deal of anxiety to provide—that to remedy unemployment.

But just the same the problem of the taxpayer who has not money to pay his taxes is a vital problem.

CORBEIL IN LIMELIGHT

The offer of fifty thousand dollars to exhibit the quintuplets girls at the Century of Progress Fair at Chicago has come to Oliva Dionne of Corbeil, Ontario.

The birth of the five girls, a sensation according to doctors, and the coincidence of the world's fair have changed the whole future of the Dionne family. Never will life be just the same to them, that is to the six older children and the parents, but of course all life is new to the last five arrivals.

The Century of Progress Exhibition will make a financial success of the apearance of the children and the parents at the fair.

Some persons might say that the motive is mercenary, but where can any harm be done as it is planned to take all precautions for the safety of the children by the chartering of a special train to carry the quintette to the fair and the rest of the family with nurses and doctors to guard the health of the family.

Never will things be just the same, it can truthfully be said, for the Dionnes. Life is never the same for anyone for that matter but for the older members of the Dionne race and for the parents life has taken on a vastly different phase than since the five storks arrived with their blessings.

BE READY TO VOTE

The time has come for every person to see that he or she is on the voters' list for the coming election. The machinery has been at work collecting names of voters for the next provincial session but there is a possibility of omissions. Therefore all should examine the lists which have been posted up in the city to see that the names are already on the list.

If the names are not on the list, machinery is provided for placing them on the list.

Elections are of little or no value unless the vote polled is practically a total vote of the people qualified to vote.

So the elector has two duties, first to see that he is on the voters' list as on view at the city hall and in the various polling subdivisions, and then—Vote.

Less than twenty days remain in which the entire province will be canvassed. By the end of that time the vote will have been cast and the political destiny of the province set for another term.

TWO BREADWINNERS TO FAMILY

Sociologists are watching with closest attention the trend of the families in this age of transition. There used to be five in a family with one breadwinner on the average. In 1920 in New York City where conditions of course are somewhat different from what they are in smaller centres, the family averaged 4.3 persons. Four years ago in the federal census the average was 4.1, and now it is 4 to a family with two breadwinners. The average of five to a family is said to have gone forever.

Birth control is advocated by a number of organizations and some churches, but the economic problem itself appears to be limiting the size of the families in the United States.

Figures from London, indicate the same trend as in New York.

Housed here are treasures which will ease
The mind of half its miseries;
Here, keys to all earth's lands and seas;

And open sesame, as well,
To dreams of heaven and dreads of hell.
Here magic is, with potent spell,

Within, the matchless Shakespeare waits,
Who knew all hearts, all loves and hates,
Who mastered all this world's estates,

Here, Plato, Socrates, the wise
Who looked on life with tranquil eyes,
And paid no toll of hopes or sighs.

Here, Marco Polo and the rest
Who loved the strange, the unpossessed,
The ungained goal, the endless quest.

Here, souls the fates could not resist;
And with these deathless, keeping tryst,
Come, those whom life and love have missed.

CHART AND COMPASS are needed by the careful navigator to ensure a safe and profitable voyage. Similarly in the voyage of life chart and compass are needed so that the human craft be not blown aimlessly about and possibly wrecked upon the rocks of failure. John Galsworthy, the noted writer, had always before him on his desk this chart for guidance in life's voyage:

> I shall pass through this world but once; any good thing, therefore, that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any human being, or dumb animal, let me do it now. Let me not defer it, or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again.

DOWN IN DALLAS, TEXAS, there was a union of souls, two hearts that beat for a time as one, then beat it for parts unknown or otherwise. True love and all other kinds of love comes in assorted sizes hence when a grinning darky lad of 105 pounds wedded a wench who admitted to a displacement of at least three hundred pounds there were those who saw storm signals in the distance. Sure enough the couple reached police court last week with domestic woes to relate and marks of battle. The lady had a black eye which she accused her lightweight husband of handing to her. He retorted with the charge that "She tried to set on me." As he did not care to be squelched he handed her a left uppercut which caused the discoloration. Two husky cops were required to hoist the 300-pound dusky damsel up the stairs to the women's ward of the city jail.

ONE MILLION DOLLARS is paid out every month in Porcupine gold camp in wages, according to an editorial in the North Bay Nugget. Hollinger, McIntyre, Dome, big gold producers, are the big shots of this camp which has the progressive town of Timmins as its capital. Golden City, original headquarters of the gold seekers, has long since disappeared and South Porcupine has taken second place to Timmins, the metropolis of the camp, named after the brothers Timmins, one-time Mattawa storekeepers, afterwards LaRose mine millionaires and head of the Hollinger mine development. An estimate of the total population of the Porcupine camp gives 30,000 persons, and this means an average of $33 income a month for every man, woman and child in the camp. With the average family of five the average income would be about $170 per month per family. There are five thousand men on the mines payrolls with an average wage of $200 a month. All of which shows that Ontario's mining industry is a great factor in Canada's present and prospective prosperity, and while the mortality among mines is sure and certain, Ontario's mineral deposits have been proven to be great in quantity, quality and depth, and while the shafts go deeper and deeper in the working mines prospectors are constantly finding elsewhere new and promising outcrops for future development.

LOCH NESS MONSTER, reported as decapitated and very much dead and decomposed, also designated as a member of the herring family very much enlarged, has bobbed up serenely from below or wherever he or she happened to be since last heard from, indicating that the report of the demise was very much exaggerated. So it is reported from the vicinity of Loch Ness where reputable citizens assert that they saw the one and only Loch Ness monster very much alive and in motion. Consequently the value of Loch Ness as an attraction for tourists seriously impaired by the report of the finding of the alleged body of the monster is again restored, for which the innkeepers, and tradesmen generally of that locality will be duly thankful.

LOOKING BACKWARD
GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

Today the C.P.R. steamship Empress of Ireland lies at the bottom of the St. Lawrence river, having been rammed in a dense fog yesterday morning by a heavily laden collier as she lay to near Father Point awaiting day and the sun. The crew and passenger list totalled 1,387 and of this number 954 are missing. No ocean tragedy in Canada's history has cost so many lives, and only two others in modern times the sinking of the Titanic and the burning of the Volturno in mid-Atlantic have exceeded the loss in yesterday's horror. The most prominent men among the victims were Commissioner Rees of the Salvation Army, who was in charge of the Canadian contingent of 200 Salvationists en route to the Army Congress in London the actor Laurence Irving son of Sir Henry Irving, his wife, and Sir Henry Seton Karr, the famous sportsman and big game hunter. The Empress of Ireland was valued at $2,000,000.00 and her cargo was valued at $250,000.

Miss E. Wilmott of Campbellford is among the survivors of the Empress of Ireland wreck.

Some people complain that the lawn hose fiends are at it again and are soaking the streets and wasting the city's water in a way contrary to law. One bicyclist got a mud bath and a bruised side besides losing enough skin to make a tobacco pouch with. Something should be done about this.

COUGHS VARY IN SOUND AND DENOTE CAUSE

The Cough is Not The Disease, But Shows That Disorder Exists

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.
(Copyright, 1934 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

One of the things medical students learn when they go to college is to distinguish between different kinds of coughs and, from the sound and manner of such spasms to determine the seriousness of the condition producing it.

One must remember, that across the middle of the "voice-box," or larynx, is a structure called the "glottis." This is a transverse partition stretching from side to side, but slightly open in the middle. It is widest when we take a deep breath.

Whenever we cough, the following takes place; First, a deep inspiration is made in order to fill the lungs with as much air as possible. Secondly, the glottis is closed completely. Next, a sudden and forcible expiration is made, this act forcing the glottis open and allowing for a rush of air to pass through it. Naturally, any foreign body that happens to be lodged in the throat is thus cleared out. In fact, that is the very purpose of any cough, to remove from the breathing passages anything that irritates them.

In croupy coughs, such as to which children are prone, the cough is dry and sounds like the barking of a dog. In bronchial states, the cough likewise may be dry, although sometimes it sounds moist. The latter sound is caused by the presence of mucus which the cough tries to expel.

A pneumonia cough often is dry at first and moist afterwards. In the beginning, also pain is present when the patient coughs. A pleurisy cough, which may be confused with pneumonia, is, however, never loud. It sounds as though it were being held back.

The asthma cough is strikingly characteristic. It is whistling and wheezing. Often several loud and rattling sounds accompany it.

The cough in an ordinary cold may be dry and barking or moist and less loud, depending upon the severity as well as the stage of advance of the infection. In a cold, the cough becomes more and more moist as the patient succeeds in bringing up and dislodging mucus.

So-called "nervous coughing" is also recognized. This is a monotonous, catchy kind of sound which is frequently repeated but which never appears in what might be termed "spasms of coughing." It resembles the sounds accompanying clearing of the throat. It has no special significance unless it persists and becomes an annoying habit. In the latter event, of course, it requires treatment.

All coughs, except nervous ones, are produced by an irritation of some kind in the air passages, or by nerve irritation in the lungs. More remote causes may likewise be responsible for coughing, for coughing, for example irritation in the ear or nose.

In violent coughing, the muscles of the chest and abdomen are brought into play and that is why violent coughing can be weakening.

Always should it be borne in mind that the cough, itself, is not the disease, but merely the sign that a disorder may be present. Therefore study your own coughing when it occurs and try not to be alarmed. Should it persist, however, consult a doctor.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

The importance of saliva as a preliminary to digestion is not generally recognized. Saliva moisten the food so that it can be swallowed more readily. If one chews food thoroughly, to the point where it slides into the oesophagus scarcely without effort, hunger is appeased and one feels satisfied with less food. This fact might well be born in mind by those ladies who are continually concerned over the problem of reducing.

Trinity guests were present and the pretty rooms being most attractive with lilacs. During the evening readings by Miss Mildred Lloyd and a vocal solo by Mrs. Goodmurphy were greatly enjoyed. A dainty lunch was served by the hostess.

Fragrance of lilacs and the vivid hues of tulips made a delightful setting for the "Strawberry" tea held yesterday afternoon by John Street Church Ladies' Society in the church parlours. The guests were received by Mrs. Ferguson, Mrs. Fisher, Mrs. Archibald and Mrs. Elizabeth Corbett, and they were invited to the tea room by Miss McLean. The small tables were centred with tulips and the table, at which Mrs. Leo Riggs and Mrs. Mickel poured, was bright with these colorful blossoms. Delicious strawberry short cake was served with tea, those assisting being Mrs. Hagerman, Mrs. Freeman, Mrs. Mac Hill, Mrs. Arthur Hill, Mrs. Walters, Mrs. Morris, Miss Pearl Mills Reddick, Miss A. Hill. Mrs. Riggs was convener of the very successful tea which Mrs. Rose and Mrs. Smith were in charge of the food table.

YOUNG WOMEN'S GUILD

The regular monthly meeting of the Young Women's Guild of John Street United Church was held at the home of Mrs. J. McIlquish, 280 Ann street, on Monday evening. The meeting was in charge of the President, Mrs. J. McIntosh. In the absence of the Secretary, the minutes of the previous meeting were read by Miss Olive Elson, after which Miss Doris Kerr conducted a short devotional period, the theme of which was —God speaking to us through stories.

The main topic for the evening's discussion "Child Psychology" was cleverly presented by Mrs. R. Hagerman.

It was shown that the first five years of a child's life were rose, important and that children's lives are affected more by environment than hereditary influences.

Excellent papers of the different phases of "Child Psychology" were read by Mrs. S. Graham, Mrs. Gibson, Mrs. Morley Buck and Mrs. A. E. Buck.

After refreshments had been served by the social committee the meeting adjourned.

AMELIASBURG LIBERALS

had decided to give the people beer and wine. It is not time to throw party politics in the mire? If a neighbor's house was on fire and he was a Liberal would you Conservatives slip home and let his house burn? No, we would all join hands and put out the fire. This is a case of everybody get together and save the province of Ontario. Mr. Henry says he has a surplus of $447,000. We don't have this surplus and still be in debt for the province $80,000,000. Which way go into the booth on election day, all 7 ads you, to do is to let your conscience be your guide.

Praised For Wardenship

Mr. Whitney Morley endorsed the meeting and then he said, "Mr. Bowerman has saved for this county thousands of dollars. You must satisfy go to any member, who sat with him down in Picton, and they will hear that we never had a better man running in Prince Edward, than Mr. Bowerman. You hear Conservatives say that Mr. Hepburn has no policy, Mr. Hepburn says he will cut the cost of administration in half. Is that not as good a policy as any? Mr. Hepburn could not do it. Why? Because he is surrounded by a band of numskulls who are businessmen and civil service men, and unnecessary government employees. Mr. Drew has burn has promised to clean house. This means that he will get rid of these government officials, graftors and civic service people. At a meeting in Picton where Colleyer answers Liberal candidate, it was said, "In supporting Mr. Colleyer you are supporting a united party" and then further down, "Why should we change from a party that is and true man to a stranger at a time of crisis like this." In the Liberal Platform" It says that if Ontario is the lightest taxed province in Canada, and that more than 90 per cent. of the taxation does not affect the average citizen unless he or she utilizes the services provided by the Province. More than 90 per cent. of the taxation does not affect the average citizen unless he lives in the Province of Ontario and every taxpayer in Ontario gets a grant from the Federal Government of $2,900,000 of which Ontario has a large share of the customs tariffs, excise tax, sales tax and income tax. Thus the Ontario Government has a revenue of $8,000,000 from these sources.

Collect Gas Tax

They collect a gasoline tax of $12,600,000, and motor car licenses and permits, $7,800,000. A province cannot drive his own car but his own lane without being taxed. Since Mr. Henry has come into power, they said the toll-gates were all gone, but every place you go now, there is a toll. In the Mail and Empire Mr. Henry says he finds it advisable to raise the funds of the Mothers' Allowance Act. The only cure he finds it necessary to raise are those living in his constituency or having them attend. If George Henry comes back in office, he will not be able to do it, because he does not have the money. In the Last year, Mr. Henry Government Minister and Hydro-ites, in town of the county and township councils that there was a scarcity of funds for spending on the roads. These roads are in a bad way because of lack of money. Now three weeks before election they find $20,000,000 to spend digging out ditches. In a speech sometime ago, Mr. Henry said in March 1923, there were 486,000 persons on relief.

Too Discriminating

"This spring there were 90,000 less persons on relief than there were at the same time last year. He said he was going to raise enough to spend over 25 percent. There are more than 25 percent. less persons receiving relief, yet he is going to spend 25 percent. more money on relief. Why? Because there is an election in three weeks. Another charge which I have against the Henry Government is that they are too discriminating between the farms and the towns and villages. If you look at the list you find that those receiving the full allowance of $20.00 are, a large majority of them, living in towns or villages. "If a widow lives in a town she gets $5.00 more than the widow who lives in the country."

Mr. McNeil, Warden of the County of Prince Edward, then spoke. He has been clearly allied with Mr. Bowerman for three years in the county Council, and he says the mothers and daughters in this county can go to the polls and vote whether without any hesitation whatever, as to the conduct and character of his life.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, May 31 (AP)— While strikes threatened in the major United States steel and Textile industries, stocks dropped in today's dull and listless market.

Speculative forces found no special cheer in the quarterly report of strength of grains at Chicago. "Dollar" shares were rather than usual affected as further drought reports did not minimize the prospects of a big crop timage. Oats spurted the limit of 3 cents a bushel and rye and other cereals were within reaching distance of the day's allowable of advances. U. S. Government Securities, though not other bonds of the secondary categories were easier.

Aside from rubber shares, which including Sears Roebuck, Armour of Illinois preferred, Chrysler, Howe Sound and International Nickel.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 31 (CP)—Industrial shares suffered from profit-taking today, prices drifting down in sentiment. The reactionary tendency on the New York Board was apparently to be expected after the unbroken series of gains here and bids were mainly under the market. All groups showed weakness though food and utility shares had a fair proportion of advances.

Hiclet sagged below $26, closing at $25.85, for a loss of 22 cents. C.P.R. and Ford A. took the minimum recession and Brantford was unchanged at 9 1-8. Distillery shares came out in reduced volume and only Walker's Common closed with a gain, Industrial and Utilities was unchanged at 11. Distillers Seagrams weakened 1½ and breweries 1 to 3 points with 23 cents in all $1.30.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, May 31 (AP)—The Stock Market showed a mixed trend today. The decline was led by Steel issues, activity compared with the recent extreme dullness. Losses up to around 3 points were suffered by U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Gulf Oil, Telephone, Delaware and Case. Transfers approximated 440,000 shares.

Money Is Reported Missing From Safe

Two hundred and fifty-seven dollars disappeared from the large safe as the local Coca-Cola plant on Church street this morning. No reports of any suspicious characters having been seen about the premises or the highway else had been secured by the police. At 10.00 today, Jar. Chas. D. Sweetman, in charge of the Coca-Cola plant during the absence from the city of Mr. C. M. Cowan, manager, telephoned the city police informing them that $257.00 in bills was missing from the safe. Sergeant Arthur Booth and Plainclothes Constable Reid were detailed to investigate.

Upon the arrival of the police, Mr. Sweetman informed them that during a short ten minutes absence on his part, from the plant the money was taken.

The police stated that Sweetman informed them he had left the building to deliver some fish to his home. Upon his return Sweetman was informed by a fellow employee that during his absence the fellow employee(s), found the safe door open and had locked it. Immediately Sweetman re-opened the safe and discovered the loss, the police stated after investigating.

KIWANIS ENTERTAIN TONIGHT

Local Service Club Sponsor Stage Screen Show at Belle Theatre

Tonight an entertainment of outstanding merit will be staged at the Belle Theatre under the auspices of the Belleville Kiwanis Club.

At 11.15 p.m. sharp the curtains will be drawn on what George J. Forban believes will prove the finest combined stage and screen presentation to be staged here this year.

"It takes pleasure in placing my personal guarantee behind this whole program," said Mr. Forban. "The show will well stand to the management of Belleville solely on its merits," concluded Manager Forban.

In bringing Canada's Favorite Four Entertainers direct from their most successful engagement at the Chateau Laurier Hotel in Ottawa, the Kiwanis Club is giving the Belleville public absolutely the cream of Canada's talent in the entertainment field. Mr. Harvey of the Harvey Club said: "That the Favorite Four Entertainers are not without honor in their own country" is evidenced by the fact that for the last three years in succession they have been secured by the Harvey Club as the music and entertainment at their annual dinner. This annual experience could not have been theirs, were it not for the fact that they have proven themselves to be musicians and entertainers of undoubted, exclusive and talent."

In "The Masquerader", the feature screen presentation the thrills and heart throbs of the famous stage melodrama are brilliantly revived by Ronald Colman in his smooth and polished Samuel Goldwyn production. The screen play of Somerset Maugham's Guy Bolton-Booth's dramatization of the Charles Cecil Thornton novel by Howard Estabrook and Moss Hart.

Playing with Colman in the chief roles are the patrician Elissa Landi and the wife of Basil Rathbone, Juliette Compton, the one as wife, and the other as mistress.

In this picture Director Richard Walleer has blended the romantic feeling and humor of which Colman is so much a master with an air of mystery and thrills. Belleville admirers of the distinguished actor and gentleman will have their last chance of seeing Colman at this gala entertainment. Colman has said good-bye to Hollywood for a long trip around the world, that will include a summer sailing cruise through the Aegean Sea.

Come and enjoy this fine entertainment tonight, and in so doing you will be helping the Kiwanis Club in their extensive program of community work to be carried out during the next few months.

The regular admission price of 35 cents will prevail for this outstanding stage and screen show and the theatre is making preparations for a packed house at the Belle tonight at 11.15 p.m.

OSHAWA DUKES LEAVE LOOP

Withdraw From Ulster Stadium Due to Finances

Oshawa, May 31— The Oshawa Baseball Club (Dukes) and the Ulster Stadium League of Toronto have agreed to disagree here last night, after lasting sparring, tremendous financial difficulty for nearly a month, the Oshawa Dukes have severed connections with the Ulster Stadium League, the result of a meeting held in Toronto last night at the conclusion of the game there.

For some weeks the Dukes have been losing heavy gobs of money. Obliged to pay the sum of $25.00 to each visiting Toronto Club, while Oshawa themselves had to pay their own expenses on all trips to Toronto, The Dukes were going "into the red" on every game.

Owing to local industrial conditions at the present time, the attendance has been very meagre, and in addition, the players, in addition to having to play after a hard day's work, have been absolutely unable to hold a regular practice since the season opened. This has marred their play and the consequent defeats have also tended to lower the attendance.

Oshawa Requested Change

After carrying along for two weeks on private contributions the Dukes finally were forced to call meetings to a halt unless the Ulster League was willing to make concessions. At a meeting last night President Hugh Brown asked for a reduction of the $25.00 guarantee to the Toronto teams, now that Oshawa has been left in Oshawa as at least once.

After considerable discussion it was decided by the Ulster officials that the Oshawa guarantee could not be changed and so Oshawa announced their intentions of withdrawing.

Oshawa's release was granted and the question of entry fee was left in abeyance, the money to be returned to the Oshawa club if satisfactory arrangements can be made to complete the league.

May Enter O.S.H.L.

It is understood that the O.S.H.L. is quite anxious to include Oshawa in their grouping. Negotiations have been started and it is fully expected that a satisfactory agreement will be reached between Oshawa and the Eastern clubs. There is a possibility that Kingston Penitentiary, last year's Ontario senior finalists may play here Saturday in the first home game of the schedule. If plans are not completed, the Dukes will be idle this Saturday but will swing into action in earnest the following week.

A meeting of the O.S.H.L. will be held over the week end to discuss the above situation.

BILL CUMMINGS WINS ROAD RACE

Finished But 27 Seconds in Front of Mauri Rose

Indianapolis, May 31—(AP)—On the sun-scorched bricks of the Indianapolis motor speedway, Wild Bill Cummings has achieved the victory he decided on 20 years ago.

As 135,000 spectators looked on, the 38-year-old driver finished past the finish line yesterday to win the annual 500 mile race as the record-breaking average of 104.863 miles an hour, and collect about $40,000 in prizes and awards.

Cummings was by just 27 second from Mauri Rose of Dayton, O., who chased him for the last 50 miles to the closest, most sensational ending in the 22 years' history of the track.

Cummings' time was 4:46.05.20, the Indianapolis Speedway Rose both smashed the former speed mark of 104.152 miles an hour set by Louis Meyer of South Gate, Calif., in 1933.

Thus did the daring veterans of the speedways defeat the plans of race officials who thought to place a clamp on the excessive speed by limiting gasoline allotments to 45 gallons for each fifty mile racing car. Not one of the 30 cars forced out of the running failed because of too heavy fuel consumption.

It was back in 1914 that "Wild Bill" playing in his mother's dooryard two miles west of the speedway, told her he was going to win that race some day.

Stewards of the race will consider today an official protest made by Leon Duray of Los Angeles, owner of the car Cummings drove. Duray contended Cummings violated rules and gained about three fourths of a lap during the period when the drivers were waved out for removal of wreckage from the course.

The smashups, three in number, were all of minor character.

AT THE BELLE

"Death Takes a Holiday" Ranks With Year's Best

Never before in the history of the American photoplay has a picture been so excellently cast as is Paramount's superb production "Death a Holiday," which opens at the Belle today.

Fredric March in the starring role makes another bid for the best acting award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences which he won for his role in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" in 1932.

Evelyn Venable, formerly leading lady for Walter Hampden, and seen lately with Will Rogers in "David Harum" is severely beautiful in the featured feminine role.

Cast is Superb

Kent Taylor, Sir Guy Standing, Katherine Alexander, Henry Travers, Kathleen Howard, Gail Patrick, Helen Westley and G. P. Huntley, Jr., complete the cast of superb actors, each of whom gives a truly outstanding performance in a play that dominates the film.

The picture was directed by Mitchell Leisen, youngest of all Paramount directors. Yet it is a real achievement, marking him and he shoulders above the best in entertainments that the picture has given thus far.

"Death Takes a Holiday," is based upon the play by Alberto Casella.

Provocative Theme

Its frankly provocative theme concerns the problem of death taking a three day leave of absence and may study life, learn why men love living and fear the eternal parting.

He comes to earth as a gay, dashing, romantic lover, enthusiastically taking part in all the pastimes and games. But nothing intrigues him.

Saves Love Till Last

He saves love till the last, until almost the end of his holiday. He finds no difficulty in meeting women who offer him love, but finds no love that satisfies his heart until his holiday is almost over. Then, in a series of dramatic circumstances, he finds an enduring love, and in the arms of a beautiful girl, learns all that is beautiful in life. But he, the immortal man, must depart, and dreads the thought of leaving behind the life he found so rapturous.

"Death Takes a Holiday" is a picture you can't afford to miss. It is one of the great productions of the screen, rich in beauty and drama. For complete enjoyment of the picture it is important to see it from the beginning, it will be presented at 2.45 at the matinee performances, and once only in the evening at 8.40 p.m.

"Jack Ahoy" Funny

Jack Hulbert is appearing on the same program in his funniest comedy, "Jack Ahoy," a screen vehicle abounding in romance, comedy, adventure and music. Jack is accompanied on his joy cruise by lovely Nancy O'Neill and Tamara Desni. An interesting Paramount Pictorial will be presented on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Dawn" Is Great Tribute To Memory of Farmous Nurse

There is so little rancour or prejudice in "Dawn" at the Capitol Theatre, that one wonders why this grave, beautiful and deeply stirring production should have stirred up so much controversy. It is easy to understand after seeing the film, the picturization of the case of Nurse Edith Cavell can be shown even in Germany and enjoy the run of a successful run that it had.

To revive the events which led to the execution of Miss Cavell, nearly 18 years after the deed of the conflict and when war hysteria is now only a dimly remembered condition of mind, is to realize that we itself was less nationalistic than any nationality. That is the keynote of the picture. Yet there is nothing in the film in the slightest way to indicate propaganda. Simple facts are dealt with in a simple manner—yet the facts are in themselves so tense, dramatic and convincing that they leave the theatre patron feeling that the world will never see another conflict.

This is the most moving production ever made. There have been screen records of Actual events which had the sincerity and the touch of consecration, which "Dawn" so distinctive, but there has never been one that produced the effect upon the audience that it seemed so real—so tragic—so intensely dramatic. It gets you. You think of it after you leave the theatre and can not forget it.

To Sybil Thorndyke goes a large part of the credit for making the picture what it is. Her fine personality is something to remember. There is nothing obvious or theatrical about her playing. At first you may think it a little strained, almost awkward. Later that very awkwardness, the angular gestures, prim schoolroom manners, heighten the dramatic effect of the events through which the heroine is quietly and surely went her tragic way. Then too one must remember that Miss Thorndyke knew Miss Cavell. She had studied her life and is drawing a living picture of the nurse she loved so well. The character she depicts is not one of imagination: but a person with whom the actress has actually associated. The audience feels this before the film is finished.

The most pleasing thing about the production is the lack of mawkish sentiment.

"Dawn" will make a deep impression upon you, and the figure of its star as Nurse Cavell will remain for a long time in your memory. If you want to see a truly great picture, a specimen of the best in dramatic art, a genuine screen classic and one worth being then by all means attend a showing of "Dawn."

"Memories of Conflict," a short review of battle scenes and U-boat activities will precede this remarkable feature attraction. Two comedies plus cartoon and incomparable Capitol News Reel completes a program that has no equal for worth-while entertainment.

Wooler, May 26—On Wednesday evening, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. A reading on "Friendship" was given by Helen Tuckabury. A chapter out of the book "Three Men in a Boat" was read by Marjorie Gooding. Vocal duet by Bertha Brag and Vera Counts. Miss Meyers played for more community singing.

The presentation from the immediate neighborhood of a steamer rug and silk lingerie, with the following address:

Wooler, Ont., May 23, 1934.

Dear Gwendoline:

It has been said "he who has a thousand friends has not a friend to spare." We have not gathered by the thousand tonight but we have come in numbers and we trust that the memory of each link here represented in the chain of friendship will bring you happy recollections in the days that lie before.

Your genial manner and integrity have endeared you to us all and we your neighbors and friends feel we could not let you leave our midst without spending a social evening in your home. We will certainly miss you, but we trust that after an extended visit with your friends across the sea, the "Love of the Maple" will again be your home, and if perchance, some worth swain—with the exact number should cross your path, we will gladly welcome him to our shores and would consider the establishment of a home in our neighborhood an ideal ending to this visit.

Kindly accept these small gifts not for any intrinsic value, but as a slight token of the esteem in which you are held in this community. We trust they may be of service, and often remind you of the friends here, who will be frequently thinking of you.

We wish you a pleasant voyage, a happy time in the old land and Godspeed. In closing we say

"We pray the prayer of the Eastern sea,
May the peace of Allah abide with you;
Wherever you stay, wherever you go,
May the beautiful palms of Allah wave
Through days of labor, and nights of rest
The love of good Allah make you blest;
So we touch our hearts as the Easterners do
May the peace of Allah abide with you."

Signed on behalf of you neighbors and friends: Daisy E. Gooding, Lilian B. McMasters, Bertha M. Lawson and Lillian E. Terrill.

All joined in singing for "She is a Jolly Good Fellow."

Casey, Williams Halt Ponies Nationals Gaining 4-4 Tie in Opening Game at Kingston Game Called in Ninth as Darkness Descended on Field

H. SMITH HOMERS

Nats Outhit And Outfielded Ponies But One Decision Hurt

Interspersed with timely hitting and excellent pitching on the part of Carl Casey and Jack "Chief" Williams, the Belleville Nationals played the league champion Kingston Ponies to a 4 to 4 tie at Kingston, last evening, the game having to be called on account of darkness by the officials at the end of the ninth innings.

For the better part of the pastime, the Nationals held sway and led the hard-hitting Ponies on their own diamond only to have a doubtful decision at first base turn assured local victory into a tie game in the sixth innings, after Carl Casey had literally lashed the reputable Pony hitters to the mast but eventually gave way to Jack Williams, who ably filled the breach and stemmed the tide of battle. The Nationals completely out-played the Ponies in every department, out-hitting and out-fielding the league champions throughout. The play that turned the tide of battle, when the Nationals were leading the Ponies 4 to 3 and were coasting along to assured victory, came when Umpire Walsh, being out of position to call the play, ruled Jamieson safe at first base after Roy Smith, local initial sacker, had raced to the bag with the ball in his possession to make the put out.

Manager Mills elected Carl Casey, local speed ball artist, to assume the pitching duties and for six long innings, Casey literally stood up the hard-hitting Ponies only to be relieved by Jack Williams in the latter part of the sixth, who pitched a perfect relief game and blanked the homesters from then onward. The Ponies started their ace hurler, "Yammy" Jamieson, who yielded 14 big hits, but was afforded uncanny support by his fielders and luckily eked out a split decision with the united efforts of Casey and Williams, both of whom out-pitched and out-hurled the Pony moundsman. Jamieson was nicked for 14 safe blows, while the best the Kingston hitters could do against the efforts of Casey and Williams was to collect seven safe bingles. Casey limiting them to three safeties in the first five innings. At no time were the Nationals headed, they taking the lead in the initial frame, never to relinquish their advantage. Superb fielding by Vaughan Jack, Peeney Mills and Sonny Green featured for the locals while Stone, Scutton and Smith fielded well for the winners.

The Play

The Nationals opened on the offensive and scored in the initial frame, when Kerr was safe on a fielder's choice, went to third on Jack's single and scored on Mills' fly out to centre. The next frame the Nats. scored again after Green singled, went to second on a passed ball and scampered home on Casey's well placed single. The Nationals went well to the fore in the fourth, when Smith walked, Scarlett singled and both scored on Casey's slashing double to deep right centre. Casey was not only hurling a superb game, but had hit in the pinches all day. His efforts were roundly applauded by the crowd, when replaced by Williams in the sixth.

The Ponies had only garnered but one lone hit until the fourth when Foxton was safe, when Green bobbled his grounder. After working Casey for the count of three and two, H. Smith slapped the cripple for a home run, when he hit to deep centre field, over Weir's head. In the sixth, H. Smith opened with a single for Kingston, the next two hitters fouled to Mills, but Quinn walked and Boyd singled, scoring Smith. Williams then replaced Casey and Jamieson hit to Smith, who beat the hitter to the bag on a low roller, but Umpire Walsh ruled the runner safe and Quinn scored tying the score four all. From hence onward Williams literally carried the tide of battle as he struck out the next batter and retired the sides repeatedly in all subsequent innings.

Yesterday's tie game will not be counted in the league standing, but if the result has a final bearing on the ultimate result of the league the game will necessarily have to be played over again. The Nationals now journey to Peterboro on Saturday before taking on the Ponies at Belleville next Wednesday.

CANADA DRYS WIN OPENER

Defeat Grills' Garage in First Game of Schedule 10-6

Timely hitting gave the newly acquired Canada Dry softball team the season's initial win in the Belleville senior men's softball league when they defeated the Grills' Garage nine by the score of 10 to 6 at Central Park last evening. The game marked the opening of the official men's softball season and was suitably marked by the usual ceremonies, that preceded such games, when the league officials assumed the spotlight and officially declared the softball season open.

Extra base hitting enabled the ex-Bearcat outfit, now known as the Canada Dry softballers, to assume an early lead and add to their increasing number of runs. Jordan opened the pastime by cuffing the first ball pitched high and far for a home run. Henn also hit for the circuit as did C. Tuttle. All of the four bag clouters happened to be lined up on the same club, the Canada Dry team, thus assuring them of a clean cut victory. Johnnie Bawden was on the hilltop for the "Drys" while Fisher and Clarke split the pitching duties of the Grills' outfit. Besides the home run hitters J. Ethier hit for three bases while Caddick and Latchford were the only consistent hitters for the losing nine.

The line-ups:

Grills—Barriage, Caddick, Reid, Knott, Boyle, Latchford, Kiser, Cornell, M. Latchford, Fisher and Clarke.

Canada Dry—Jordan, F. Tuttle, Henn, Hanna, J. Ethier, G. Ethier, Bawden, C. Tuttle and J. Bawden.

Umpires—Ethier and Bagnett.

Victorias Score 10-0 Win Over Fast Brighton Squad

"Bud" Wilkins Hurls Mid Season Ball and Ably Supported by Team

With an avalanche of runs the Belleville Victorias downed the Brighton intermediates in the opening game of the Bay of Quinte League at Brighton yesterday by the score of 10 to 0 when the local intermediates pounded the offerings of two Brighton hurlers profusely. While the local Vics were downing the Brighton entry the Gibbard Athletics of Napanee defeated the champion Picton team, at Picton, by the score of 10 to 6 with Geo. Blazetich, hurling for the Napanee crew and Ron Church pitching for the defeated Picton outfit.

Coach Chummy Gerow presented a rejuvenated line-up, when the local Vics took to the field at Brighton and interspersed with timely hitting and mid summer pitching by "Bud" Wilkins the local intermediate aggregation swept the homesters at Brighton before them. Wilkins, hurling his first game of the season let the homesters down with seven safe hits, none being of the extra base nature. The Victorias literally had a field day insofar as hitting was concerned with Lionel Blaker, their hard hitting first baseman, leading the parade with a circuit blow and a timely double to his credit. Besides pitching superb and masterful baseball, Wilkins helped his cause with a mighty triple in the eighth and a single that entered into the scoring. The return to form of Chuck Barriage, ex-National infielder, was forcibly marked, when the third sacker hit for two timely singles and fielded his position in big league manner.

The heavy barrage of hits laid down by the Vics gave Campbell the Brighton hurler, little to evade while his successor Purdy, fared no better, being hit at a will by the local swatsmiths. McKinnon and Lindsay were the only Brighton hitters to connect with any degree of consistency. Snappy infield work on the part of the Vics featured the pastime, that was witnessed by the largest crowd of baseball fans, that has attended a ball game in Brighton in some time. Ability to hit in the pinches won the day for the Victorias, who now share the top rung of the Bay of Quinte League ladder with the Napanee Gibbards.

238,000 FANS VIEW GAMES ON HOLIDAY

70,000 Watch Yanks and Senators Divide Double Bill

TIGERS WIN 2

Cards Go Further in Front by Defeating Reds Twice

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The season's biggest turnout of fans had made the first of the holidays which fall within the baseball season a pleasant memory to Major League magnates today although it might rankle a bit in the minds of the players of five clubs, which failed to win a game.

In all about 238,000 fans filled the stands in eight cities, bettering considerably the opening day turnout of 185,000. The largest throng of the day, 70,000 gathered at the Yankee Stadium to see New York and Washington divide a pair of brilliantly played games. Brooklyn made the next best showing, setting an Ebbets Field attendance record of 12,000 for the Dodger-Giant bill, which brought two defeats for the home club.

At New York Earl Whitehill held the Yankees hitless for 8 1-3 innings, then was removed after giving one New York hit in Washington's 1-0 triumph. The Yanks evened the count and remained close behind Cleveland's league leaers by taking the second game 5-4 in 11 innings, although held to five blows

Cleveland also was held to an even break, dropping the 12-inning opener to Chicago 8-7 despite Sammy Hale's two homers, then winning the second contest 5-4, when Hal Trosky hit three homers in a row.

Detroit's third place Tigers were the only American Leaguers to win two games, beating St. Louis Browns 7-6 and 5-4, and they had to go 10 innings to capture the second game, when Marvin Owen drove in the winning tally with a single.

Philadelphia and Boston split a morning and afternoon programme. The A's took a 7-3 decision in an early encounter marked by the first appearance of Boston's brother battery of Ferrell and the Red Sox came back with a 2-1 triumph behind dusty Rhodes' five hit flinging.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Three of the four teams involved in the National League battle swept twin bills while the fourth, Pittsburgh, lost twice and skidded down to fourth place. The Chicago Cubs accounted for the Pirates' downfall by scores of 7-2 and 5-4. Chuck Klein's 13th homer helped win the opener, while the second game went 11 innings before Larry French walked in the odd run.

The league-leading St. Louis Cardinals took two easy victories from the last-place Cincinnati Reds 9-6 and 9-2, piling up 29 hits in the two games, New York Giants captured second place from Pittsburgh by walloping Brooklyn 5-2 and 8-6 and had additional cause for celebration, when Lefty Watson Clark pitched his first full game in the opener.

Boston Braves also won two games, beating the Phillies 10-4 and 5-1 but suffered a setback in the opener when Ed Brandt, star southpaw, pulled a muscle in his pitching arm and had to retire in the third inning.

Recreation Alleys

A new team was crowned champions at the Recreation Alleys last night, when the Marvelubes, winners of the first half of the senior men's league won all four points from Henry Salisbury's Rovers; winners of the second half of the Senior League.

Benny Stewart of the Championship Marvelubes took the high honors with a three string of 264-144-227—635, while Cecil Ling of the Rovers, rolled 583

Mr. H. Salisbury presented the cup to the Marvelubes and expressed congratulations on behalf of his team. Ab Boynton, genial manager of the Marvelubes congratulated the Rovers on their sportsmanship manner and wished the whole league as good a season next year as they have enjoyed this league.

"FARM HANDS" HELP ALBANY

Take Both Ends of Doubleheader From Baltimore

(By Associated Press)

Except in the matter of gate receipts, where fine weather aided in making the turnstiles click rapidly, only one out of eight International League Clubs was able to reap much benefit from the Memorial Day doubleheaders.

Albany Senators took both games of their bargain bill with Baltimore for a spurt which sent them up from, seventh place to fifth in the standing. Behind the fine hurling of a couple of Boston Braves "farm hands", Bob Brown and Dick Barrett, they defeated the Orioles 6-3 and 4-1. Brown, making his first start as a Senator, gave nine walks but only seven hits to get the better of an argument with Pete Appleton. Barrett followed with a five-hit hurling job against Cliff Melton.

All the other bills were divided leaving the race for the top unchanged. Rochester's League leaders took the second game from Toronto Leafs 6-3 behind John Berly's three-hit flinging after Toronto had slugged out six runs in the first inning and won the opener 9-8.

With 14,000, the day's biggest crowd, looking on, Montreal and Buffalo featured home runs in a pair of slug-fests. Jimmy Ripple socked two as the Royals won the first game 9-6. Greg Mulleavy and Ollie Tucker contributed circuit swats to Buffalo's 4-3 triumph in the second then Frank McGowan singled in the winning run.

Newark's second place holders could get no better than an even break with the comparatively lowly Syracuse Chiefs. After smacking out a 9-1 triumph behind Walter Brown, one of their pitching aces, the Bears "blew" the second game 5-4 as errors cost Floyd Newkirk a chance to ring up his seventh straight mound victory in a duel with big Tim McKeithan.

"Liars may figure, but figures cannot lie". Therein lies the tale of yesterday's baseball game in Kingston. The Nationals out-played the champion Ponies in every department; they out-hit them, outfielded them and out-played them all afternoon, but when the final reckoning came the game was declared a tie, four all. Figuratively speaking the Nationals won a decisive battle; the box score proves beyond a shadow of doubt, that the locals were the better team, but, sometimes figures are confusing and yesterday the Nationals were on top throughout, but were forced to accept a tie score, when the officials in charge called the game at the end of nine full innings on account of oncoming darkness.

There were a lot of angles to yesterday's ball game. First, the locals were undoubtedly the better team and displayed their superiority and would have won, but for a single decision on the bases. We are not condemning Umpire Walsh for his decision on Jamieson in the sixth innings as we feel the official called the play as he saw it, but as Umpire Bill Klem says: "don't call 'em as you see 'em, call 'em as they are", and Umpire Walsh was undoubtedly in the wrong position to see Roy Smith beat Jamieson to the bag in the sixth innings and that sole decision turned a local victory into a hard fought tie game. Jamieson was out by a full step, but Green, Smith and Jamieson all arriving at the bag simultaneously, Umpire Walsh might have became confused. At any rate the locals figure—"that play lost 'em a perfectly good ball game."

As in years past the Nationals experienced difficulties immediately upon arrival in the Limestone City. First of all they were denied admission into the Y.M.C.A. where they had for years past dressed and prepared for the coming game. After a short conference Ernie Rowsome and Chas. Meagher escorted the boys to the LaSalle Hotel, where they were received more than royally. The game seemed in the well-known bag at this point as the St. Thomas "Tom Cats" put up at this self-same hostel last fall, but alas that old bone of contention, "Yammy" Jamieson, who hurled for the Ponies, again entered into the picture. In fairness to Jamieson it might be said, that his reign of aloofness is all over insofar as the Nationals are concerned, yesterday proved that, when the locals garnered 14 big juicy hits from his deliveries. Exit Mr. Jamieson.

For nearly six innings Carl Casey pitched about the best ball game that has been seen in Kingston since that memorable day, that Vaughan, of St Thomas, went to work. Casey was much too good for the Pony hitters as he interspersed his curve with a fire ball, that let the Kingston hitters down with four small hits in five innings. Casey was on the well known spot of three balls and two strikes, when he unfortunately grooved one for Hewitt Smith, and when any hurler throws 'em down the alley for Hewitt, well it's "over the fence and far away", and that's exactly what the fiery third baseman of the Ponies did. On the other hand the locals were collecting a multitude of good solid base blows. Utronki had two, Jack had three for four, Sonny collected three in five times at bat and Scarlett smacked two nice one with Carl Casey, while hurling good ball, covered himself with glory with a timely single and a double, that all but seemed to put the game on ice. The relief pitching of Jack Williams was undoubtedly the feature of the pastime. After the doubtful decision at first on Jamieson, Williams took no chances and retired the side, with one exception, in order from then until the end of the game.

The Nationals are still up on top of the C.O.B.L. heap a tie with the Ponies, one win and a tie each. On Saturday the locals travel to Peterboro, where they meet the tough Peterboro nine and if we hear right, the Pony players tell us they were "lucky" to win last Saturday, but next Saturday is another day and regardless as to the outcome, the Kingston at Belleville game next Wednesday will definitely decide the leadership of the C.O.B.L.

The Bay of Quinte intermediate loop pried off the 1934 lid yesterday, when the local Victorias applied the white-wash brush to the Brighton entry, at Brighton, while Ernie Gibbard's charges took the league champion Picton club into camp by a 10 to 6 score. The score at Brighton was 10 to 0, by the way. Manager Fanning has had little chance to garner a winning outfit together, but yesterday's showing only goes to prove that there are plenty of up-and-coming ball players in this community. When a pitcher can step in a foreign community and blank the home team, he must have something, that's what "Bud" Wilkins did in his first league game of the season, when he shutout Brighton yesterday. It must be granted that the Vics hit well behind him, all of which goes to prove that good hitting and good pitching will win any man's ball game. Lionel Blaker and Chuck Barriage were two of the local big hitters yesterday. Barriage has to but continue his hitting and he will be back with the Nationals soon.

Frank Domenico's Canada Dry softball team auspiciously opened the O.A.S.A. season last night, when they downed Grills' by the score of 10 to 6. Mr. Domenico apparently made no mistake when he took over the Bearcats and dubbed them "Canada Drys". Two more games will be played tonight, one at College Field and the other at Central Park. Softball is here to stay they say.

Greatest of All Garden Delicacies

Corn on the cob, fresh from the home garden! Here is a chapter on table luxuries all by itself. No other vegetable, perhaps inspires such language of approval as a steaming platter of this sweetest of garden edibles. It is as universally liked as roast beef in old England; as much of a summer tradition as bright flowers, shaded elm trees.

But, only the home gardener and those of his favored friends, may partake of this festival fruit, for only when it is freshly taken from the stalks does it have the flavor and sweetness which account for its popularity. When left even a short length of time, corn will lose much of its savor, and when left a day or two on the market—an unavoidable thing, especially in the large cities—tastes like a different product altogether, a chemical change taking place which turns the sugar into starch.

Corn will grow on almost any type of soil, but it is naturally a rich soil crop. Consequently, the richer the soil, the better the produce, and it is a good idea to add liberal quantities of fertilizer before planting and after. Sow five or six seeds to the foot in the row and make the patch a square one, with rows about 1 foot apart, so that pollination will be assisted. The stalks may be thinned later to 8 to 12 inches apart in the rows. After a good growth has begun, hilling will assist the auxiliary roots that start above the surface of the soil at the lower points which nature has provided for the anchoring of the plant. Corn is particularly responsive to good cultivation, and during warm weather with adequate moisture, you can almost see it rise.

Golden Bantam seems to be the standard of sweet corn quality and with good reason, for it is the earliest, and one of the largest producers in spite of its small ears. Plant early and late corn this year; what you cannot eat you can easily sell to the neighbors or can for next winter.

"THESE WOMEN"

By Vernie Connelly

Evelyn's personality intrigued him, filled most of his thoughts. He supposed he must be in love with her. This trip would tell, and would be a good thing for Ada's son, if no other. He had never before felt any special need for marriage. But, obviously, she was a pretty rare type these days.

He stopped the car and lit a cigarette, musing for a few moments. He had just a notion to go back and propose. They could take another boat and miss Moffit in London. He looked at his watch. It was two o'clock and too late, of course, to go back now.

In the meantime, Evelyn had called down. The last card had not yet been played. If she were very wise, he might hurry back to her, and her investment would not have been in vain. She would have money enough for a small apartment in town this winter if she worked. She was desperately in love with Webb, otherwise she might have considered it worth while to turn elsewhere.

Saturday morning she got on the bridge, next sailing date, along with a creamy wool sports suit, which is the wicked for a girl to wear in public when she knew it dropped the leading shoe. Webb complained. "And especially since I am sailing far," he said. "Do I have to wait until after honolulu to kiss you?"

"What do you think?" she asked, looking about the restaurant.

"Just what I've thought ever since I went to tea down there at Ada's house. Where else is there to go for food?" They had dawdled for half an hour over consommé.

"It would positively choke me to death. Why don't you say so before? Come on, we'll go down to the boat and talk until the tugs arrive."

Evelyn trembled with anticipation. His eyes spoke love to her. The whole manner indicated that he thought he was in love.

They took a cab to the pier, and went to Webb's quarters at once. He and Moffit each had a bedroom, with a sitting room between. The latter was a confusion of packages and masses of flowers.

"For the love of Mohammed! You'd think some one was getting married! I wonder who sent all the flowers? Don't tell me you are one of the guilty parties, young lady, or I'll take you on the top deck and throw you overboard."

"Don't you like flowers?" She moved about, reading the cards: "Mrs. Weatherby-Jones, Cordelia Maxwell, Hedda Solomon, Mrs. Burke Sylvester."

"Oh, that bunch!" laughed Webb. "I don't believe we'd all dared to kiss being alone together! I wish they were coming along. Would you like it?"

"Dreadful. But, I've got to clean up the house pretty soon now—and I'll be back in three months."

Webb opened a box of candy. In doing so, he noticed for the first time a portable phonograph on the piano table. "Now this is what I call a gift" he cried. "Look, it's a peach. I'll bet Moffit sent it. He knows I'm nuts about music.... I wonder where the card is."

"Maybe some of these gifts are for Mr. Moffit himself," Evelyn suggested.

"I haven't found any that are, but I'm willing. I don't want anything right now, just Evelyn. Say, what do you suppose became of the card with this machine—I'd like to know."

Evelyn had taken an envelope from the machine. "Try this," she said.

"Well, that's smooth! Say, you've no idea how I appreciate it. But you shouldn't have spent all that money on me.... I oughtn't to let you...."

"Why not? Haven't I a right to give a friend a parting gift? Something that will make him happy and remind him of the giver?"

"Look here," he exclaimed, his hands resting in a tight grip on her shoulders. "I need nothing to no one to remind me of you. And I want to tell you this—it's hardest thing I've ever done—going away and leaving you, here on the point of kicking the whole thing to pieces a dozen times and refusing to go. You see, Evelyn, I mean you are a pretty swell girl...."

There was a loud thumping on the door. "Damn! How can I kiss you with all those girls getting and we'll send off by carriers? I've got to talk with you before this boat shoves off."

The afternoon was mellow with anticipation for Evelyn. She had no doubt that Webb meant to propose. They would slip off to some secluded spot, somewhere, they'd announce their engagement to the world, and the press have the news before he left. Then she would have happy days of preparation until his return.

It was a five o'clock sailing. By three, the cabins were packed. Oliver Morfit, head of Morfit, Lord Swenson, was host. He found time to talk with Evelyn, and appeared to like her. He urged champagnine on her, but insisted that she barely tasted it. He wondered about her and Webb. Maybe would hold him down; keep success from going to his head.

Webb was in an expansive mood. He was playing his part very much, and joined heartily in the "Good Fellow." For He's a Jolly Good Fellow." Everybody liked Webb.

After a very long while, it seemed he came back to Evelyn, "In this where you're busy thinking! And me sending a searchlight to find you! ... I'm sorry, but I've been a fool. Come and meet some of these folks...."

"It's no hot Webb. Let's go on deck a minute."

"That's exactly what I want to do. Now you stay right here and I'll be back directly. Okay sweetheart?"

Evelyn began to feel ill. Webb did not come back. Then, suddenly, it seemed it was time to go ashore. A friend of his dodge his legal to clear the suite.

She hurried into the adjoining room, then back, searching for Webb. She was a pretty swell girl, at least. He was sitting on the bed in Moffit's room talking with a strange girl, a champagne glass in his hand nearly full, with which he gesticulated.

Blindly, Evelyn turned and fled. Her one thought was of getting towards every exit. Then some one hailed a taxi for her, for she was a stairway, and was lost. Down the gangplank, hurrying through to outcome shed.

Avoiding the elevator, she took the stairs stumbled and would have fallen, if a man had not caught her and set her on her feet again. "Did the little boy just wake up? Ugh!"

Webb nearly a thank you, she is in her seat, hurriedly. rushed on.

"Pennsylvania Station," she directed the cab driver, and collapsed in one of the walls for traffic lights, the driver's sympathy was aroused by this unusual display of grief.

"Is there somethin' I could do for you, Miss?" he asked. "I could take you somewhere's if you would get a drink to steady you a mite...."

"Yes, you can do something," she replied. "Drive into a lamppost and be sure it's a grand smash!"

CHAPTER TWO

"I wouldn't have had that happen for the world!" Webb said. "Evelyn's a grand girl. As a matter of fact, I'm sunk over her," he assured Morfit seriously.

"Well, that's not going to do you any good on this trip, old man. Suppose you did succeed for dinner. I'm miles ahead of you."

"What do you mean, Ollie? Why did she go without saying goodbye? As soon as I realized folks were leaving I tried to find her, but she was gone."

It's hard to tell what's in a girl's mind. Anyhow, forget it. We're at the captain's table, and I've booked you up pretty high. Try to make good."

"Like a champ. Now I won't be able to think of a bloomin' thing all the way over. But, Ollie, you're the Dog my regrets and tell him I'm not hungry."

He sauntered into the sitting room. Moffit died his tie with precised ease and picked up the card, wondering as to the best way to manage this lovesick young ass he'd brought along with him. He swore profusely as the strains of "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" came from the adjoining room. This was one of the records Evelyn had so gallefully chosen for the little phonograph she was to the ship. Moffit strode across the room.

"Here, snap out of it, Webb! You can't grab the party the first night out. You can send Evelyn flowers and a sage saying that you had to have a conference with Rosenthal and the Scandinavian rights to your book, and when you tried to find her she was gone."

"That's an idea. Do you think it will go over?"

"Yes, she won't know the difference. If she does, she'll think it's a joke. I'll see you forgive me if you say it was business that kept you from them."

"Well, call Ada. Get me off my mind!"

While Webb dressed, Moffit went to look at the passenger list. He wanted to see if, by chance, there was some attractive young woman aboard who might be counted on to divert Webb and banish the inaccessible Evelyn from his thoughts.

He smiled with satisfaction as he came across the name of Miss Muriel Manners. This was better than he had hoped for—Muriel was undeniably a diverting young woman.... She had played the part lead in "Moon Girl" a couple of seasons ago. As was characteristic of her, she left town a time when her understudy was ill to elope with Jack Rosen, a young millionaire of Manhattan. She had been recalled after the ceremony and brought back in time to open the show only an hour late. That was Muriel.

So it was by no means chance that placed her at Morfit's right hand that night at dinner. And she would have done her best to storm his aloofness with her big dark eyes and witting speech, without the added incentive of being able to do Moffit a favor. She sailed into the dining salon, her sleek dark head carried arrestingly high, and was clever enough not to appear too interested in the meticulously young man. But none of her well-known tricks worked. And her vivaciousness, enhanced with Evelyn's quiet charm and beauty, annoyed Webb.

Webb was a great disappointment on the voyage. It was his first crossing, but he showed little interest in anything. If Moffit failed to locate him in the swimming pool, or at the bar, he would be practically certain of finding him, she by hand, parked beside the Hon. gust, Evelyn had given him.

"You've been practically all you appeal," Moffit chided Muriel when he came across her on the sun deck one morning.

"Do you think so?" she drawled, rolling big eyes in denial. "Just to give me a human being to work on, mister. I always did hear that writers were queer. Who she 'h this Evelyn, anyhow?"

"Oh, just a girl. Not half pretty as you. Keep on trying. I bound to fall sooner or later. I wanted to get him started before I reach London. He's practice worthless the way he is now. out! Well, Sadly! And later, you did darling. I've heard tales from Mother. Now, Mother, I'm sure you've gotten over a wooden Indian I resented in my youth, and I'm sure you and he can downright easy company with Matilda."

"Well, as you say, this is our last day. Isn't it your experience that even the heaviest cases show spots of life on the third day?"

"Certainly. It never takes me longer than that. But he's got me stopped, mush as I'd like to help you out, Matilda. I've got to get ready for that show you backed."

"There was nothing—a little fun at several of the best parties in London—work or play?"

"I'm going to be a tryout."

"Let us know, if you open. We'll do a few of the best tables, and you'll be sure of a full house."

"It's not that sort of show, Darryll is one of us when the curtain goes up."

"Oh, private performance——"

"Cut. Ever hear of Sir Cecil Gray? He's another hard luck case—well! He busted my crush on me."

"Going to marry him?"

"What's the use. I certainly did not come to New York without support."

"Here's Webb. Do your stuff."

"Is this blustering ship going somewhere? Why, he asked, is it that floorscrubbing around in the Atlantic intrigues the natives more than sense to me we're all day, overdue."

His stretched thoughts halted by a chair and stared out to sea, spelling in disgust at the dastardly work of her wiles.

"It simply can't be the same," mused Muriel, humping her shoulders disdainfully. "Webb and Webb and Matilda. Mistaken identity, I'm sure. Don't tell me that I ever really cared. I've learned much at least about him," flipping cigarette ashes from the bosom of her dress.

"Funny how absolutely flat chorus humor becomes on the boats," he said. Webb, addressing the wave. "Oh, for my lost love." Partaking Muriel got up and set a small foot on his chair, with eyes for the ocean.

Webb nudged her ankle. "Careful, my sharp-tongued lass. How long are you going to dance you can do on one foot."

"Oh, I'm sorry, Mr. Webb. I'm quite unaware of my conduct. Matilda has let me go." But Matilda did not come to her assistance. He listened to the rail, and waved out to sea.

With a quick hug, Muriel threw herself on Webb. To save them both from disaster he caught her with both arms about her. In the embrace of each rocked, her hips brushed his, and clung for a moment. A thrill swept between them. He pushed her aside, stood up, and looked at her as he had you done before. His eyes indicating her body, parted.

"Have a good look" she said through gritted teeth. "Did the thing hop just below my hip? Ugh!"

Webb waited away.

The morning of the fourth day, Webb stopped playing the phonograph. Matilda had told him that it left satisfaction. The machine was packed and stored. And the present of a broken record, when filled together, revealed the line, "Just Call You Sweetheart" would be heard no more on that voyage.

"Have you heard from Evelyn?" Matilda asked that afternoon.

"No. I've sent her four messages and if I've had one from her at the time we head I'm absolutely through. I've apologized in every way I know, and—it's up to her enough to accept my explanations. Why it's the first time I've been—Maybe she isn't at home."

Webb considered this. "Yes she is some girls were coming to dinner last night we left."

The morning they docked at Southampton Webb was in a black mood. He had not heard from Evelyn. Matilda had accepted him to be called at the prospect of being bored. Instead of a couple of hours, but he remained indifferent. They had reserved seats at a hotel which patronized by Americans. A representative of the hotel met them and took their names and their passages. The customs was a brief formality as they had nothing that any consideration.

CHAPTER THREE

For the first week in London Webb's mental condition did not improve. In fact, he was so engrossed, so obsessed, about Evelyn he made a very favorable impression on Sir Reuben Sassoon, for Webb was not a man of feminine manners. On the contrary, he was a typical college professor, with marks of caution.

Moffit was delighted. He thought the Evelyn affair was settled. Webb was cured. This observation was strengthened by that time Webb had devoted to Lady Alicia Herbert who was a good friend of Evelyn's. In fact, Evelyn, for the week-end.

But on their return to London, the whole situation was changed as with a wand. Webb had a letter from Evelyn. It was a clever letter, because it was frank. She explained that she had seen him sitting on the rail talking with a girl. Then, when his windows came with the flowers, she was overcome with remorse and deeply wounded. But the saddest note of his acknowledgment was that in her to realize how the whole thing had come about. She had met a girl with whom she knew she had taken the blame for their misunderstanding.

Webb met Moffit for lunch. He was beaming so sympathetic as to cause comment.

"Has the world turned on the sunshine for you?" he asked.

"Listen, Moff. I got a letter from Evelyn. I know Jack Webb's type. She saw me getting with a girl—I don't know her name—and I guess she used to go to Wardrobes when I was there. We've had talking over old times. Anyhow, Evelyn watched out after she got back and she felt like drowning herself. Say, it's your kind of thinking for her. That dumb excuse."

"You mean I to know you'd been cheating?"

"You mean have seen me. Boy, do I feel like one man! And I'm the same time I feel like a dog. It's been thinking, on of dark, out of mind, with Evelyn, when she didn't know I was in London. She is the one she couldn't possibly explain, so I got to see her. Before I had a chance or waiting. She was down to the ship herself and handed the letter."

"She stood hatted a couple of days. Then I remembered thinking of Evelyn and I'm sure I was thinking of her with the editor of a great London daily that things came to a climax. Webb was low, and drank to lift his spirits. He succeeded so well that he left the impression with the English editor of being a very entertaining man, who had blundered into the writing game and would probably go on the staff of some London daily.

Moffit did not space him, later when Webb was sober. "Why don't you stay drinking?" he demanded of him. "Be a man, for God's sake, a man about it."

Webb stood up, his tall figure towering over the publisher in his chair. "I am going to quit—what do you know about that? And do you know why? I'll tell you why—I'm going to write it down!"

"I'll try to remember to do so," Moffit grinned. "I'll send for Evelyn."

Moffit digested this. It was an emotional crisis, and in his experience him, settle him down so that he would be in an exciting place of work.

"I'll send for," he agreed. "Suppose you do send for Evelyn. Sit down there at the desk, and write a proposal in your best manner. I'll edit it."

"Nothing doing! A letter's too slow. I'll cable. Call down and find out about sailing from New York, will you?"

"What day do you want?"

"Right away!"

"That will be done. You have to give her five or six days at the minimum. So, consult of her passport and all the details she'll have to attend to."

"All right, have it your way." He reached over a message.

"The Aquitania, Saturday night at midnight," Moffit announced. "She's lucky, she can make that. And you'll be lucky if she'll have you. Otherwise you haven't given that any consideration."
